Karma(Vigilante Deku)

by Cyan_Blue

Summary

Since the arrival of All Might crime rates have decreased significantly in Japan, but there's still one problem hero's are unable to do anything about. Corruption in the government has led to the increase of child trafficking, so much so that any child is lucky to not have been kidnapped by the age of 6.

What hero's are unable to do though is easily done by the vigilante Karma, a hero to the people. Unbound by the law he can freely try to put an end to this rein of terror, that is if he doesn't get caught.

Notes

This fic is also on Wattpad, it has the same name.

The boy in the corner: Backstory part 1

In the corner of the room sat a boy, his knees raised to his chest as he hugged them trying to look as small as possible. If he said nothing they wouldn't see him right, they'd just skip over him, forget about him. What if he said something, what if he screamed at the top of his lungs, would someone come for him, would someone help him and the rest of the children who were sat there in fear, shaking.

Saying something would be stupid he thought, they had warned them not to make any noise. Should he have taken the chance though, should he have risked getting noticed, getting beaten, becoming the first to get sold off. He was conflicted, he knew that there was only a slight chance of someone coming to help him compared to the chance of only getting himself in trouble but his mother had always told him that good things happen to the ones who behave and bad things happen to the ones who didn't. Karma is what she had called it. He's behaved all his life though, always doing what he was told, never making a fuss yet nothing good had ever happened to him. Was he not well behaved enough or was his mother lying, maybe there was no such thing as karma.

Tears made their way down his face but he didn't try to stop them. He was cold and scared and even if he was surrounded by dozens of other children in the same predicament he still felt alone. He missed his mum, the only thing was he wasn't sure if she missed him back.

He tried to erase those thoughts from his head failing miserably. Soon enough it was dark outside, he could tell from the tiny streak of moonlight coming from the barred window which was way to high to even see through. He wasn't sure how long exactly he'd been stuck in the warehouse for, a couple hours, maybe eight, it didn't matter though. The only thing that mattered now was getting out before he was sold to who knows where. Knowing he couldn't make a plan in the current state he was in he closed his eyes and let the rhythm of his tears hitting the floor slowly lull him to sleep.

He was awoken to the screaming of a little girl. He opened his eyes, the sleep in them immediately disappearing as he witnessed the girl beside him getting dragged away.

She was way smaller than the man taking her but she was putting up a good fight regardless, wriggling and squirming but there was only so much a kid could do when they were only being fed the bare minimum and couldn't use their quirks. Eventually the girl used up most of her energy and the man seeing his chance hit her across the head instantly knocking her out.

Nobody said a word, too afraid of being put in that same position. The girl was dragged away by her hair leaving a trail of blood as she went. Everyone was distressed and the smell of iron only made it worse as one kid started to gag and soon enough everyone was either crying or shaking in fear of the future to come.

It took a while for the crying to die down, it didn't really stop until one of the men was forced to shoot a bullet into the roof immediately shutting everyone up.

And that's how life went on for a while, the repeated cycle of being fed the bare minimum trapped in this warehouse, one person being dragged away in the middle of the night when we we were all sleeping. It was terrifying, waking up to see one person who was there before suddenly gone, and you never knew if that person was going to be you next. Every night we all prayed hoping that we'll wake up in the same state we went to sleep in, but we all knew that would be us eventually. We had all already given up all hope of being rescued.

A room that used to be filled with dozens of children is now filled with just a few with no choice but to wait for the day they're dragged away. The boy in the corner of the room is getting worried now, he knows there's not much time left before that's him. He hadn't been able to form a plan yet, how could he when they were always trapped in the room with several men always standing outside to watch over them. Even when they wanted to go to the bathroom they were escorted by 3 men who wouldn't take their eyes off them for a second.

The boy was crying now, wishing for someone, anyone to come and save them but he knew it was futile, they all did, no one could save them now only they could save themselves. But how could 5 little kids all wearing quirk canceling collars go up against several full grown men. Except they weren't all wearing quirk canceling collars, there was one exception and the kids caught on to that.

"Do something." The boy in the corner looked up to see a boy with horns talking to him. "You don't have a quirk canceling collar so how come you haven't done anything all this time." He hissed.

Being trapped in there for so long and his growing anxiety only made the boy with horns angry and it showed on his face. He was angry at himself for not listening to his parents, angry at the people outside who had kidnapped him and especially angry at the only boy who could have possibly done something this whole time but didn't.

"Why have you just sat there this whole time watching everyone get sold off one by one!" He spat. The boy in the corner started to shake, he was scared and didn't know what to say. He was just as upset about seeing everyone getting taken away but he couldn't do anything about, it wasn't his fault.

"Stop pressuring him like that it's not nice." Said a girl with blonde hair suddenly stepping in between the two boys. "We're all scared and are getting desperate but that doesn't mean you should take it out on him."

"But he's right, he's the only one without a collar so he could have done something this whole time." Said another boy who had hazelnut eyes.

"I can't-" The boy in the corner tried to say but was ignored.

"Exactly, if he could use his quirk this whole time why would he decide to do nothing." Said the boy with the horns, getting more furious.

"I can't-" the boy in the corners words were lost in the arguing once again.

"Calm down would you he must have his reasons, he's also going to get sold off you know." Said the girl with blonde hair.

"So he's trying to save only himself at the last minute right."

"I can't-"

"Could you all shut up! There's nothing we can do, we're all going to get sold off whether we like it or not." Another boy wearing a black top shouted, speaking for the first time. His words rang around the room and everyone fell silent.

"I can't." Everyone looks over to the boy in the corner now shacking violently.

"Why can't you." The blonde haired girl asks as quietly as possible as to not scare the boy.

"Cause I'm quirkless."

"No wonder the quirkless kid is still here who would want to buy him." It was the next day and the boy with the black shirt was gone. The boy with horns was scared and getting desperate, he had so many pent up emotions so he took them out on the quirkless boy in the corner. The quirkless boy hadn't said anything more since telling them he was quirkless, he just sat there shaking, he never looked up.

The girl with blonde hair tried to talk to him and make him feel better and it was working more than she knew. The quirkless boy appreciated her company but he was afraid of getting attached but then never seeing her again. The boy would answer the girl under his breath but he never looked up, too afraid of the judgmental eyes he was so used to over the last two years of his life.

"Hey what's your name, I know it would be best to not get attached but I'd like to have someone to look for once I'm taken away." For the first time since telling them he was quirkless the boy looked up to see the blonde girl with a sad smile on her face.

Tears started to prick the boys eyes once again threatening to spill out. They all had little time left and he knew that there would be no one looking for him when he's gone, but this girl who he barely even knew wanted to look for him after they've all been sold even though he's quirkless. No one had ever been so nice to him when they found out he was quirkless so he told her.

"My name is Izuku Midoriya."

"Nice to meet you Izuku, I'm Akira Taiyo."

Three days later and only Izuku and Akira were left. They're glad that they got to stay together that long but they knew that after that day there would only be one left. Izuku hoped that he would be taken, hoped that he could somehow save Akira having faith that she would look for him. He wanted to protect the first person who accepted him even though he had no power to call his own.

The two decided to stay awake to make the most of the little time they had left together. They talked about all sorts of stupid things, anything to keep their minds off what was to come.

In that prison time always seemed to move so slowly yet on that day time couldn't have moved slow enough. The pounding of their hearts replicating the ticking of a clock and soon enough it was dark outside. Time passed and soon footsteps could be heard getting closer and closer, they knew there time was up but they didn't want to part, not yet, they held on tight to each others hands and squeezed. They didn't let go no matter how much it hurt knowing that there fear of losing each other overrode the pain. Even if they were only together for 4 days they felt as if they had known each other forever and they knew the feeling was mutual when they had the urge to protect each other no matter what. The steps got louder and the feeling grew until they stopped and the sound of silence washed over them once again.

"Oh your both still awake, how troublesome." It was the same man from his first night here Izuku thought as the children looked at him. "You, little girl get up."

Those long awaited words they were both dreading were finally said as the man pointed straight at the girl. Momentarily the children's breathing stopped as they registered what was happening, they had prepared for this yet no amount of preparation could have possibly warded of the feelings they felt. The girl started to shake as she slowly made her way to get up, not letting go of the others hand to savour every second, but the quirkless boy wasn't going to allow it. He pulled her down into his arms and looked the man dead in the eyes. He didn't know where this new found confidence came from but knew for sure that he wasn't going to let those people have her.

The man who had been waiting patiently was now getting upset. Annoyed he went over to grab the girl but the quirkless boy pushed him back.

"You can take me instead, just let her go." The quirkless boy said still holding the girl in his arms. His eyes were filled with determination, if only everything could be solved with determination alone the two children would have already been out of there.

"Izuku..." Akira looked at him in bewilderment, he was being stupid and she didn't want him to get hurt but she was still kind of touched.

"No one wants a quirkless kid like you so let go of the girl and get out of my way." Said the man, his rage evident in his voice. This only made Izuku hold on tighter as he shook his head. The man had had enough and he had no time for this.

"Take me instead." His voice was steady and intimidating, it was almost impossible to tell how terrified he actually was.

"Did you not just hear me kid, I said no one wants a quirkless kid like you, not even your mother. She practically gave you away to us with how little we paid."

It was at that moment the tiny mental string in the back of the boys mind snapped. The man had only confirmed the boys suspicions about his mother that he had tried so hard to get rid of. The naive, caring side of him wanted to believe in his mother if even just a little bit, he wanted to believe that she was still there waiting for him. That tiny belief was the only thing that was keeping him going until he met Akira. If Akira was taken away what would he have left.

The man had stopped talking seeing how the boy had suddenly gone quiet. He knew that his words had gotten into his head so the ignorant man approached the children. If the fool had looked at his eyes he would have seen it, he would have seen the overwhelming amount of blood lust hiding in those eyes, the amount of blood lust that should have never been possessed by an adult talkless of a child. If he had looked at his emerald green eyes he would have noticed them lock onto him and lose their brightness, if he had noticed them maybe he wouldn't have died.

Several men stormed into the warehouse and surrounded the two small children. A man laid dead on the ground ripped to shreds by his own blood from the inside out. It wasn't something a quirkless person could do it could have only been done by a quirk, one that neither of the children had, one that belonged to the corpse on the floor drenched in red.

The men ran towards the boy still holding on to the girl in his arms. One by one they felt something disappear from inside them forming a kind of emptiness in their hearts. That something was practically pulled out of them towards the direction of the boy who just stood their glaring them down but otherwise doing nothing. They were confused and hated the feeling that was now left inside them, they felt afraid like this wasn't who they were, like they had lost a part of their identity. It made no sense but the only thing they could think of was the quirkless boy who wasn't so quirkless after all. They aimed at him all activating their quirks only to realise what that emptiness really was. They had lost their quirks, it wasn't even temporarily or blocked off it was gone, permanently gone. They had lost their identities and in the blink of an eye they had lost their lives as well.

That wasn't the end of it though, just before their quirks were taken one of the men had somehow gotten to the girl, burning off her collar and some of her skin with it. She let out a scream she had been holding in since the beginning but no one would had heard it over their new predicaments, no one except the quirkless boy who's anger only rose. They all died, blood rained down drenching the two children and scarring the girl for life or as much of it she had left.

The girl tried to squirm out of the boys grip but he wouldn't let go so she did the only other thing she could think of, she bit him. Instinctively the boy let go and that was a mistake he would live to regret. More men ran into the warehouse till they were once again surrounded, the only problem now being the girl was completely vulnerable and desperate times call for desperate measures so terrified and not in a stable state the girl let off her quirk.

Her hair rose up and illuminated the dark warehouse. Her blond hair grew brighter and brighter till it lit the room up like the sun, but just like the sun it also burns. Desperate and in a panic her hair continued to grow in brightness and in heat, everyone in the room was blinded and was unable to see but that didn't stop the girl from getting stabbed in the back.

Her hair started to dim and she started to fall, the little boy felt the heat decrease but was still unable to see, he called out to the girl worried but didn't hear an answer, it's not like the dead could talk. The little girl lay on the floor surrounded by blood that was likely not hers, she wasn't entirely dead yet but she knew she would be, she desperately wanted to call out to the boy to tell him that everything would be okay but deep down she despised the boy, blamed him for all that was currently happening. If he had just let her go peacefully she wouldn't be on the floor dying yet he was still calling out her name, looking for her. It got her mad and brought out her bitter personality.

"I will always be with you-" She said the bitterness evident in her voice, her final words went unsaid because they both knew exactly what she meant. She would always be there not to protect him but to haunt him for as long as he lives.

His eyes went back to normal and the aftermath of the scene became clearer. The boy didn't know when he had killed the second wave of men but it didn't matter to him. He bent down, scooped up some blood left lying on the floor onto his hand and he walked over to the middle of the room. In bold letters he wrote, KARMA.

wiping his hands he made his way to a little shed that stood next to the warehouse and went inside. Inside was filled with drawers all containing files on all the children who had been bought and sold. Looking for the draw containing the children he was trapped with he took them out and looked through them. On each it said their names and basic information about the child, it also contained the information on all the buyers and where the children had been sent. He continued to look through them till eventually he came to a name he recognised. Akira Taiyo, he looked through a desk for a pen then he proceeded to write in the top corner of the page DEAD.

He continued to look through the files before he finally got to himself and took it out, he slipped it up his shirt and took the rest of the files out of the drawer. He looked for a phone and called the police letting them know about a mass murder, he took over the files and dropped them near the words on the floor in an area with no blood. Satisfied the boy made his way out the warehouse to wherever his feet would take him, it wasn't like he had anyone waiting for him at home.

The kid found it funny how at the start of this he was just a little quirkless boy who sat in the corner of the room trying to make his presence unknown, but now he was in the center of it all, the reason for all those deaths. He was no longer quirkless and definitely no longer a little kid, atleast not mentally.

Chapter Notes

"Detective Tsukauchi please come take a look over here."

Abandoning the single bloody word spelled out on the ground, the detective went over to join his colleague where he stood.

The detective found this case rather interesting but somewhat confusing. They had established that this was a site of child trafficking but they were yet to be able to determine the causes of all the deaths.

Making it over to his colleague he stopped walking and inspected the corner of the room he was currently stood. Nothing really caught his eye, there were some signs that someone had sat there for a while but other than that he didn't see anything out of place. But then he saw it, he saw the tiny strand of green hair laying on the floor. If it wasn't for the fact that it was green it probably would have gone unnoticed but out of all the files of the recently brought in children their was no one who had green hair. That only further confirmed their suspicions that their really was another child.

In one of the files he found a specific amount of children was stated. It was the amount from the group who had recently been kept hostage in the warehouse but the individual files didn't line up with that number, there was still one missing. Not to mention that the words 'dead' had been written on the file of a little girl who's corpse was found laying on the floor. There were also files on all the people who were working their and their corpses all added up so whoever wrote it must have survived. There was only one real explanation for this case, it must have been a kid with green hair who had killed them all except that solution still didn't add up.

The files also mentioned quirks. Inspecting all the corpses closer they could see that they were killed using many different kinds of quirks, the same quirks belonging to the corpses. They all could have killed each other but by the arrangement of bodies he could tell that the attack must have happened in waves, so it made no sense that a man who was already dead had used his quirk to kill another. That could have been the boys quirk though, to manipulate the dead but that wouldn't explain why they all tried to kill each other. The boys quirk could have made them kill each other but then it wouldn't make sense for a dead man to use his quirk against others. This case had to many holes, to many questions, questions which could only be determined by the identity of the final child.

The detective took the hair strand, putting it in a zip lock bag. The strand of hair might have been able to reveal the child's identity but he knew it would be hard without a name. He put that matter aside and went back over to the word spelt out on the floor in blood, it bothered him. He got the feeling that this was the start of a whole new problem in the future.

In modern day Japan thanks to All Might criminal activity has decreased significantly compared to other countries. But that doesn't stop the increase of child trafficking cases. As quirks mix resulting in children having stronger quirks as the generations go by, more and more kids have been kidnapped and sold off. The children are always specifically targeted leading some to believe that there is a spy giving information from the quirk registration services, but since there's no proof nothing has been done about that. In this modern day society crime has decreased but if your child has been kidnapped no one expected to get them back. Any child was lucky to make it past the age of 6.

The child trafficking cases have only grown yet the so called hero's who are ment to protect and save the citizens of the country do nothing. Although it's not like some of them want to do nothing it's just that they can't do anything. It is almost impossible to get any information about trafficking cases which means the investigation always leads to a dead end. The hero's are incapable of tracking down theses children so a new hero of the people appeared, a hero who specialises on trafficking cases, Karma.

Karma is a hero to the people though he is anything but to the corrupt government leading the country. It is believed by some that many of the people in the government are involved with child trafficking in some way, whether that means selling or buying them. It makes sense or else the government wouldn't be trying so hard to get rid of the vigilante who has caused child trafficking cases to significantly decrease.

Not much information is known about the vigilante Karma including the nature of his quirk, but it has been confirmed that he was a victim of the child trafficking incident nearly 9 years ago when several people were found dead in a warehouse. It has been confirmed that the vigilante is male with green hair but that's as much as anyone knows. The police had tried to look for a missing persons report from 10 years ago to see if they could figure out Karma's identity but came to the conclusion that he was either an orphan or neglected since their was none fitting his description ever made.

It was night and the full moon was out, it would have been a peaceful view almost romantic if it wasn't for the fact that the vigilante was viewing it from the roof of enemy territory.

He was yet to be spotted as he jumped into the open and quietly made his way to the back entrance of an abandoned factory which had the least people guarding it. The boy had mastered the art of sneaking around while growing up, it proved very useful when searching for files.

Arriving at the back entrance he was met with two guards who immediately went to attack. He easily put them both out of commission for a while then made his way through the door. Opening the door his heart lept when he saw that he was surrounded by atleast 50 men all standing there aiming their guns at him. Before Karma could even register what was happening he was bombarded by gun shots in every single direction.

The gun shots seized ater a few moments and silence took over. The ambushers set down their guns and waited for the mist to clear so they could go confirm the vigilante was dead, they didn't get the chance though cause as soon as they let down their gaurd they were all embraced in a layer of electricity instantly knocking them all out. Karma walked through them unscathed leaving a pile of bullets behind him as he went. He retracted his nails and effortlessly made his way to the room the children were being kept in.

The children were trapped in a room devoided of any windows, Karma's footsteps the only noise. They rang throughout the room and the children's unease could be seen on their faces as he got closer. Three more men jumped out at him in different directions and without breaking a sweat Karma knocked two out but left one just barely conscious. One person was all he needed after all.

"Your boss is the only one who knows where the files are right."Karma was holding the guy by the scruff of his neck now, the man tried to squirm out of his grip but didn't have the energy to do so.

Giving up on trying to escape the man says, "There's no way in hell I'd answer that."

Karma sighs and lets the man down. The man collapses to the floor, his legs betraying him and giving out. "You don't need to answer, I can read your memories, I just need to find your boss."

"Even if you can read my memories that won't help you if I was never told." He wore a triumphant smile on his face but his shaking gave away his true feelings.

"Why do u think I kept all of you alive." The man's smile dropped enticing Karma's lips to slightly curl upwards in response. "Which means I don't need you anymore. It would be a shame for your wife and kids if you die so I'll be sure to compensate them."

Suddenly the lights turned off and a scream echoed throughout the room. Not a minute later the lights had turned back on again and a dead body lay shoved into a corner of the room way out of the children's sight.

Karma turned to the children and his previous smirk turned into a gentle smile to reassure the kids. "Everything is fine now, you'll all go home soon. Once I find your files I'll call the police."

"A-are you Karma?" One of the children stuttered, tears pricking their eyes. He nods and the child's tears turn into a full on sob as some others join in.

Karma smiles, the innocent tears of joy warming his heart. "If you want to get saved, no matter what the circumstance you must not move from where your sat." The children agree and Karma walks out the room dragging the two unconscious men with him.

He makes it back to the room of his ambush where he sets the men down and starts waking them one by one to look through their memories.

He had picked up many useful quirks while hunting down child traffickers, one of the many being able to look through people's memories. It was very useful and was one of the three quirks he limited himself to using, the only setback being that it puts a strain on his eyes when he uses it to much. The quirk could only work on humans and when they were conscious, when he first got the quirk it was impossible to control, he would just randomly be looking through people's memories which would have made him crazy if he hadn't isolated himself.

Another one of his three main quirks was nail based. His nails took on different properties depending on the colour or pattern. It had taken a while for Izuku to realise that the quirk worked by injecting a liquid which meant he could make whole new patterns, in other words meaning the quirks possibilities are endless. Although the quirk converts his energy to make the liquids so if he uses it to much it would make him tired. It wasn't just good at short range it could also be used for long range attacks by inserting his nails into the ground. The quirk was rather op, it would have been a hard quirk to go against if he had a normal quirk but he had a suspicion that his own quirk was what made the ones he took so strong.

Some of the things the quirk can do is heal-white, but it was more like a reload since it brought his body back to a previous state. It can also electrocute-yellow, increase the temperature of your blood-red, reduce the temperature of your blood-blue, become as hard as steel-grey and then black was a poison which the only antidote is the healing aspect of the quirk. There's many more, some useful and some not and some he hasn't even tried out yet.

His final main quirk is a type of force field. It isn't a normal force field and he can't control it. It activates automatically whenever he's about to be hit with enough force to kill or mortally wound him. It has it's disadvantages but it was also rather useful, if it wasn't for the fact he just recently got this quirk that ambush would have killed him for sure. It protects him from anything that could kill him though which means if he wanted to end his own life he would be unable to do so, not quickly anyway.

Going through the men Karma killed anyone who didn't know any important information while making a mental note of the ones with families to compensate. Karma didn't have any money but these people made a shit load of it which he would use to compensate the family members of the ones he killed, if they choose to not accept it that was up to them. Karma knew that most of these people had a life and people who would mourn their deaths but he couldn't risk keeping any of them alive for multiple different reasons. He was aware that he had no right to take another's life but they had no right to sell others like objects either, they brought suffering to so many innocent children who hardly know anything about the world.

Karma kept going through men, healing the ones who wouldn't immediately wake up just to kill them straight after. It seemed like none of them were told any useful information about where the boss would be but he soon came upon one guy who had his phone number.

"Call him." Karma instructed and after some slight torture the man happily obeyed.

It took some time to find the boss but as soon as he found him everything was easy from there on. He found the files for all the children and put them in his bag. He then looked through the files for the staff and wrote the families of the people he killed on a peice of paper before stuffing it into his pocket. He decided to leave the staff files their, he would tell the police where they were when he called.

Making his way back to the factory he layed the children's files on the floor infront of them and called the police. He told the children to sit tight for a little longer then made his leave but not without writing 'karma' on a wall with the blood of the dead like he always does.

He exited the factory 100% sure that everyone who knew and was involved with the traffickers were dead and made his way to a back alley to change out of his blood stained clothes.

"So you must be Karma." He turns around only half changed and was met with a scruffy looking person staring straight at him. He had messy black hair that went passed his shoulders and wore all black except for the huge scarf that lay on his shoulders and the yellow goggles placed on his face.

"I'm afraid that I'm going to have to arrest you now." The man smiled and Karma's heart dropped.

Chapter End Notes

I started writing this fic quite a while ago on Wattpad. I'm still currently writing it but for the people who are similar to me and need to figure out how many commitments they're making with this fic I can already tell you that it's going to be long af. I've already written about 30 chapters on wattpad but it will take a while for me to post anymore chapters so I'll post like 5 or 6 chapters a week on here until I finally find the motivation to continue writing, then my update schedule will be the same as on wattpad.

Like I said before I started this fic quite a while ago so my writing may not have been that good when I first started. I'm not going to edit any of my older chapters because I'm too lazy so I hope my writing is good enough for you all as it is.💜💙

Eraserhead

"So you must be Karma." Izuku turns around only half changed to see a scruffy looking man with messy black hair that goes passed his shoulders. He's wearing all black except for the huge scarf that sits on his shoulders and the yellow goggles placed on his face.

"I think this is the part where I arrest you." The man grins. "But if your able to give me a good enough reason on why your in bloodied clothes I might let you off the hook."

Izuku stares at the man in shock, words escaping him. Then he realises that he's half naked and starts blushing like crazy. The man looks on in amusement still waiting for an explanation.

"Uh, I had a nose bleed." Izuku lies.

"Must have been one hell of a nose bleed, I'm surprised you haven't passed out from blood lost." The man answers sarcastically, fully aware that he's lying.

Knowing how terrible of a liar he is Izuku gives up on making an excuse so instead tries to think of a way to run away. "If your gonna interrogate me could you atleast wait for me to finish changing."

"What so you can run away." Well their goes my only chance of escape Izuku thinks. "If your gonna change then go ahead, we're both men here." This makes Izuku blush even more but having no choice he continues changing.

As Izuku is putting on new clothes there's a long and awkward silence and the man continues to watch him the entire time to make sure he doesn't escape.

"I'm surprised you haven't killed me yet."

"Huh-" The man's words catch Izuku of gaurd causing him to stare at him with utter shock.

"Well considering how easily you can kill all those people, one person like me shouldn't be a difficult obstacle." The man explains. If he said he didn't notice the look of pure distraught on the boys face he would be lying. "I saw you kill all those men so I'm 100% sure that your Karma."

"I am Karma, there's no way of me getting around this I get that but that doesn't mean I'd kill you." The man's face morphed into a look of confusion for a split second before turning back to his previous emotionless state. "I don't know what you think but it's not like I enjoy killing, plus you have nothing to do with me or my goals."

"I'm getting in the way of your goals, isn't that reason enough." The man looked on, his face not showing a shred of emotion.

"Nearly everyone has someone that they love who is waiting for them back home and I'd hate to take that away from them but they turned children into objects to be sold and I can't tolerate that. You have people waiting at home for you as well and I'd rather not take you away from them even if that's the risk your job holds." Izuku tells him staring at him straight in the eye.

Shota sighs and let's down his emotionless mask to form a little smile. Even if the kid was a murderer he still understood the value of life more than anyone and Shota appreciated that.

"I'm Eraserhead but you can call me Aizawa, I'm an underground hero and I work at UA, so would you care to tell me your name?"

"Like I would tell you that. The hero commission has been trying to figure out my identity for years now and I'd rather not ruin that." The kid returns his smile.

"Fair enough, could you atleast tell me your quirk or something." The kid shakes his head.

"If you don't want to call me Karma you can go ahead and call me Deku, that's what my boyfriend calls me anyway." Shota raises an eyebrow and the boy just shrugs in response his smile still plastered on his face. "The police are going to be here soon so do you think you could let me go now."

"Follow me and we'll both leave this place together, I still have things I want to ask you." The kid sighs but follows knowing he has no choice.

The duo jump across buildings for a few minutes till they're a considerable distance away from the factory and settle in another alleyway. The kid takes of his backpack and sits on the floor making himself comfortable. Shota remains standing back towards the wall and stares at the green haired boy sitting infront of him.

They stay like that in silence for a while till Shota finally speaks up. "How old even are you, you look like a nine year old."

"I'm nearly 15." The kid snaps clearly pissed. He realises what he's done and once again starts blushing like crazy before calming back down. "Sorry."

"You just revealed a valuable piece of information that will help us track down your identity you know." Shota retorts.

Izuku sighs looking like he's done with the world before saying, "It's not like it matters anyway you already know what I look like so my identity should be revealed sooner or later."

A minute of silence passes as the boy looks dejectedly at the ground.

"I won't tell anyone."

"Huh-" The kid exclaims, caught if guard by the hero's word's once again.

"I said I won't tell anyone." Shota repeats. "If you ended up getting arrested child trafficking cases would only increase again anyway. I don't know how you do it but it's pretty hard to get any solid information for cases like these." Shota crosses his arms and watches the kid carefully as he looks up, contemplating the hero's words.

"Well when I was younger it was easy enough to get myself kidnapped by staying in alleyways." He says deciding to give the hero some information. "Everything was easy after that. Although there's definitely someone higher up behind all these cases since they always seemed to be able to find a file on me if I told them my name, the fact that they keep files anyway should be proof enough."

"So their really is someone in the government in charge of all the trafficking, good to know." The hero nods then bends down to become level with Izuku. "But if that was when you were younger how do u get your information now."

"That's for me to know and you to never find out." The kid looks up at him with a playful smile on his face.

It was almost hard for Shota to believe that the same child was a vigilante who has killed hundreds. Looking closer at the boy he was actually adorable, kind of like a cat. Cats are fluffy and cute but in reality they're fierce and smart, exactly like the boy sitting infront of him. The hair reminded Shota of a cat as well, wild and untameable like a stray. Shota loved stray cats, they were especially smart and he loved the development of there relationships as they started to gain his trust. Not to mention that he had a weak spot for those who have been abandoned and mistreated, he always had the urge to protect them no matter what. That's exactly why it broke Shota's heart that such a young boy has been murdering since he was a small child. Its pretty obvious that this boy must have been abandoned by his parents, it's a known fact that there's a good chance he's always been neglected even before he was kidnapped by traffickers. The fact that he looked way too small for his age broke Shota's heart even more, it just showed how malnourished he is. That's why Shota wanted to protect what was left of the kids innocence no matter what.

"Can I have your phone number, I'd like to keep in contact with you." Shota asks, the kid looked sceptical for a while but soon gave in and decided to give it to him anyway. "I'll give you my private number so you can reach me at anytime if something happens."

"If something happens I can handle it myself."

"Yes but now that you have me you don't have too." Shota genuinely smiles and Izuku looks for any sign to prove that he was being deceived, finding none he completely lets done his guard and smiles back.

"I guess you have a point."

"Over here Kacchan!" Katsuki turns around following the direction of the familiar voice till he sees his just recently turned boyfriend shoving through the crowd and making his way to him.

"What took you so long I've been here waiting for a while now." He bit back but deep down they both knew he didn't really care in the slightest, he'd wait any amount of time if it meant he could see his precious Izuku again.

"Sorry Kacchan, yesterday's job was Chaotic." He told him.

Katsuki was aware of his boyfriends secret identity, he's been aware ever since he was 9 years old and was saved by that same familiar mop of green curls that he thought had followed his mum to America three years ago.

Izuku was unable to say goodbye to anyone before his mum had sold him off to the traffickers which Katsuki had taken personally. Katsuki wasn't exactly the nicest to Deku growing up but the nerd always seemed to follow him no matter what stupid thing Katsuki did or said. He knew that there was no reason for Deku to say goodbye to him considering the things he did but he thought that their friendship meant much more to Deku than it ever did to him. He realised how much he had taken advantage of their friendship.

It all turned out to be a misunderstanding though, Deku had promised to tell him everything after he had found the files so Katsuki wouldn't go blabbing about him to the police. It took a while for Katsuki to be free from all the fuss that came with the aftermath of being rescued but Izuku waited, he could have ran away while Katsuki was occupied but he didn't. Katsuki soon realised that it was because the greenete still treasured their friendship. The realisation only made him regret all the poor choices he made when Deku was still around even more. He regretted pushing him away, the only person who actually admired him from the bottom of his heart, the only person who wouldn't suck up to him when he was around then talk bad about him when he wasn't. He regretted only realising it when he did, when Izuku was no longer the same Deku from all those years ago.

"What happened?" Katsuki asks focusing back on his boyfriend happily walking along side him.

"Well only one person had the key for the files but nobody knew where that person was so it took a while to locate them but I did eventually." Katsuki nods along as they walk up to a store that caught his attention. "But after that when I was changing out of my bloodied clothes an underground hero found me." This made Katsuki stop and look at the boy still happily walking along yet to realise that his boyfriend was no longer by his side.

"Was it after you finished changing or while?" The greenete finally realising that Katsuki had stopped turns around.

"That's what you care about." Deku says as he skips back over to Katsuki, reaching for his hand while he was at it. Katsuki glares at the boy but knowing that it holds no ill intent the boy only laughed. "I wasn't finished changing yet and he was totally set on not taking his eyes off me so I wouldn't run away, had to finish infront of him."

They had started walking again, fingers intertwined. Katsuki was absolutely fuming meaning that he cared. Izuku smiles.

"But that's not even the most important thing."

"What could be more important than that." Katsuki knew the correct answer to that question but he didn't care, he was to angry to care about anything else at that moment.

"I told him I'm Karma."

Katsuki freezes once more and stares at his boyfriend like he's absolutely mental."Well why the fuck would you do that." Katsuki says calming down slightly and starts walking again.

"He saw me take out all those people so there was no use lying. It's fine though cause he promised not to tell anyone."

"And you believe him." Katsuki looks skeptical so Deku flashes him a smile to reassure him.

"He works for UA so he isn't obligated to tell anyone." He says, like that answers the question.

"How does that change anything."

"UA doesn't have to abide by normal laws so they're kind of like an independent part of the country, but in return UA has no say in the laws of the country. So in other words aren't allowed to vote or go against current leaders." He says all bubbly and happy.

"How the hell did they manage that."

"Apparently its all so the principle can't interfere with the country." Izuku says, he's skipping now.

"Even if the underground hero has no reason to tell anyone that doesn't mean that he won't." Katsuki points out steering the conversation back to the hero.

"I think he's trying to gain my trust so I can help him out in the future. The hero is known for sometimes working with vigilantes, he even gave me his private number."

"He what! And you just took it?" Katsuki's previous rage bubbles back out making Izuku laugh.

"Don't worry, when I read his memories I saw he has a husband." Izuku says once more quelling his boyfriends anger.

They continued on walking and looking through stores together as they laughed and embraced each others presence till late into the night.

Sludge villian attack

'Have a good day Kacchan I'll see you tomorrow okay.'

'Whatever you say nerd.' Hanging up the phone, Katsuki makes his way to the two dumbasses who've been waiting for him.

Katsuki didn't actually know their names since he had never bothered to learn them, it's not like they actually liked him in the first place anyway. They're just riding off his popularity, usually the people who were closes to him were treated differently to others. Katsuki knew they just wanted to stay on his good side, everybody did, but they were damn failing at that since Katsuki has heard them say the most shittiest things about him behind his back but he's never really cared. Katsuki has never really liked being alone, not like he'd ever admit that.

"You ready to go now Katsuki." Said one of the extras.

"Yeah whatever let's go."

They were going to the arcade and Katsuki had agreed to join since Deku was going to be busy. He could tell that the extras only asked him to go cause they thought he would decline, he was surprised they hadn't left him then made up some shitty excuse. The whole class probably hates him now, they've been talking bad about him all day when they thought he wasn't listening probably because of what he'd said during homeroom.

It was homeroom and they were ment to fill out career tests but that went down the fucking drain as soon as the teacher flung them into the air knowing every single person in this room wanted to be hero's anyway. Katsuki didn't care about the scene unfolding in front of him though, caring was a waste of energy, especially when it had to do with the bunch of idiots who call themselves his classmates. That quickly changed though when the shitty teacher had said that he thought the whole class would make excellent hero's in the future which really got on Katsuki's nerves. He wouldn't usually care but he hated the fact that someone could even think that two-faced people like them could ever be great hero's especially since the cowards couldn't even bring themselves to tell Katsuki how they felt face to face. Atleast Katsuki wasn't a coward, if he didn't like something he made it damn clear, so that's why he told them exactly what he was thinking, that they would only ever become sidekicks for some D-list hero.

It was true, Katsuki really believed that they didn't have a chance with their stupid quirks, some of them were so useless it's surprising how they have so much confidence in themselves, even if any of them managed to start their own agencies it's not like they'd ever be able to even compare to Katsuki. Katsuki is planning on going to UA which practically guarantees his success as a hero once he graduates. His goal of going to UA is the exact reason that he starts shouting at the fuckers who've started smoking behind him.

"Would you quit that shit, if you get caught it'll be on my record too." Kicking away a bottle in frustration Katsuki turns towards the two extras, pissed.

"Woah, calm down okay. We'll st..." The extra didn't finish his sentence instead both of them were now looking behind Katsuki clearly distraught, turning around Katsuki's expression soon matched theirs as he was engulfed by a disgusting green slime.

'Whatever you say nerd.'

The 'I love you' goes unsaid as the call ends, both of them already knowing that fact without having to be told.

Izuku is currently sat in an abandoned building where he plans to spend the night. The other day Izuku had gotten a request from Aizawa to investigate the movements of the hero killer Stain who is now currently in a city close to Musutafu.

Izuku has become really close to Aizawa over these past two months since they first met each other and once in a while Aizawa would ask for Izuku's help on something and if he wasn't busy Izuku would happily oblige. Aizawa had also offered to help Izuku from time to time but Izuku would rather not involve the underground hero in that. He could tell the hero just wanted him to trust him and he does, he has no reason not to, and clearly Aizawa fully trusted him as well to help out with missions even though they haven't even known each other that long.

Like Aizawa had promised he didn't tell anyone about him and Izuku was grateful. The hero always kept his word no matter how wierd his promises could be, the underground hero wasn't perfect though, Izuku is convinced that how he survives on coffee and no sleep isn't healthy for him, but to be fair Izuku never got that much sleep either. Izuku has learnt quite a lot about Aizawa from their very few meetings, like the fact that it's absolutely impossible to hear him coming when he sneaks up on you, or that he could sleep literally anywhere. He had even told him that he has three cats and that his husband is Present Mic. Izuku may have started fanboying for a while when Aizawa had told him, asking all different kinds of questions that the hero answered truthfully.

The times that Izuku spent with Aizawa were fun, Izuku liked having someone to talk to that could understand the things about his job. Kacchan is great but Izuku often avoided telling Kacchan about his vigilante activities afraid that it might scare him away.

His thoughts were cut off when Izuku started hearing footsteps coming towards him. Immediately he got on his feet taking a stance, prepared for whatever was coming his way.

A few feet away immersed in the shadows the person stopped. Peircing red eyes looked straight at Izuku a hint of panic in them before they eased into relief.

"Seems like I've ran into a kid." His voice filled the room, raspy and intimidating. "Why don't you hurry up and run home."

Izuku didn't move an inch, still holding his stance and not letting down his guard. "What if I told you this is my home."

The man scoffs, "Well it certainly wasn't yesterday."

"Well it is now." Izuku says ending the conversation. Getting a little annoyed the man walks up to him emerging from the shadows to reveal none other than the hero killer Stain.

"Look kid, I don't know what's going on at home but it's dangerous for you to be out here alone so you should go back." The hero killer say as he crouches slightly becoming level with Izuku.

"I already told you this is my home." Izuku stands properly still not letting down his guard. He stares straight at the Hero killer refusing to look away and trys to look as intimidating as he can be when he isn't covered in blood. "Well it is until I finish my mission."

The hero killer raises an eyebrow at that. "Oh," He says. "and what is your mission?"

"You."

Turning a corner Toshinori makes his way through the streets following the sound of destruction. Toshinori wasn't sure when he had dropped the bottle containing the sludge villian he just recently captured but he had a theory it was probably during his coughing fit. Toshinori hoped that there were hero's on scene to quell the damage because he isn't sure if he has enough time left.

Taking a left the sound of explosions become clearer and he can see the embers of flames rising up into the sky. Approaching the scene as fast as he can Toshinori assess the situation. He's relieved to see that there are heroes around trying to extinguish the fire but that relief is short lived when he sees what is causing the fire. A student who he guesses is still in middle school has been taken hostage and is currently struggling to free himself. Usually Toshinori would say he's being a hassle but he knows that that's the only chance the boy really has now. The villain is made out of liquid and can't be grabbed meaning all of the heroes present won't be able to do anything. A feeling of guilt rises inside of him, Toshinori knows he's the only one who can do something but he's got no time left.

Toshinori tries to get rid of that feeling, telling himself that there's nothing he could possibly do. He's seen many people die in his time as a hero it's just what comes with the job, you can't always save everyone so you should always focus on the people you're able to reach.

But Toshinori can reach him, the boy was right infront of him, his life in Toshinori's hands. If only he could do something, if only he could get his legs to move, to go save the boy.

"Like hell imma just stay here and die!" Toshinori looks up to see the boy shouting at a hero who had told him to stop using his quirk.

The hero looks annoyed but isn't able to argue back. The boy continues to blow up the villian trying to prevent it from suffocating him which he was succeeding at but it meant he was making no progress of escaping.

A cackle of laughter can be heard from the villian as he starts to speak, "You'll die sooner or later, as long as I have you I have all the time in the world to wait."

This made the boy increase the intensity of his explosions as he became more panicked. Struggling to get out of the villians grip he yells, "Like hell I'm gonna die, I've got people waiting for me to come back home."

The boy closes his eyes, seizing his explosions for a second to calm down. The villian misunderstanding his intentions took that chance to suffocate him but as soon as it tried the boy aimed a blast straight for it's eye.

Writhing in pain the villian let go of the boy just enough for him to squirm out of his grip.

Clenching his fist the boy yelled, "I've got hopes and dreams that aren't going to get cut off by a disgusting pile of slime like you!"

This got the villian really angry. Suddenly it pounces, aiming to kill the boy when Toshinori, squeezing out the last of his power, ran to save him. Toshinori was tired and he could feel all the muscles in his body protesting but he had to do this. Winding back his arm he punched the villian with all his might and sent it splattering into various different directions.

Standing behind him was the boy, his mouth agape. He was the one who had reminded him what being a hero was all about, if it wasn't for that Toshinori may have actually just stood there and watched him die. Toshinori was thankful though for the reminder, hero's lived to risk their lives to protect others, to protect their hopes and dreams and make sure they never dissappear, but in the heat of the moment Toshinori had forgotten that.

Toshinori could feel a cough rising up his throat but he held it in. A trickle of blood ran down his lips as he tried to get rid of the reporters, just realising the boy was already long gone.

Apologising to the reporters and making up an excuse, the hero jumped up using the last of his energy to look for the boy. Searching around Toshinori was unable to find him before completely running out of energy and deflating back into his other form. He sighed knowing that there's no way he could possibly find the boy now so decided to look around the same area tomorrow, if that didn't work he planned to research all the schools in the area. Toshinori was desperate to find the boy, the boy who was the embodiment of a real hero, who understood the reasons to fight. Even if it took Toshinori weeks to locate him he didn't mind cause as of now he's found his successor.

Stain the hero killer

Staring straight into emerald green eyes Chizome let out a snarl.

"So your working for some hero." The boy mearly nodded not making any other move.

Chizome examined the boy, only now noticing how young he was. At first glance he looked like a twelve year old, still innocent and unknown to the reality of the world. Looking closer though Stain could see the dullness in his eyes, a dullness that not only knew the horrors of life but also knew the sight of blood. His eyes greatly resembled his own, they were the eyes of a murderer.

Moving on to inspect the boy Chizome could make out the boys feminine features. He was thin and slender like a woman and kind of curvy, he looked fragile but his muscles said otherwise. It was obvious that the boy has been killing for quite a long time so Chizome decide to finally put up his guard.

"What kind of hero would send a child to do their own work." He says trying to get a reaction from the boy.

"One that knows my worth and trusts me." He replies completely calm and unfazed.

Chizome looks deeper, trying to make out whats really behind the boys mask. He tries but fails only highlighting how the boy was a real expert.

"So what now?" He asks.

"We fight." The boy says, and not even waiting for a response he pounces running straight for him.

Dodging the boys attack Chizome immediately unseathes his katana, pointing it straight at the green haired boy. The boy running towards him once again jumps up right before Chizome could swing his sword and flips onto his shoulder using him as a platform to get behind him. The boy tries to kick him from underneath but Chizome jumps up immediately turning around after. Swinging his sword once again the boy ducks underneath it before he grabs the hero killers hands holding them in place.

Unable to swing his sword Chizome knees the boy in the gut causing him to fly across the room with how small he is and crash into the floor. Getting up the boy rubs his stomach as he looks back at the hero killer.

"I'm not interested in killing children so would you please leave." Chizome says getting back into position.

"Unfortunately-" the boy says, "I have no trouble with killing adults."

Running back at him Chizome dodges once more, throwing a knife in the boys direction which just slightly missed him. The boy runs back up to him, this time protracting his nails. That probably had something to do with the boys quirk so Chizome jumped back trying his best to stay as far away from the boy as possible.

Trying to keep the fight long distanced Chizome continued to throw knives. The boy dodged them all and made his way closer to the hero killer. He swiped, Chizome just barely able to defend using the side of his katana. Jumping back the boy skidded across the floor landing in a crouch. Chizome readjusted his stance when he saw the slight scratch that the boy had left on the sword.

Even more stern on keeping the fight long distance Chizome threw another knife. Expecting the boy to easily dodge it he stood there and let it graze his skin, confused Chizome ran towards the boys direction but instead of aiming for him he was aiming for the knife. The boy seemed to have caught onto this way earlier than the hero killer had anticipated and also rushed towards the knife.

Swiping his nails once more at Stain the hero killer moved backwards forced to dodge. The boy easily got to the knife first and picked it up not making any other move.

He inspected the knife before looking up at Stain and smiling, "Okay that's all I need."

Confused Chizome let down his guard, convinced that the boy wasn't going to make another move.

"What the hell was the point of that then." He growls.

"I just needed information from you and I've got my information." He says, the smile still plastered on his face.

"What helpful information could you have possibly gotten from that fight." Chizome asks.

"For starters I now understand your fighting style." He says holding up a finger as he continues his list. "And I now know your quirk, or at least the basics of it."

Chizome suppressed a gasp that threatened to spill out of his lips, keeping his stern expression he says, "I didn't even use my quirk though."

Now bouncing up and down the boy exclaims, "You didn't need to use it, I figured it out."

"Humour me."

"First of all you carry around all those blades, that could just be because it's your fighting style but if it was you wouldn't need that many. Second of all when you were talking I noticed the difference in your tongue meaning you have to ingest something as a requirement for your quirk." The boy stopped to giggle at the shocked look the hero killer had accidentally let slip. "Then thirdly I tried to figure out what you need to ingest for your quirk to work and considering you use blades it's probably blood, that suspicion was confirmed when you went to go get the knife after I got cut."

Chizome stares in absolute disbelief and the boy giggles once again. "I was correct right? Although I'm not sure what the effects of your quirk are but considering that it uses blood the limitations are either the amount you ingest, blood type or the amount of people you use it on at once. Now though I'm fully aware that it's blood type cause your reaction changed when I mentioned it."

Chizome flinches. He looks at the boy still smiling feeling intimidated. He's unsure how such a bright and innocent smile could make him so scared but he knows something like that couldn't be achieved by a bright and innocent child. Taking a deep breath Chizome tries to calm down and ask about the one thing he was doubting due to the boys age.

"Are you Karma?"

The boy nods and Chizome inhales sharply. "How old are you then?"

"14." The boy says causing Chizome's face to morph into a look of pure suprise and confusion.

Chizome was surprised at how young the boy looked, he had thought that the boy was at most 12.

The boys smile slipped off his face and he turned skeptical. Narrowing his eyes he asked, "How old did you think I was."

The look gave Chizome chills, it was obvious that this subject got him pissed. He gulped before answering, "12."

The boy still looked skeptical but he lets go of the subject as he sighs and turns to get his bag, muttering something about Stain totally lying underneath his breath. Chizome ignores the muttering just wanting him to leave, the span of seconds feel like hours as the green haired boy marches towards the door in a slow pace, bag hanging across one shoulder. The boy said nothing more as he exited the door.

Chizome let out a breath he didn't even know he was holding.

Currently in some alleyway the ringing of the phone stops when Aizawa finally picks up the call.

"That was quick." he says.

"Just shows how capable I am." Izuku brags, he can hear the snort from the other side of the phone. "He arrived shortly after we finished talking before that's why I was so quick." Izuku can't see him from the other side of the phone but it feels like he knows Aizawa's exact expression.

"Did you get any information then."

"Yeah we fought for a bit and I was able to figure out parts of his quirk. Although I didn't figure out the effects of it cause that would be too dangerous." He tells him.

"That's fine, I wouldn't want you to purposefully get hit with his quirk if you don't know what it is." Aizawa sighs, Izuku can picture the tired expression on his face like everything in life is a hassle. "Anyway when you get back to Musutafu you can call me again so you can tell me any extra details when we meet up, for now send me the voice recording you took."

"Okay." He answer and soon later they're exchanging their farewells and hanging up the phone.

It's not that late which means Izuku might be able to meet up with Kacchan if he gets their early enough, that is if he isn't already asleep, kacchan gets moody when you wake him up. Izuku hadn't expected to run into Stain so early so he had told Katsuki that he wouldn't be back till the next day. Izuku hoped it would be a nice surprise for him to come back early because he could hear the loneliness in kacchan's voice when they were on the phone. Izuku guessed that something probably happened at school, he knew that he was pretty popular at school, why wouldn't he be with how amazing his quirk is, although Izuku knew that Kacchan didn't consider any of them his friends and they didn't consider him a friend either.

Sometimes Izuku wonders how life would have been like with no Kacchan. Would he just spend his days inside all day when he wasn't on a mission. Would he always be eating takeout everyday cause he couldn't cook for shit. Maybe he would feel just as lonely as Kacchan does without him. When he thought of it like that Izuku was glad that he had found Kacchan again. He's a real hassle though sometimes.

Making his way to the train station Izuku shoves his phone into his pocket deciding to suprise Kacchan. About an hour and a half later is when he sees it, the news article about a villian attack a few hours ago. Usually Izuku wouldn't bother reading an article like this but that changed when he saw a familiar head of spikes poking out of some green slime. Interested Izuku opened up the article and started to read, half way through he had to try and hold in his panic attack, probably doing a bad job at it since people started giving him weird looks. Although only getting more anxious he kept reading, All Might coming to the rescue only slightly quelling his anxiety.

The train stopped at his station and nearly missing it he ran out the doors and into a hallway devoided of people. Unable to hold it in any longer the tears stream down his face and his breathing becomes unstable.

Now hyperventilating he clutches his phone tightly as if it would run away if he loosened his grip even slightly. With practiced ease soon enough his breathing went back to normal but the tears still streamed down his face. Picking up his phone he looks through his most recent contacts clicking on the first one. The phone rings for a while but eventually a grumpy and annoyed voice picks up the phone.

'Hello' The sound of Kacchan's voice made his tears stream down more.

'Hello?' He says once more a little annoyed.

Realising that he has to speak Izuku quickly says, 'Kacchan it's me.'

His voice is wobbly and uneven and Kacchan clearly picks up on this as he asks, 'Why are you crying, what happened.'

Izuku sniffs. 'Nothing happened, it's just that I read the article about the sludge villian attack.'

'Oh that.' He says. 'Don't worry so much Deku I'm fine.'

'Are you sure, Kacchan you could have died.'

'I'm not so weak that I'd die just like that,' he says. 'Especialy not to a disgusting slime ball like that. Plus All Might saved me didn't he.'

Izuku sniffed. Kacchan was talking in the same voice that he always uses when he's trying to hide something. Izuku knew Kacchan was not fine but he'd deal with it later.

'I'm coming over Kacchan, are your parents home?'

'Huh, are you seriously coming all the way back here even though I already said I'm fine. What about that mission of yours.'

'I'm already back in Musutafu, I finished my mission a few hours ago.'

Kacchan grumbles for a while at the other end of the phone before saying, 'Fine, hurry up then my parents will be back in a few hours.'

Kacchan hangs up the phone leaving Izuku in silence. Getting up Izuku wipes away his tears and makes his way out of the train station and heads over to Kacchan's house.

'I'm fine'

Katsuki spots Deku turning the corner as he stands outside his house. Noticing Katsuki the nerd immediately runs over to him pulling him into a hug as they both crash to the ground. They stay like that for a while, Katsuki silently stroking his hair as Deku slightly trembles in his grip.

Katsuki found it weird how Izuku was acting more worried about the whole incident than he was but Katsuki has always been good at hiding the fear. It would be hard to even touch Izuku right now if it wasn't for the fact he 100% trusted him and knew he would do nothing to hurt him.

Allowing the nerd to calm down a little he slowly grabs the greenete's hand then stands up pulling the other up with him. In silence they walk into the house together still as close together as they could physically be as they go up the stairs to Katsuki's room. He opens the door carefully as they both enter the room, curling back into their previous position this time on the bed. Like before they sit in silence, Katsuki stroking Deku's hair as he sits there, shaking now stopped.

Katsuki isn't sure how long they sat like that but it felt like only a second had passed and all too soon the nerd was breaking the silence.

"Are you okay?" Is the first thing he asks.

Katsuki snorts, "I'm fine. Why wouldn't I be?"

"No I mean about the villian attack." The nerd raises his head previously buried in Katsuki chest to look up at him. He was doing that thing where he glares at you to bring out your true feelings or some shit like that, it was fucking creepy, but it usually worked.

Katsuki looked away avoiding Deku's gaze. He had been hoping to be able to keep this talk till atleast tomorrow after school but nothing has been going as planned on this mess of a day. He didn't want to worry Deku anymore than he needed to but the nerd was an analytical bastard and could always see right through him, that's why he needed a little more time to get over it before he could possibly talk to Deku and convince him he was fine.

"Didn't you just hear me, I said I'm fine." Deku glares harder and Katsuki just sighs and rolls his eyes. "How about you, are you okay?"

Deku stops glaring then buries his head back into Katsuki chest. He stays like that for a while and doesn't say anything.

"I was scared." He finally says as he tries to hold in his tears causing Katsuki's hand to stop where it lay on Deku's head.

"You were scared?" He repeats and Deku just nods. "But all the articles said I was fine didn't they."

Deku's head shots up from Katsuki's chest, this time the look on his face a genuine glare. "Just because the articles say your fine doesn't mean you are."

A little taken a back Katsuki just stares at the nerd, mouth slightly hanging open. Deku rarely ever snapped at him so when he does it always unexpected. Seeing his reaction Deku hides his face once more.

"Kacchan please tell me the truth, are you really fine." His voice is mumbled by the position he's in but his words are still audible.

"Yes I'm really fine, it was nothing serious and I'm safe now so stop worrying."

"If you want me stop worrying then stop lying." He shoots back raising his head once more.

"How am I lying?" Katsuki is visibly confused as the nerd starts listing reasons.

"First of all you refused to meet my gaze not that long ago-"

"Cause you were doing that weird glaring thing." Katsuki snaps but is ignored making him growl.

"Secondly, when we were talking on the phone you were using the same voice you always use when your trying to hide something."

"Hah, how can you even tell that over the phone, and what do you mean when I'm trying to hide something I don't use a different voice when trying to hide something."

"Yes you do." Deadpaned Deku.

Still glaring Katsuki tries his best to keep the nerds gaze. "Whatever, that was over the phone, you should know that nothing sounds the same over the phone." He says, sometimes he really hated how Deku was such a smartass.

Deku sighs trying to suppress the frustration slowly bubbling out of him.

"Fine then, why did your heart rate suddenly increase every time you told me you were fine."

"You sneaky bastard!" Katsuki snaps. That's why he buried his head into Katsuki chest, he was checking his fucking heart rate the whole entire time.

Pissed Katsuki snarls, "I said I'm fucking fine Deku why can't you just accept that! It's my problem anyway not yours so I don't see how it should affect you."

"Of course it affects me, your my boyfriend!" He shouts "Your the only person I have!" He sits up his glare even more intense than it was before. "What if you died Kacchan, what then?"

"Like I would fucking die. I could never get killed by a thing like th-"

"But you could Kacchan!" He's screaming now. "You could be killed by a thing like that, if All might wasn't there you would have been killed by a thing like that!" Tears start to spill down his face and Katsuki looks away feeling guilty.

"Do you really think that I could be defeated so easily" He says, hurt clearly evident in his voice. "You really think that I'm so weak that I'd let a pile of slime like that kill me."

Katsuki reaches up for his neck, still able to feel the villians tight grip over his neck, the sensation as the slime slowly rises now covering his mouth and nose.

He can't breath and it hurts, a sharp pain in his lungs asking, begging for oxygen. His energy slowly depleting, the warning signs his body is giving him. Fear coursing through his body as black spots overtake his vision. His life flashing before his eyes as he helplessly flails around help never coming to him.

Air. He needs air.

"Breathe Kacchan-"

Snapped out of his memories by the nerds voice the room goes back into focus. Infront of him is Deku looking super worried and as if he's about to burst into tears. Katsuki blinks unsure of what's happening until he finally remembers.

That's right I'm with Deku, he tells himself. The sludge villian is gone, he's been arrested, he can't hurt me anymore.

Katsuki looks back up at Deku whose tears are already spilling down his face once again as he shakes. "See Kacchan your not fine, you just had a panic attack." Katsuki just stares at him blankly not knowing how to respond only making Deku even more upset. "Kacchan please just talk to me."

Katsuki looks him in the eyes and smiles a soft and genuine smile. "I'm fine-" He says and Deku gets angry once again.

It was true though, everything was fine. Katsuki had heard once that apparently, when your life flashes before your eyes its just your brain looking for a solution, if that's the case how did it settle so quickly on Deku. He couldn't breath and was losing consciousness but none of that mattered as the single image of Deku occupied his mind.

He had closed his eyes trying to calm down a bit when the villian had tried to take that chance to take over him completely. With the image of Deku still etched into his mind he reached for the eye aiming an explosion to it, the rush of oxygen back into his lungs caused him an even sharper pain than before but he hadn't had time to focus on that. The sludge villian had let go of him just enough for Katsuki to slip out. Out of it's clutches. Back to safety.

All that had happened next had come to quickly and somehow All Might ended up being in the middle of him and the villain. It was over in an instant but that was to be expected from the number one hero, none of that mattered though. All that mattered was that he was fine and alive.

"...an, Kacchan!" Snapping back out of his memories once again he looks up at Deku. "Kacchan you just spaced out, why can't you just tell me how you really feel?" He growls. His hand tightens around his arm and Katsuki can see the tiny marks caused by his nails.

"I already told you nerd that I'm fine." The anger still evident on his face only grew. Katsuki only smiles again as he takes the nerd's hand away from his arm.

Cupping his cheek Katsuki leans forward placing his forehead on Deku's. Katsuki can feel the nerds breath tickling his cheek and his smile only grows knowing that Deku is so close to him. Deku's face morphed into one of confusion as Katsuki just sat there for a while savouring the moment till he finally speaks.

"I'll always be fine as long as your here by my side."

Letting out a tiny frustrated huff Deku pulls away and leans back on the head rest of the bed. He looks up not saying anything for a while and his face completely blank. After about a minute or so he looks back over to Katsuki, a wide smile on his face.

"The same goes for me." He says as his smile only grows wider. "I'll always be by your side no matter what, so always be by mine."

His heart fluttering Katsuki positions himself so he's sitting next to Deku. "Obviously." He says flicking the nerd's forehead, "If I'm not by your side who else will be, its not like you have any friends."

Slightly pouting Deku turns to face Katsuki. "I could say the exact same thing to you, you don't have a single person other than me that could actually be considered a friend. "

"Doesn't matter, your enough" Katsuki says, his previously genuine smile now replaced with a smirk.

Deku sighs. "That's why you have to take better care of yourself from now on, your going to go to UA and stuff like this is only going to get more frequent. I was worried sick you know."

"Now you understand how I feel every time you go on a mission."

Deku sighs once again as he slowly drops his head landing on Katsuki's shoulder. "Just stay alive okay. I don't want you to ever leave me."

"Don't worry I won't ever leave." He says as he reaches for his hand.

He pauses for a second, inspecting his boyfriends slender hands. The same hands that he's used to kill hundreds of people. The same hands that he's used to save even more. The same hands that are slowly changing the world as we know it. To think something so small could make such a difference, and here he was reaching out to them.

Katsuki grabs Deku's hand. No matter how much blood he has on these hands, he thinks, I will always love him. He pulls their arms up and briefly kisses the back of Deku's hand.

Deku looks up surprised at the sudden display of affection but Katsuki just smiles. Content with that Deku lays his head back down onto Katsuki's shoulder and they sit there in silence for the rest of the night just appreciating each others company.

Child hunt. Part 1

It's 9pm and already dark out. In the corner of a small room sits a skinny figure, furiously hitting the keys of his keyboard, buried in his research. The computer illuminates his face, the only source of light in the tiny room as everything near reflectes various shades of colour.

Switching through several different websites online Toshinori tries and fails to find the information he's been looking for. Whoever had told him that you could find practically anyone easily on the internet in this day and age was a damn liar.

He was looking for the kid from the villian attack and he's been looking for quite a while now, but it seemed to prove harder than he thought. He had tried looking at every school in the area to try and pinpoint the one he goes to by his uniform but it seems that most of the schools in Musutafu wore gakurans so it was impossible to figure out which specific school he attended. Toshinori had then tried looking through all the school websites in the area hoping that he might find something but that also proved futile.

Eventually Toshinori gave up on trying to figure out technology and called detective Tsukauchi who then proceeded to come over to make sure the number one hero wasn't doing anything too creepy.

Soon enough there was a knock on Toshinori's door and he went over to open it. Like expected, Tsukauchi was there waving as soon as the door opened and swiftly made his way inside before getting comfortable.

"Okay, so tell me what exactly your trying to find." He says arms crossed on a chair opposite Toshinori.

"I'm trying to find the boy from the villian attack." He answers as he makes his way back to his desk and his research. "I was thinking of giving him One for All."

Tsukauchi freezes. "Is that wise." He says, raising an eyebrow. "I mean you don't even know him."

"That's precisely why I'm looking for him, if he's really like I thought he would be then he's got all the qualities I'm looking for."

Tsukauchi simply nods, a look of uncertainty still evident on his face. "It's your quirk I guess, at the end of the day it's your decision."

"Thank you." Toshinori says. "But I'm afraid if I don't find him they'll be no point in that decision."

The detective sighs but eventually gives in. Letting go of the subject he stalks over to the hero's side, leaning over his shoulder to take a look at the hero's computer screen.

Staring silently for a few seconds at the pure chaos of the screen the detective looks over at Toshinori bewildered before asking, "Why didn't you just search up his name?"

"Wait that will work!" Toshinori gasps before scrambling to get onto a news article of the previous days attack.

Tsukauchi held back the urge to facepalm, instead sighing as he stops the hero from wasting his time. "I already know his name and school, I checked before coming here."

"Really?" Toshinori beamed. "Your such a good friend Tsukauchi, I should have called you from the beginning."

"The next time you're trying to find someone via the Internet, I ask that you please do. We don't need you accidentally stalking someone, it'll make you seem like a pedophile." Tsukauchi remarks.

Toshinori sweat drops as he rubs the back of his head, slightly embarrassed. He laughs it off turning back to his computer and closing all the irrelevant tabs. Tsukauchi looks around for a pen and paper while he does this, after easily finding some he writes the name and school of the boy from the attack. He hands it to the hero who inspects it.

"Aldera Junior High" Toshinori reads out loud from the paper. He looks up at the detective and smiles - or as much as a smile you can really call his expression - and thanks him.

With the important stuff out of the way, Toshinori offers to make tea and the detective happily accepts. They stay talking for the rest of the day, Toshinori avoiding all mention of his futile research on the internet, and Tsukauchi happily going with it.

Katsuki grumbles as his alarm rings. Looking to his side he finds that the mop of green hair who was next to him the night before was now gone. He sighs, getting up as he switches off his alarm. Katsuki hadn't gotten much sleep because of a certain someone, he'd spent most of the night looking over him but then when it's morning he leaves without even saying a word.

It was the middle of the night and Katsuki had been asleep when the nerd fucking kicked him in the stomach. That had pissed him off, but when he had fully awoken he realised the nerd was having a nightmare like he usually does. Katsuki sighed as he tapped Deku lightly in an attempt to wake him up, it took a few minutes but Deku woke up eventually, and when he did he was in tears.

It was the same nightmare that Deku has nearly every night. You would think he would grow use to it by now, but every time he would just feel worse, feeling so guilty every time he remembered that girl.

He didn't even remember how she looked like, Deku had told him, he only remembered the hair. Every night he would see a distorted face and no matter how much he tried it would never go into focus, the only part of the girl he could ever see clearly was the hair, the hair that shone bright like the sun, then would get brighter and brighter till he could see nothing else.

Katsuki has heard this dream enough times to know what happens by heart. Her hair would get bright and Deku would no longer be able to see, and in that moment of vulnerability he would feel the slight tickle of hair brushing against his face. He would hear her voice, her scream and each and every time he'd reach out, but as soon as he touched her his vision would clear and there laying on the ground would be the corpse of the girl, face distorted but everything else so very clear. A pool of blood would form and slowly morph into the words 'I'll always be with you' as the girl layed there still and quite.

It was always the same thing and it worried Katsuki how often he got the nightmares. He doubted that the nerd actually ever got much sleep, especially since most of the time he slept in this one abandoned building not that far away, which was prone to cause nightmares.

Every night that Deku would sleep with him Katsuki never got that much sleep, once the nightmares began he was to worried to leave Deku alone. He would watch him for most of the night, holding him close and making sure that the nerd always knew he was there, that nothing could hurt him. Sometimes holding him close made things worse, sometimes it made things better, either way Deku needed serious help but it's not like he could exactly get that.

Katsuki would stay up all night looking for solutions, looking for a way to stop his boyfriends nightmares but he could never come up with anything better than to be there with him. He couldn't think of anything that is until that bastard underground hero came into the picture. Katsuki had never actually met him, only heard about him from Deku, he didn't trust the guy but he knew Deku did wholeheartedly so he couldn't complain. He had to admit that Deku has been a little bit happier since meeting the underground hero, it meant that it was no longer just the two of them against the world, but now they had someone else to support and help them.

Katsuki didn't know what to think of Eraserhead. He'd always heard good things about him from Deku, but he still didn't know if he could really trust him. At this point though, Katsuki was desperate, he hated seeing Deku constantly trembling in his sleep, always in tears when he wakes up, dreading that moment when the cycle would just start all over again.

It would be incredibly hard for Deku to be able to get a therapist since his identity has to remain secret, so Eraserhead really is the only option. There was only one way though that Katsuki could possibly think of to get in contact with him, and even if he did his boyfriend can see his memories so doing this behind his back would be futile. There was no other choice though, Izuku would always say that he was fine even though he wasn't, and they both clearly knew that. He hated the idea of bothering others with his problems, or making them scared of him, feels like such a weird thing to worry about when he's a literal murder.

Katsuki sighs, somehow he's already gotten through his morning routine without registering a second of it. Now he's stood in the kitchen, sighing again he goes to get some eggs so he can make breakfast. Cooking helps him forget about everything for a bit, but all to soon he's done and the thoughts rush back to him.

Finishing his food it turns exactly 8 o'clock and he proceeds to start making his way to school like usual. The morning so far is exactly the same as it would be any other, waking up, getting into his morning routine and going to school. Everything was normal now but Katsuki knew that soon it wouldn't be, he knew once he got to school he wouldn't have enough time to think about Deku's problems because he'll be too busy dealing with the rumors and stories and the questions.

Katsuki dreaded every step he took towards the school. After getting attacked like that and it being all over the news, the people at school were bound to swarm him with questions. Atleast he had escaped from the villian himself though, that was one thing to brag about amongst the chaos.

Turning the corner, the school finally comes into sight. The entrance is busy as hundreds of kids flood in through the gate, some laughing with their friends, others quite and lonely. Katsuki sighs for what seems like the hundredth time that day but certainly won't be the last. Taking a deep breath he trudges to the entrance, ignoring the stares and whispers as he goes by.

As he gets nearer to the entrance the whispers just intensify. The students split in half, like moses splitting the red sea, as they make a path for him to go through, not wanting to get close to him like he was some kind of disease. Katsuki happily walks through but the path only brings him to the attention of the people who hadn't seen him before. Now everyone is staring and whispering and it's making Katsuki crazy.

His classroom feels like an eternity away but he just wants to get there and make all the whispers stop. But then he does, he arrives, the whispers not as much as before but still there as all his classmates look at him unsure of what to do.

Ignoring his classmates stares Katsuki walks up to his desk and sits down. Every second he can feel their stares following his every move not leaving for even a second. He can't escape and now he feels confined, he can't breath, he's suffocating, he can feel the slime, its ingulfing him, its-

"Yo Katsuki you okay?"

He looks around, the stares haven't ceased but now they're molded in with looks of worry. Looking to his right he sees one of the guys he hangs out with, their hand clasping his shoulder in panic.

"Get off me idiot." He says, shoving the extra off before standing up and turning to face the rest of his class. "And would you all stop staring at me, I'm not a fucking circus."

The extras all stopped staring as soon as they got called out and went back to their shitty lives. Soon enough the teacher came in and started class and everything was back to normal - except for the occasional concerned glances some of the extras sent his way.

It was when lunch came around that all hell broke lose.

Katsuki had spaced out and had no idea when the teacher had even left but now he's being bombarded by teenagers and no one to get them under control. Knowing this shitty school, Katsuki doubted the teachers would try to get them under control in the first place, probably would just stand there trying to get the gossip, it wouldn't be surprising if they were standing outside eavesdropping right now.

No one talked for a while just stared, a complete fucking repeat of the morning. It pissed Katsuki off and he didn't have the patience to deal with this shit. He shouted at the extras just like before in hopes that he won't end up having another panic attack infront of fucking everyone. Anyone who so much as brought that up was fucking dead. Eventually though someone did start talking causing a chain reaction of questions. Got Katsuki thinking that their stares were ten times better, atleast then they were silent.

Their questions just made things overwhelming, they were all talking over each other and Katsuki couldn't decipher a thing that anyone was saying. His lack of control of the situation only made Katsuki feel even more confined than he did before and it was annoying. It was as if anything, even completely unrelated, could trigger the memories. How could Katsuki ever become the number one hero if he was constantly being traumatised by a small incident like this. This whole thing just proved how weak he is and it infuriated him.

The anger just kept bubbling up. The more questions the more it swelled and his self hatred grew, his resolve faltered and he could no longer hold in his anger.

The questions continued, no sign of stopping, even if they did it would be to late.

Katsuki exploded.

Sitting alone in a classroom with a teacher Katsuki thinks back to how any of this even happened. That's right all his classmates had overwhelmed him. He had started secreting more nitroglycerin as his anger grew and he lost control. All he could remember after that was his scorched table and distraught faces. He glared at them and not even one person dared to say a word.

"If your so interested in the villian attack why don't I help you all to experience it yourselves." He glared at every one of them each at a time giving them a dose of what he had to endure. He could hear them all gulp as they slowly backed away from him.

It should have all ended at that but one stupid motherfucker had decided to open their mouth.

"You'd be a villian before you could ever be the number one hero." That's when Katsuki had snapped.

All he could remember next was strangling the fuck out of the bastard.

"The moment I become a villian you'll be my first target." He snarled. "I'll make sure to put you through the same fucking trauma the slime fucker did."

That's when the teachers had rushed in and diffused the situation. Then he was being scolded and told to sit and reflect on his actions. Katsuki was surprised they hadn't made his parents come to the school but he heard them make some shitty excuse of him being shaken up by the events from the day before, or something like that.

It really pissed Katsuki off, he didn't need the damn teachers making excuses for him he had to go to therapy now though so that pissed him off even more. Leaning back on his chair, he stares up at the ceiling. He closes his eyes and all the thoughts and worries he didn't have time for during the night all come rushing in. He sighs as he looks over to the teacher monitoring him and sees him preoccupied.

Taking out his phone he looks for Deku's contact. It doesn't take very long to find as his is the first one their and soon enough the phone is ringing and he's picking up.

'Hey Kacchan, what's up.' The familiar cheerful voice rings through the phone and all of Katsuki's worries seem to instantly fade away.

"I'm being forced to reflecton on my actions." He says glancing over to the teacher. It's obvious he knows what Katsuki is doing but he does nothing to stop him.

"Why, did you do something wrong." He asks. "It must be really bad if the teachers are making you reflecton on your actions."

Katsuki snorts. "I may or may not have strangled a guy."

Deku gasps. "Kacchan why would you do that, thats horrible." Says the literal murderer.

"The fucking bitch said that I'd become a villian."

"..." Silence.

"Deku are you still there."

"... Did you make sure to stab them with a pen too."

Katsuki pauses for a second but gets over it pretty quick. This side of Deku wasn't all that surprising. "That would only prove their point dumbass."

"So did strangling them." He says, clearly unimpressed.

"Give me a break Deku, since they were so interested in the villian attack I was merely giving them a sample of what I had to go through."

"You shouldn't have gone through all that trouble, you know I'd give them the full experience any day."

Katsuki rolls his eyes. "Okay, dial down the murderous intent would you."

Deku laughs on the other side of the phone and it makes Katsuki's heart flutter. It's such a sweet sound he could listen to it forever.

"Should I come over today Kacchan." He asks.

"Are you not busy."

"It doesn't matter it can wait. Your my first priority."

"Glad to know." Katsuki says looking over to the teacher who's now signalling for him to put his phone away. He sighs. "Deku I've got to go, I'll call you once I leave."

"That's fine Kacchan, cya later."

Then all too soon Katsuki is hanging up the phone and is left in silence again with nothing but his thoughts.

Standing outside of Aldera junior high is a suspicious looking skinny man who's been glancing and pacing around the school for quite some time now. Accompanying him is a ten times less suspicious man who's in charge of making sure his friend doesn't do anything wierd, he's clear failing though.

Soon enough the time is 3:15 and the school gates are opening. About 5 minutes later some students have filed out but the skinny mans target has yet to leave. Getting impatient he goes over to a student, sighing Tsukauchi follows him.

"Excuse me." Toshinori says.

The student looks a bit startled but quickly morphs into a look of distraught and confusion. "Yes." The student says backing up a little.

Taking the hint Toshinori backs up as well before asking, "Would you happen to know where Bakugo Katsuki is."

The student look skeptical and didn't say anything for quite a while. Stepping in to save his friend from immense embarrassment, Tsukauchi takes out his police badge.

Gulping, the student finally gives in. "He's being scolded so should be out in less than half an hour." He says before quickly running away.

Tsukauchi gives the hero a pointed look who just shrugs. "Their might be a good reason."

Tsukauchi sighs for who knows what, time that day. "I know I said that it's your choice, but now I'm even more convinced it's a terrible one."

"Okay why don't we do this, I'll train him for a few months but won't tell him about my quirk. If I get to know him and decide he's a bad choice then I'll continue training him but my quirk will remain a secret."

Tsukauchi glares at the hero but it's pointless as he knows for a fact Toshinori won't let this go. "Fine then," He sighs. "We'll do it your way, but recovery girl will have to agree with your choice by then."

Toshinori nods, "Sounds good."

Finally being let out of that hell hole, Katsuki walks to the front gate. Bag slung over his shoulder and his other hand in his pocket. He trudges to the entrance ignoring the whispers now talking about the incident that occurred in his classroom. There wasn't many people anyway, most were at club activities and others had already left so everything was easy to handle.

Finally making it to the entrance Katsuki barely holds in a sigh of relief, but of course that relief is short lived as some man looking like a twig suddenly comes up to him.

He tries his best to avoid him but the man steps infront of him blocking his direction. Katsuki growls.

"Could you move old man, I've already dealt with enough shit today."

The man frowns and some guy in a trench coat who seemed to have come out of nowhere gave the twig a look that said I told you so. Whatever that meant Katsuki hated it and just wanted to get out of the damn place. He growls again.

Flinching a bit the twig finally speaks. "Your Bakugo Katsuki, correct."

"So what if I am." He growls, glaring at the man with his fist clenched.

The twig gulps, "R-right, well you see... how should I explain this." The man stutters only causing Katsuki's glare to deepen. "Well you see, I'd like to train you."

Child hunt. Part 2

Sitting cross legged on a roof, Izuku looks up to Aizawa who's sitting next to him. The man is sipping coffee completely focused on the world bellow. Eventually noticing the boys stare, Aizawa looks over to him with a blank expression on his face.

"All Might offered to train Kacchan." Izuku blurts out all of a sudden.

"Huh." Aizawa says blinking at the boy in disbelief.

"I said All Might offered to train Kacchan yesterday." Izuku repeats putting some emphasis this time on his words.

"Ohh, good for him. That's a great opportunity." The man says sarcastically.

Oblivious to the mans tone however Izuku beams. "I know right, it's amaz - ow ow, stop it."

Squeezing Izuku's head he glares at him. "And what could possibly be going through your head to make you think that this was the right time to say that."

"I'm sorry, it's just so cool and I just had to say it and ow-" Aizawa squeezes harder. "Sorry, sorry I'll focus, just let go."

The hero sighs but let's Izuku go anyway. He pats his head a few times in apology before returning his gaze back to the world bellow. Izuku slumps his shoulders as he pouts, quickly glancing over to him Aizawa sighs again.

Everything is silent for a while before Aizawa restarts the conversation and asks, "How did he even meet All Might?"

Instantly perking up, Izuku turns his attention to the underground hero. "He said All Might was waiting for him outside his school."

"Why on earth was All Might waiting outside his school out of all places." Aizawa says looking displeased.

Izuku shrugs. "Apparently, All Might had thought Kacchan had potential during the sludge villian attack so decided to look for him and train him." He states as he starts rocking back and forth a little.

"That's right he'd been attacked. How is he, I know something like that can be quite a harrowing experience." Aizawa says as he slightly changes his sitting position, not taking his eyes off the ground the whole time.

Izuku nods. "He kept saying he was fine but then he ended up having a panic attack."

"You two are so alike." Aizawa mumbles to himself.

"Huh?"

"Nothing. So is he fine or not?" Izuku shakes his head.

"More or less, he's basically fine but I feel like it's going to haunt him for quite a while." Izuku looks up to the sky.

"Yeah that makes sense." Aizawa says as he nods. "From what you've told me about your boyfriend I'm guessing he probably hates how much it effects him." Grabbing Izuku's head once more he pulls it so its facing back down. "Focus."

Izuku groans as he rolls his eyes. "He probably does, he snapped at school and ended up strangling a kid." Aizawa turns to him, a look of pure shock on his normally blank face. "Some kid had said he'd probably end up being a villian or something like that, cause he had shouted at them all to stop staring at him."

Slowly morphing back to his normal expression Aizawa sighs. "He should probably get a therapist, especially if he's going to enroll at UA."

"Yeah, he's being forced to get one."

"That's good, it'll really help him in the long run." Izuku nods.

Things go silent again for a while and just like before Aizawa speaks again. "So how did things with All Might turn out, did it cause a scene at your school."

Izuku shakes his head. "Not at all, it was actually kind of wierd."

"You want to train me?" All Might still in his skinny form nods as Kacchan tries his best not to snap at him. "And who the fuck are you anyway."

"Ah right, you don't know who I am do you." All Might awkwardly laughs as he scratches his cheek. Eventually composing himself he looks over to the guy in the trench coat who just shrugs. Sighing, All Might turns back and continues. "I'm All Might."

Kacchan snorts. "Yeah and I'm Hawks."

All Might sighs. "It's understandable that you don't believe me since I'm currently in this form, if you follow me to somewhere more private I could prove it to you."

Kacchan's mode instantly sours as he glares daggers at the man standing infront of him. "What is this, are you trying to kidnap me or something-"

"What no! Of course not!" The hero says as he flails his arms in the air trying to defend himself. "Why would you even think that."

"Why would I think that? I don't know, maybe because you've probably been walking around this school for half an hour, you look suspicious as fuck, and you just told me that we should go somewhere private." Kacchan growls, still glaring into the hero's soul. "Oh right, and you just said that your fucking All Might. Even if your not trying to kidnap me something fishy is definitely going on."

The hero just stands there speechless and unsure of what to do. Eventually snapping out of it he turns back over to the guy in the trench coat before asking, "Do I really seem that suspicious?"

The guy only sighs, not bothering to answer the question as he walks up to Kacchan. Flashing him his police badge he says, "I assure you nothing bad will happen to you"

Kacchan throws his bag on the floor, both fists clenched as he stares angrily at the both of them. "Like hell that gives me any assurance, you two could be working together for all I know."

"Young Bakugo please calm dow-."

"Don't tell me to calm down! I don't have time for this shit, can I not just go home and act like everything is fine! Why are you only adding to all the shit that's happened to me these past few days!" Kacchan receives a few worried glances from the people nearby. It's not until he realises that he shouted pretty loud does he calm down.

Relaxing a little, Kacchan slumps his shoulders as he takes a deep breath in and out. Ignoring the baffled expressions of the two men infront of him, he retrieves his bag and proceeds to circle around them in an attempt to get home.

Tsukauchi, being the first to snap out of the shock immediately grabs Kacchan's arm before he can leave. Turning around Kacchan glares at him.

"Let. Go. Of. Me."

Doing as he says the detective lets go. He brushes of his coat and after trying to reorganise himself he says, "I understand how this all seems suspicious and why you would be skeptical, and although I don't like the idea of Toshinori training you this is what he wants so I ask if you would atleast give him the chance to prove himself." Kacchan flinches at the sincerity of the detective and relaxes for a moment.

"Why should I follow you."

"It doesn't have to be any place special, we can go somewhere near a main road if you want so you'll be able to scream for help if that will make you feel better." Kacchan pauses thinking for a while.

"Fine." he finally says giving in.

"Wait really, you'll come." All Might exclaims.

"Yeah." Kacchan says. "Just know though, if you even lay a finger on me or do a single thing to harm me, things won't end well for you."

"Is that a threat?" The detective says, raising eyebrow.

Katsuki snorts as they start to walk and he follows. "I never said I'm the one who'll make you regret it."

Leaving the main road they approach a deserted street. It was far away enough to give them privacy but close enough to the main road that someone could instantly come to the rescue if they heard screaming.

All Might and the detective stopped as did Kacchan, turning around to face him All Might smiles.

"Is the safe enough for you?" The hero asks.

"Is this private enough for you?" Kacchan replies, mocking the hero who just laughs good naturedly.

"Yes it is young Bakugo, I'm glad we were able to come to an agreement." The hero says smiling. "So are you ready."

Kacchan nods. "Go on then, I've got places to be."

It all happened so quickly yet it wasn't quick at all. One second a skinny man had been standing there them all of a sudden there was smoke and it was almost as if he was inflating like a balloon. Like he had said there stood All Might standing in the same position that the skinny man had been.

Staring in bewilderment, Kacchan is speechless. He looks up at the hero, his trademark smile etched onto his face, the clothes that were once baggy and oversized now snuggly fitted around his muscles.

Kacchan opened his mouth then closed it again, he repeated this cycle a few more times making him look kind of like a fish. The hero just laughed while the detective just wore a smug smile.

"So what do you think young Bakugo. Is this enough proof for you."

Snapping out of his shock Kacchan forces a scowl on his face. "Your gonna need a lot more than that to get me to believe you. Even if you are All Might that doesn't explain anything."

"Ah, right." The hero says, and with another puff of smoke he returns to his original form. "I can explain this to him, right Tsukauchi?" He asks, turning to his friend.

The detective just shrugs leaving the decision to the hero. All Might turns to face Kacchan once again as he starts to talk. "Well then," He says. "Lets start with this." The hero pulls up his shirt revealing a terrible injury. Kacchan gags.

"I got this injury six years ago fighting against a villian. I've lost my stomach and my respiratory system is severely damaged. Long story short I've been reduced to only three hours a day in that form.

Katsuki just stares at the hero, not knowing what to say. He tries to focus on the hero's face but his eyes can't help wondering back down to the injury. He starts to shake slightly as he tries his best to take a deep breath in.

"What kind of villian could have injured you so bad."

"You don't need to worry about that." All Might says. "The villian is gone and will never come back to harm anyone ever again." The assurance does little to help Kacchan.

Looking down to the ground Kacchan kicks the dirt. "Whatever, I believe you I guess."

"Glad to hear." A smile appears on All Might's face. "So would you like to accept my offer."

"No." Kacchan says as he looks up to meet the hero's gaze.

The pro hero's smile falters for a second but he immediately gains back his composer.

"Why?" He asks. "Is there something you still don't believe."

"It's the fact that you would want to train me out of all people." Katsuki says. "What could you possibly gain from training me, and even if it's because of what happened yesterday I doubt you'd really want to train me after finding out my personality."

The hero tilts his head in confusion. "But I just asked again now didn't I?"

"Well yeah, but you can't really take back your fucking words now can you." Kacchan says glaring at the hero for who knows what time what past hour. How his eyes don't hurt from the same expression all day long is beyond Izuku.

"That is not true, if I didn't want to train you anymore then I wouldn't have proved my identity to you and would have just left. Plus Tsukauchi has already told you that this is all my will, I'm not about to abandon you cause you've got a little spirit."

"A little more spirit than necessary, that's for sure." Tsukauchi says, more to himself but they all hear him. Katsuki scowls as he crosses his arms.

"To be honest the way you handled and got through yesterday's predicament has motivated me to train you so that's what I'm going to do."

"None of that fucking matters though." Kacchan growls causing a look of confusion on All Might's face.

"How does none of that matter."

"Cause it would have fucking killed me anyway if you hadn't been there. I got out by myself but what was the point if it was going to get me again straight after."

"Is that what you think." All Might asks. Katsuki nods reluctantly. "But you don't know what would have happened. He may of gotten you again but you could have just escaped again. Or that moment, another hero could have done something, or maybe your survival instinct could have kicked in and you would have blasted it away."

"What's your point."

"My point is that you don't know what could have happened so don't bring yourself down because of it. Your an amazing person and stayed alive that long because of that."

Katsuki snorts. "I don't need your inspirational shit."

All Might smiles, "I'm the symbol of peace, 'inspirational shit' as you call it is what I do."

"That wasn't what I was expecting to happen." Aizawa says tossing his now finished coffee to the side.

"I told you it was weird."

Aizawa snorts, "weird is an understatement. If it wasn't for the fact that we both probably shouldn't know about this I would never let All Might live this moment down." Izuku laughs.

"So I guess you know about his other form now." Izuku nods.

"Did you already know?" He asks Aizawa.

"Yeah." He answers. "All the teachers at UA have been made aware since All Might is going to start working there from next year."

"Wait really." Izuku exclaims jumping onto Aizawa.

"Get off me and keep on watching." Aizawa says, pushing Izuku's head so its facing the ground bellow. "Yes All Might is going to work at UA, I literally just said that. Don't tell anyone about this though, not even your boyfriend."

Izuku nods. "I promise I won't tell anyone."

"Good." Aizawa says and everything goes silent once again.

Looking over to Izuku, Aizawa smirks. "Atleast with the help of All Might your boyfriend is guaranteed to get into UA."

"Kacchan was guaranteed to get into UA with or without All Might's help." Izuku says as if it was a well known fact.

"Oh yeah, and what makes you so sure." Aizawa teases.

Izuku pouts and crosses his arms, "Of course he could get in on his own, Kacchan is the best. And plus he's my boyfriend so of course his close range and stealth skills are excellent."

"Your sounding a little cocky."

"I'm just stating facts."

Aizawa laughs, "Well I guess it doesn't really matter if he could get in on his own or not."

"Yeah, I guess." Izuku says. "Either way he's still Kacchan and he'll still be amazing so that's all that matters."

Training and Therapy

Chapter Notes

> Sorry, sorry, sorry! 🙏🙏🙏
> I'm so sorry for not updating in quite a while I'm an absolute idiot that just completely forgot.

Arriving at a beach Katsuki looks over the landscape. The beach is filled with trash and scrapped parts all either abandoned there or washed up from the sea. Katsuki remembers this beach from his childhood, how it used to be so clear and beautiful, now it was a mess and deserted and it was almost impossible for him to see the sea through the pile of trash. He wasn't complaining though, it might be a shame that such a beautiful place had been destroyed like that but he had to admit it was the perfect place to train, plus Katsuki could explode as much shit as he wanted here and no one could complain if he said he was cleaning it.

With a determined smile on his face Katsuki proceeds to set down his bag and multiple water bottles on an area of sand not taken up by rubbish. Not seeing anyone around yet he takes the initiative and starts stretching. It's around five minutes later when All Might, in his twig form arrives at the beach.

Katsuki stands up straight as the twig approaches, all fired up. The hero blinks in suprise a few times to find the boy he just recently met already warmed up and ready to go.

"Well your certainly fired up." He says grinning.

"Hell yeah I am, can finally explode some shit." He says raising his fist in the air.

"Well you'll definitely be a lot to handle." Coming out of seemingly nowhere the detective walks up to the two of them. His previous excitement instantly depleting Katsuki scowls, he didn't like the detective very much.

"Why are you here?" He asks, scowl deepening.

"To make sure everything goes smoothly." He replies with an oblivious smile on his face.

"And why wouldn't everything go smoothly."

"I don't know, maybe because of All Might's new troublesome student."

"Hah! Say that again bastard."

"Okay, okay would you both relax." All Might jumps in between the two in an attempt to calm them down. Katsuki grits his teeth as he turns away from the detective who has now backed up and is leaning on a fridge.

Seeing that the two have calmed down now, All Might proceeds to get started.

"Why don't we get formalities out of the way first before we start training." Katsuki scowls, he wanted to hurry up and start training. "Okay then as you know I'm All Might but please use my name, Toshinori Yagi when I'm in this form."

Katsuki nods, "Yagi-sensei then." He says trying his best to keep that name locked up in his brain. "I'm Katsuki Bakugo, but you already know that. My quirk is explosion, you also know my school as well, somehow."

"Ahaha, You can learn a lot about someone by searching up their name on the internet." Yagi-sensei laughs awkwardly while the detective snorts, clearly aware that that was the complete opposite of what the hero had done. "Anyway, it's your turn now Tsukauchi."

"Naomasa Tsukauchi, I'm a detective as you know and my quirk is lie detector." The detective directs that last part at Katsuki but all he can do is grit his teeth and glare. So what if his quirk was a fucking lie detector, its not like Katsuki has lied about anything.

"Great, now that that's out of the way we can-"

"Oh am I late."

Yagi-sensei's sentence is interrupted as an old woman wearing a lab coat and a syringe poking out of her hair walks up to them.

"Ah, Recovery girl, I didn't know you were coming."

"I called her over, I told you I'd only accept if recovery girl does by then." Says the detective. Katsuki has no idea what they're talking about but his confusion is overrode by the frustration of an interruption.

"Ah, okay then that's fine." Yagi-sensei turns to recovery girl. "We were just doing introductions so we haven't started yet."

"Right then." The old woman turns towards Katsuki. "My name is Chiyo Shuzenji, also known as recovery girl but your free to call me whatever you want." Katsuki just nods, although he knew there was no way he could remember all these names.

"Ah, right one more thing." Katsuki turns to face Yagi-sensei. "I ask that you don't tell anyone about me training you." Well shit.

"I've already told my boyfriend."

"Your what?" Katsuki glares at the detective making a huge commotion behind him. "You've got a boyfriend."

"Why do you sound so surprised asshole."

"Now I see what you meant by high spirited." Not granny too, if they've got a problem with how Katsuki speaks they should deal with it.

"You told your boyfriend." All Might says looking a little worried Katsuki nods.

"See he's already told someone, my doubts are only growing."

"Shut up bastard, he can read memories so he'd know either way."

"Well that's a troublesome power." Says recovery girl.

"It's fine he won't tell nobody." Nobody except that damn Eraserhead.

"And how can you be so sure, him being your boyfriend doesn't mean that much."

"I'm sure idiot, we've known each other since we were kids, he won't tell anyone." Would this count as a lie, Katsuki really hopes not. How did the guys quirk work anyway.

"It's fine, just don't tell anyone else okay." Granny says hitting the asshole in the leg. "And you, stop acting so immature." The detective rolls his eyes but nods.

"Okay so can we get started now." A chorus of nods signal the start of training and Katsuki gets fired up once again.

"Let's start then."

"Aizawa, I'm here." Walking up into an alleyway Izuku looks around. "Where are you?"

"Up here kid." Looking up Izuku finds Aizawa on the roof of a building looking down at him. Going over to meet him Izuku jumps up onto a bin so he can scale up the wall.

Finally making it to the top Izuku goes to sit opposite Aizawa who's now standing in the middle of the roof.

"So why'd you wanna see me." Izuku asks, a wide smile on his face.

With a complete contrast to the boys expression, Aizawa sits infront of Izuku. This should have been Izuku's first sign that this wasn't going to be like their normal meetings.

"Nightmares." Aizawa states with a dead serious expression on his face. If he saw the smile on Izuku's face falter for a second he didn't comment on it.

"Nightmares?" Izuku repeats a fake smile now plastered on his face and his head tilted to the side. "What do you mean."

"That boyfriend of yours called me."

"Wait what!" Izuku exclaims scampering onto his feet. "Kacchan called you, he doesn't even have your number."

"He used your phone." Aizawa says, completely calm as the boy infront of him starts muttering on about betrayal or something like that.

It takes a while for Izuku to calm down, and now that he's sat back down he refuses to meet Aizawa's gaze. "Why would he tell you, I've already told him that I'm fine."

Aizawa sighs, "Deku, your a 14 year old kid who's murdered hundreds. It shouldn't be surprising that you have nightmares and I'm sorry I didn't realise sooner."

"How could you have realised, it's not like I've ever slept when your around."

"I don't need to see it firsthand for me to realise. I should have thought about your mental health and investigated a little, it was stupid for me to not even consider the mental strain you put on yourself."

"It's fine, I can handle it myself."

Aizawa sighs again. "The other day you told me that your boyfriend kept insisting he was fine about the villian attack but ended up having a panic attack." Izuku nods. "How did that make you feel."

Izuku frowns a little, confused. "It made me upset."

"So how do you think it makes your boyfriend feel for you to say your fine when you're so clearly not."

"But it's the truth, I don't need help, they're just nightmares."

"Just nightmares. Nightmares are serious you know and it's obvious your boyfriend knows that, otherwise he wouldn't be so desperate to call me, someone he doesn't even know personally."

"When did this even happen anyway."

"Kacchan it's totally amazing that All Might wants to train you but please don't doubt yourself like that again."

Laying on his bed Katsuki waves is hand in acknowledgement. "Yeah whatever."

"Hey Kacchan I'm serious, you shouldn't doubt yourself like that" Deku says as he shakes Katsuki. A little annoyed Katsuki ends up pushing him away.

With a humph Deku comes back stronger, this time shaking him with a little force.

"Kacchan would you listen to me."

Pissed off now Katsuki pushes him away once more. "I'm listening idiot, I already said that I wouldn't doubt myself."

"You said, yeah whatever." Coming back over to Katsuki Deku straddles him so they're now looking face to face. "You need to promise me that you won't doubt yourself."

With a sigh Katsuki finally gives in, but it was hard not to with the intense stare being directed his way. "I promise not to doubt myself, now stop staring at me like that."

"Like what?" He asks.

"Like your gonna rip my throat out if I don't answer the way you want me too."

"I don't look like that."

"Yes you do idiot, now get off me."

Deku does as he says as he slowly gets of Katsuki with a pout then lies right next to him on the bed.

"Kacchan I'm hungry." He says out of nowhere.

"Then go eat." Katsuki replies back, not even sparing a glance his way.

"But Kacchaaan," He says prolonging the a. "Aren't you going to cook for me."

"Like hell I am, go warm something up from the fridge."

"But I want your cooking."

"Well you can't always get what you want can you, I'd advise you go eat now cause I'm not giving you money to go and buy whatever junk you eat when you leave."

"Urgh, fine." Deku reluctantly gets up as he trudges to the kitchen.

Katsuki feeling a little guilty now decides to get up and follow him when he sees Deku's phone lying on the bed. At first he thought nothing of it but then remembered how he had been meaning to get in contact with Eraserhead.

Going over to grab the phone he then proceeds to lock the door just incase Deku came back in. Unlocking the nerds phone with ease, Katsuki scrolls through Deku's contacts till he finds the one he's looking for.

Contemplating whether to just copy his number onto his phone or call using Deku's he ends up deciding to use Deku's as the pro hero might not answer an unknown call. Hitting the call button the phone only rings once before the hero is picking up.

"Hey kid, you don't usually call me like this, what's going on."

"Is this Eraserhead." Although clearly unable to see him Katsuki could tell that the hero freezes.

"Who is this and why do you have Deku's phone?"

"I'm his boyfriend dumbass, Katsuki Bakugo." The other end of the phone is silent for a while and Katsuki's wondering if he's hung up.

"Your his boyfriend?" He finally speaks.

"Yeah."

"Why are you calling me, did something happen to Deku."

"No he's safe."

"Then what happened."

Katsuki takes a deep breath, not bothering to question if the hero was a good idea or not. "I'm worried about him, he's been having really bad nightmares."

"Nightmares?"

"Yeah, ever since I could remember."

"Why are you the one calling me then, why not him."

"Because the idiot keeps insisting that he's fine when he's so clearly not."

"Why am I not surprised."

"The hell is that supposed to mean."

He sighs. "I understand how it would be hard for him to get help on that because of his identity. I get that I'm probably one of the only options you have to get help from but why me."

"Huh, what do you mean."

"Why are you contacting me, someone who you've never met and have only heard about from your boyfriend."

"Because he fucking trusts you with all his heart."

"Do you trust me?"

"Of course I fucking don't, I'm not so stupid that I would trust anyone just because Deku does. But that's not what matters, it doesn't matter if I fucking trust you cause there'd be no point in you helping him if he didn't trust you."

"Your very high spirited aren't you." Why the fuck did everyone keep telling him that. " I'll help you since it's for Deku, plus I can tell you care about him a lot."

"Of course I do, he's the only one I've got."

"Then I'll make sure to help him as best as I can with his nightmares, and I'm sorry for not thinking that he was probably going through something like this. It's obvious that he's probably going through a mental struggle and I should have dug deeper on that."

"You don't have to fucking apologise, Deku's good at hiding stuff he really doesn't want you to know." That's one thing that pissed Katsuki off about the nerd.

"Good at hiding things or not I should have thought about his mental health more."

"Whatever, your going to help him right. I don't like seeing him waking up in tears."

"Yes, I'll help him to the best of my ability."

"...I'd appreciate that."

Izuku groans as Aizawa just stares at him, dead set on having this talk.

"I'm not a professional therapist but I'm a mentor at UA so I know what I'm doing."

"Is that meant to make me feel better?"

"It's meant to make you feel secure. I'm here to help you so would you please let me."

"I don't need your help, if something happens I can handle it myself."

"You know you said the exact same thing when we first met. I guess there hasn't been much progress in our relationship."

"What's that supposed to mean."

"It means that we say we trust each other but how true is that."

"But I do trust you."

"Then trust me enough to help you, you can't handle everything by yourself, the world just doesn't work like that."

Izuku doesn't say anything for a while as he tries to think of what to do, his finger resting on his lip as he looks down at the ground completely focused. Aizawa patiently waits for him to make a decision.

It's about three minutes later when Izuku finally looks up at Aizawa.

"Your not going to let me leave are you." Aizawa nods as Izuku sighs.

"I'll tell you then."

More training and therapy

Shota is sitting in the middle of a roof as he listens to what Deku has to say.

"Where should I start." The kid asks.

"You can start wherever you want, explaining all the different nightmares you've had might be a good place to start."

"I don't really have many different nightmares, it's mostly the same one."

"That's fine it makes sense, nightmares can be driven by a lot of things like trauma or a guilty conscience. Considering how many people you've killed -"

"They're not about the people I killed." They're not, Shota thought. "I rarely have nightmares about the people I've killed."

Shota doesn't show a physical reaction but inside is a little distressed. He knows that doesn't mean that the kid doesn't care about the people he's killed or feel anything but it's worrying if that's what it does mean.

"What are your nightmares about then?"

"Deku takes a deep breath as he looks down at his fidgeting fingers. "When I was six," he starts, "I got kidnapped but I think that's public knowledge." Shota nods.

"That was the start of your career." Shota says, a statement more than a question.

"Yeah, I was kidnapped and all the kids were put in a room. Every night someone would be sold off and it was only a matter of time till it was me."

"That must have been scary."

"Yeah it was. You never knew if you were going to be sold off next, and then waking up to find another person gone..." The kid pauses.

"Take your time." The kid nods but continues straight after.

"Eventually there was about five of us left and there was this one kid, I can't remember what he looked like but I remember he had horns." Shota nods urging him to continue. "He got upset that I was the only one without a quirk canceling collar but hadn't done anything."

"Why hadn't you done anything?"

"Cause I was quirkless, well that's what I was told, it turns out I did have a quirk." Well this was news, this information could change a lot.

"It must be really upsetting to know that you did have the power to get you all out of there but found out too late."

Deku nods. "There was this one girl who stood up for me. I don't remember her face, I don't remember anyone's face from that day but I remember her blonde hair which shone like the sun. And her name, I remember her name, it was Akira Taiyo."

"That was the girl who was found dead right?" Izuku nods. "Okay, continue." Shota was getting an idea of what happened and he wasn't liking it.

"She was the first person who had ever been nice to me when they found out I was quirkless. Because of this I guess I ended up really wanting to protect her."

"Okay, that's understandable, you must have gone through quite a bit of discrimination after all."

"Yeah, it was pretty bad but it was bareable. Even with my mother, after we found out I was quirkless she just ignored me most of the time and didn't even acknowledge my existence. But then that girl, that girl who didn't even know me accepted me so quickly and didn't even question anything. Of course I'd want to protect someone like that."

He shifts a little as he looks up to the sky trying his best not to cry.

"But I guess I did more harm than good by protecting her."

They were finally, getting started and Katsuki was pumped up and ready to go. Not even the detective asshole could sour his mode.

"Right then first things first, tell me everything about your quirk." Yagi-sensei says clapping his hands together.

"My quirk is explosion, I sweat nitroglycerin and the I can ignite it."

"So that's why you brought that many water bottles. Glad to know you can handle yourself." Granny chimes in.

"Yeah, if I use my quirk too much I get dehydrated."

"Well then I'll keep that in mind." Yagi-sensei says. "Anything else."

"Uhh, I can only ignite the nitroglycerin in my palms. And that other day when you offered to train me, my classmates overwhelmed me and I lost control."

"That's why you were getting scolded?" Yagi-sensei asks.

"Partly." The adults wait for an explanation but soon enough it becomes clear that they're not going to get one, Yagi-sensei continues.

"That's fine we all tend to lose control sometimes."

"Yeah but not explosive control." Maybe if Katsuki ignores the asshole he can pretend he's not there.

"Well that comes with his quirk after all." Granny says smacking the asshole on his leg. The old woman is now officially one of Katsuki's favourite people. "One more thing dear. Knowing the effects of nitroglycerin can you tell me any medical effects your quirk has?"

Katsuki answered effortlessly having been put through the stress his quirk gives him countless times even when not using it. "Sometimes I can have really bad migraines but those have decreased so I don't get them often, apparently it's due to me gaining a tolerance to it overtime. Although sometimes my blood pressure fluctuates quite drastically cause of the nitroglycerin in my blood stream."

Granny nods as she thinks for a second. "That makes sense, it seems like you know how to handle yourself though so I think it will be fine for you lot to train without me here. I'll look at your medical record later just incase there's something that my attention should be brought to."

A few minutes pass as Katsuki and recovery girl talk about the effects and drawbacks to his quirk until they finally begin training.

"Right then, let's do this. I want you to start by making the smallest explosion you can." Katsuki looks over to Yagi-sensei confused, why the hell was he supposed to make a tiny explosion.

Yagi-sensei just looks at him expectantly so giving in Katsuki does as he says. He opens his palm, faced up towards the sky and let's lose a couple of sparks. He turns back to Yagi-sensei.

"Perfect." He says. "Now make the largest explosion you can." Now this was what Katsuki was talking about.

"If I'm gonna do that we should go do it over the sea." Katsuki warns.

"Why, could it really be that big." The detective teases, Katsuki grit his teeth as the detective droned on. They all went towards the sea so Katsuki could let of his explosion.

Spreading his feet wide apart and bending his knees a little, he holds on to his wrist to brace himself. If All Might wanted the strongest thats what he was going to damn get, Katsuki would love every second of proving the detective asshole wrong. Taking a deep breath Katsuki let's off an explosion. The water ripples and the flames continue licking the surface of it up to five meters away. The flames dance in the air as the explosion starts to settle and tiny bits of ash fall to the ground.

The first thing Katsuki does is look over to the detective who's mouth is now hanging open. He smirks causing the man to just scoff.

"Good work I guess." Katsuki's shit eating grin only grew and he could feel the detectives annoyance practically radiating off of him.

"That was amazing young Bakugo. Although may I ask if there was a reason you held onto your wrist like that." Yagi-sensei asks.

"Big explosions have a recoil on my shoulders."

"That's what I thought, we'll have to get shoulder braces for you to increase the effectiveness of your quirk." Granny says.

"Ok then, you've got amazing power and you've got a wide range of control over your quirk." Yagi-sensei says. So that's why he had asked him to make the smallest explosion he can. "We can look at control another day but for now I want you to let out an explosion for the shortest time you can and the longest time you can, stop if the strain on your muscles become to much."

Katsuki had no idea what this was supposed to show, maybe it was still control but All Might had moved on from that. Whatever, Katsuki did as Yagi-sensei said anyway. He lets out a single spark then looking over to Yagi-sensei who gives him a go ahead. He sets a moderately large explosion and this time holds it for over a minute.

"Well done, your quirk has got great durability, we can work on your physical durability another time. We're going to test out power now, I'm going to give you some stuff to explode varying in size and strength."

Katsuki nods as the twig goes over to the pile of junk and starts taking things out. A while later and he's back, holding a few items which look way to heavy for him. He sets down a plastic bottle, a toaster and a few other scrap parts. He hands Katsuki the plastic bottle and on All Might's signal he explodes it.

They go through a few other items till finally Yagi-sensei gives Katsuki the toaster. Exploding the toaster would be a little bit harder than everything else but Katsuki could still explode it easily.

Motioning for them all to step back they do as he says as Katsuki prepares to explode the toaster. Bracing him self he explodes it and scraps of metal end up flying everywhere.

Once the scraps and ash finally settles they all regroup in the center to hear All Might's evaluation.

"You really do have excellent control of your quirk, you can adjust your power output based on what your destroying which will help you save your energy and sweat in the long run. Although we'll have to work on minimising the damage you cause, in the future you'll have to worry about the people around you and how your fight will affect them so its better to look at that now." Katsuki nods, taking a mental note of everything All Might just said.
"Well then that's about everything. Do you have anything else you could possibly show us with your quirk?"

"I've been working on a way to fly using my quirk."

"How ambitious." Commented the detective.

"And how's that going for you?" Granny asks smacking the detective once again with her cane, Katsuki's convinced that he must have a bruise by now.

"I'm able to stay up in the sky for a while but moving around is hard. I have to get better at changing the angle and power of my blasts mid air so I can change direction."

Yagi-sensei raises his hand to his chin as he thinks for a while." I might not be able to help you that much with flying but we can work on it occasionally. I'll ask around for advice on flying but for now show us what your able to do right now."

Katsuki nods as he steps back a little from the adults. Bending his knees, he holds his palms flat out. Letting out explosions he rises into the air, stumbling a little he increases the output in his left hand to balance himself. He stays in the air for a few more seconds before coming back down, the landing isn't perfect but he manages to stay on his feet the whole time.

"It seems like balance is another attribute you excel at, that'll certainly make mastering this technique easier. Although going up and moving left and right are completely different things which I have no idea how to help you with." Yagi-sensei says walking up to Katsuki.

Granny does the same while the detective hangs back a little. "I'm sure you'll be able to master it if you study some videos online, there should be quite a lot. I'll also help as best as I can by asking around although I won't always be able to attend your training, I am a very busy woman after all."

"When is the next training day anyway." The detective asks.

"That's right, we only agreed to twice a week we didn't specify which days though did we. What days are you available young Bakugo?"

"I'm forced to go therapy on Fridays but any other day I'm free."

"You know therapy isn't a bad thing, it's meant to help you." Granny says.

Katsuki grits his teeth and crosses his arms. "I don't need therapy."

"Whether you think you need it or not its going to help you, and since your planning on going to UA I advise you get used to it now." Katsuki just groans but says nothing more on the subject.

Taking that as a cue to speak, Yagi-sensei claps his hands together. "Right then, in that case how about Saturday."

Katsuki nods. "Saturday is fine."

"I won't be coming on Saturday. It's not like you really need me anyway so I'll come to the training sessions once in a while, but you should just assume that I'm not coming." The detective says. Katsuki may have been a little too happy about the fact he wouldn't have to see him again for a while.

"Looks like training will be just us two fo a while. Well then on this note let's stop here for today."

"Already." Katsuki still has energy to spare.

"We've been at this for quite a while and today was only a few tests to see what your capable of, there isn't really anything else we can work on today."

"Plus you should get some rest, I bet you've already had a long day at school so you should give yourself time to relax a bit." Granny adds on.

"Fine, I get it we're done, I'll leave now." Katsuki goes over to where his bag is and takes a large gulp of water before putting the now empty bottles inside. Picking it up, he puts it on then takes out his phone to text Deku that he can come over if he wants to.

Worst mistake of his life.

Shota sighs as he pinches the bridge of his nose. He leans back a little resting most of his weight on his hand as he looks up to the sky. Deku had already left long ago but Shota was still sat in the same place not even attempting to get up.

Deku had explained everything that had happened in his childhood - leaving out the specifics of his quirk and many other details - now Shota completely understood how such a young child could end up how he is now. Shota knew that he had to have some kind of traumatic background, most vigilantes do, but he never expected anything so gruesome.

He knew everything he experienced as a kid, being subjected to discrimination, getting kidnapped then getting driven to the point that he snapped and murdered every adult there, he understood how distressing all of that must have been. No kid should have to experience any of that, but in the end it was that ideal that brought about Karma. Karma fights to protect children and their future, he fights to reassure the adults too afraid to let their children out of their sights. He fights for justice and a normal upbringing for all children so none of them will ever end up like him. He fights for a good cause, but how long until that cause just slowly turns into revenge.

Shota knew that was a stupid idea, that Deku wasn't the type of person who would abandon all his morals, but he couldn't help but have this feeling. Deku had proved to him that he valued life when they first met, that he didn't want to take people away from their loved ones, but just now he had also proved how desensitised he was towards the people he has killed. What if his values changed, what if life and loved ones no longer mattered, would that mean he'd go around killing people senselessly.

Shota erased the thought from his mind, finally getting up and brushing himself off. He knew that even if this was to happen it would take a lot to change Deku's ideals. If you aren't involved with his goal then he has no reason to kill you, thats what he had said, and that's what Shota will make sure he will stay by no matter what.

Shota scoffs, surprised at his own determination to lead the child on the right path. "What a problem child." He says as he jumps of the roof and makes his way home.

Katsuki waits outside his house so he can let Deku in through the front. Like usual his parents are at work so he's left alone free to do whatever he wants after school. Katsuki is sure that his parents know that he's always bringing someone over and that they often spend the night. His parents never ask, they believe that he'll tell them when he's ready but until then they know not to barge into his room when Deku is around.

Katsuki has always wanted to tell his parents about Deku but that would just cause a lot of problems. It doesn't help that his mum still talks to Inko, that woman has been lying this whole time telling her that she took the nerd with her to America. Of course Katsuki knows the truth, he knows that Inko abandoned Deku but that was never a problem for the nerd as it meant he was free to do his vigilantism.

That's another problem, Deku was Karma. Since it was Deku his parents probably wouldn't care as much but he knew that they would make a big deal out of it. The moment they knew about Deku they would give Inko hell and start a police investigation, starting an investigation would only be a hindrance to Deku and sooner or later his identity as Karma would be found out.

None of this means telling his parents isn't a good idea. Deku having no one to support him and refusing to steal has always gotten money from Katsuki. And where else could Katsuki possibly get all that money except from his parents. It's obvious they know he's been spending a lot of money on whoever he brings around, they definitely didn't like it at first because they thought Katsuki was being taken advantage of, but over time it's become less of a worry since it's obvious no one would stay this long if they were just in it for the money.

Katsuki is thankful for having such understanding parents, he might not show it most of the time but he is. They trust him enough to let a stranger into their house for years and let him spend money on them, if Katsuki could choose anyone to be his parents he would chose them again and again a hundred times over.

Katsuki opens the door as Deku arrives. It's obvious that the nerd is pissed but when he's pissed it's best to not say anything.

They go upstairs to Katsuki's room and he starts to change. Sneaking a few glances Deku's way he can tell that he's been glaring at him this whole time and it's only then Katsuki realises that Deku is pissed at him. That's even worse than him being pissed in general.

Katsuki would have tried to plan his escape except the nerd is standing right infront of the door meaning he has nowhere to run, unless he wants to jump out the window which he's considering doing. Deku's glare intensifies as if reading Katsuki's mind and saying 'don't you dare'.

Katsuki puts on his shirt and before Deku can even say a word goes to hug him.

"I'm sorry." He says hoping that that will calm Deku down a little. It doesn't.

"So you know what you did." Deku says, not pushing Katsuki away but his glare still intense.

"This is about Eraserhead right." Katsuki let's go of Deku and backs up not wanting to be in his line of fire much longer.

"I told you I was fine, you didn't have to go and tell him."

"I don't know what your definition of fine is but nightmares totally aren't it." Katsuki snarls. Deku takes a step forward and instinctively Katsuki takes a step back. "Listen, you can get as mad as you want but I don't regret telling him and I won't ever regret telling him."

Deku continues to glare but doesn't say a word. "I know there are things you don't like telling me that you feel more comfortable telling Eraserhead, I feel the same way sometimes. That's exactly why if you can't talk to me I want you to talk to him, I know he can help you better than I ever can so please let him help you even if it means you hate me for the rest of your life."

Deku still doesn't say anything, just glares but eventually he sighs. "Now I get why you hate the idea of therapy so much. It's scary telling someone all your fears and problems, even scarier to accept those feelings." Deku walks up to Katsuki holding his arms up slightly so he doesn't back away again.

Katsuki is skeptical but let's Deku get close anyway. Deku stops right infront of Katsuki before he smiles, "Talking to Aizawa actually helped, so-" He takes another step forward and wraps his arms around Katsuki and hugs him. "- thanks Kacchan."

Katsuki just stares completely dumbfounded. "Is this a trick? What happened to being mad."

Deku pulls away a little so he's looking at Katsuki's face. "I'm not mad at you Kacchan, I was initially but there isn't a real reason to be mad. I'd do the same thing for you after all, well I guess I kind of did."

"Are you sure this isn't a trick?"

"Why can't you ever accept the fact that nothing I do is a trap." Deku pouts.

"Cause your a manipulative little shit." Katsuki smirks but pulls the nerd closer to him as he wraps his arms around him and plays with his hair. They stay like that for a while basking in each others presence.

"I mean it though Kacchan, thank you." He smirks, "Therapy might actually do you some good as well."

"Like hell it will, I don't and will never need therapy." Deku glares at him but with no real malice behind it, Katsuki looks away, a slight tint of red on his cheeks. "But whatever, your welcome I guess."

Deku let's out a soft laugh before nuzzling his head back into Katsuki's chest. "I love you Kacchan."

"Yh, love you too nerd."

My hero, the boy with green hair

A boy sits there barely able to breathe, unable to focus on anything around him. He can't tell left from right or up from down, hell it's unlikely he can even tell where he is but none of that matters to him right now. All he wants is to get the stupid muzzle off his face, it hurts and it reminds him of that day.

He sobs, his cries doing little to help his situation. No matter how many tears he forms they won't wash away the sadness or the pain, and he knows that, he knows that there's no point in crying but what else could he possibly do. He hated his life but those tears were the only things that could ever soothe him to sleep.

Some days the tears wouldn't come, other days he'd have the most difficult time trying to stop them, they've always been useless but one thing was sure, for every tear he shed a little of his faith in humanity shed with it. Why was he so unlucky, why was he the one subjected to this kind of life, why couldn't he just be a normal kid like everyone else? It's not like he would ever get honest answers to those questions, the answer will always be because he's a villian, but what makes him a villian. Is it his hair, the messy tuffs that float above his head. Or maybe its his eyes, the peircing indigo colour or the bags that lay underneath them. It could be his personality, the fact that he keeps to himself and is antisocial.

Or is it his quirk, the quirk that he was born with, that he had no choice over, the quirk he's barely ever used too afraid of getting judged. He doesn't socialise because he knows where he stands, no one wants to talk to a villian or be close to one. Is that why they decide to give him more of a reason to become a villian, except Hitoshi isn't that type of person. He might be losing faith in humanity but that doesn't mean he'll ever become a villian, he'll just have to prove humanity wrong by becoming a hero instead, but first he needs to get the stupid muzzle of his face.

It was made specially for him and has been passed around from person to person just like he has, it's like some free accessory that comes with him, except it's a muzzle and not an accessory. It's a requirement now for everyone of his foster parents to be given the muzzle, they were to use it whenever they deemed necessary. Each time though the same thing would happen, he'd be brought back to that day, that day he so desperately wanted to forget, that day that always leaves him hyperventilating on the ground every time he remembers it. When any of his foster parents were to see this, they either didn't care or ignored him, cause he was 'just being dramatic'.

Hitoshi wasn't sure what was so dramatic about having a panic attack, or maybe they thought that he was acting, but if anyone actually took the time to know him then they would know he couldn't act to save his life. Even if they didn't know him though, people with the slightest bit of compassion would be able to tell the immense pain and trauma he's going through just by looking at his face. They'd be able to tell the agony and torture he feels through his screams. Anyone with even the slightest bit of compassion would be able to tell that this wasn't someone acting.

Of course as time goes on his screams increase, and as his screams increase his foster parents only leave the muzzle on for longer. Not even the various green objects around him can calm him down, green like his hair. Maybe it was that longing for his saviour that made him mistake a greenete walking across the street for Karma. Maybe it was his lack of oxygen that made him stupid enough to go outside at this time of night and run after the greenete. Maybe it was the blurriness from the tears in his eyes that made him lose them and walk into an alleyway, a place that he swore he would never go close to again.

There was no doubt it was his terrible luck that caused him to end up getting attacked. He stumbled across a scene he shouldn't have and now he was going to get taken too. What made it even worse is that he still had his muzzle on and was unable to defend himself, but even without it he'd still be hyperventilating and on the verge of passing out as that day comes back to haunt him, except this time it was real and not a dream.

Maybe it was also his luck that caused a somehow familiar boy to come swooping down to save him, or it could be a hallucination, that would make more sense considering the little oxygen he was getting. Hallucination or not Hitoshi just wanted everything to dissappear, everything was to much for him and the muzzle was still on his face.

The hallucination kicks the kidnapper in the stomach, his green hair shimmering in the stretlight. He pushes the kidnapper away from the little child that lays unconscious on the floor. Hitoshi was barely hanging on himself, constantly drifting in and out of consciousness but he was able to make out parts of the scene infront of him. Overall it looked like the hallucination was winning but everything was going rather slow since it's movements were limited in the small space and with too many people around. Eventually though Hitoshi completely lost consciousness, his future unsure. The only thing he knew for sure was that that was the most rest he's gotten in quite some time.

"Why didn't....heal him before." Hitoshi can hear voices.

"....needs sleep....didn't want to wake him." The words are swimming in his mind and it's impossible to make sense of them.

"He's...ing up." Hitoshi can hear a scampering of feet but the direction they're coming from is unknown to him.

"...you alright. Can...hear me"

"Can you hear me?"

Hitoshi shoots up, feeling a rush of liquid overtake his blood stream. The fogginess of his mind clears and he can focus once again. He looks around trying to figure out what happens. He sees a wall, an unfamiliar wall. That's right he was being kidnapped. Instantly he reaches for his mouth but the muzzle isn't there.

"We took it off." His eyes widening he doesn't dare look in the direction of the voice, instead he feels for his neck. It's bare.

He's confused, he has no idea what's happening, this isn't right, this isn't where he's supposed to be. He's supposed to be at the house, safe and warm. Supposed to be able to hear the tv all the way from upstairs and the rasping of the tree as it hits against his bedroom window. He's supposed to-

He feels a hand take his and rest it against his chest, his breath hitches. A man infront of him raises his arm so Hotoshi's other hand is now placed on their chest as well.

"Do you think you can match my breathing." Refusing to look up Hitoshi slowly nods.

He continues to take a deep breath in and let it out till he's calm and able to match the mans breaths. Satisfied the man pulls away and Hitoshi finally dares to look up. Standing next to him is a boy, the same boy from his hallucination, although considering what was going on it couldn't really have been a hallucination. If that was the case Hitoshi figured that the boy had saved him.

Looking a little closer this time he could clearly see him. He could clearly see the green curls that lay a top his head, green curls that looked just like Karma's when he saved him from the exact same situation 8 years ago.

Hitoshi meant to open his mouth and speak but ended up having a coughing fit instead. The boy who looked like Karma rushed off to get some water while the man who had calmed him down earlier went to kneel infront of him.

"Are you alright." Hitoshi blinks in suprise almost forgetting to answer, he nods. "Do you remember what happened before." Hitoshi vaguely could, most of how he'd ended up in an alleyway and got kidnapped was a blur but before that he remembered being at home and his muzzle being put on. So then how did he end up here.

"Vaguely." he says his voice scratchy and dry.

"I'm back." Running back into the room the green haired boy quickly hands Hitoshi the water who drank it all in one gulp. "Is that better." Hitoshi nods and the boy smiles.

"Where am I." Hitoshi asks as the boy goes to sit on the edge of the couch he's laying in.

"At my house." The man says. Properly taking the time to examine him now he could see the man was rather untidy and has messy black hair. Overall he just looked really tired, reminding Hitoshi of himself.

"Why am I at your house?" Hitoshi asks as he looks around again.

"You came across kidnappers so he saved you and brought you here so we could get the muzzle of you." The man points to the greenete who just smiles and waves.

"What about the unconscious kid?"

"Oh, I took them home." The boy says edging a little closer.

"Then why didn't you take me home?"

"So we could take off the muzzle, he just said that."

"But I could have taken it off at home."

"You had it on before the kidnapper attacked you." He says giving him an intimidating look that stopped Hitoshi from opening his mouth to argue back.

Hitoshi looks down to his lap and doesn't say anything for a while. Eventually the man sighs before crouching infront of Hitoshi again. "Look kid it was obvious you had the muzzle on for quite a while and we weren't going to risk taking you home to someone who could do something so cruel."

Hitoshi doesn't say anything and an awkward silence stretches out. Eventually though Hitoshi speaks.

"Thanks." He say. "For taking it off."

"Why'd they put it on you in the first place?" The greenete asks edging closer to him. It was surprising how quickly he could revert from intimidating to innocent.

Hitoshi didn't know whether it was a good idea to tell them or not but it's not like he even knew them. If they hated him and decided to kick him out of their house it wouldn't matter that much.

"It's cause of my quirk."

"Your quirk?" The boy repeats and Hitoshi nods. "What's your quirk?"

Hitoshi takes a deep breath before answering, "Brainwashing."

"Brainwashing, that's it." They boy says blinking in suprise. Hitoshi tilts his head in confusion. "That's why they put you in a muzzle?"

"People have to respond to what I say as a requirement."

"Yeah but still, putting a muzzle on you is way to extreme."

"It is?"

"Of course it is. If they're that scared of your quirk then they should just not answer you."

"If they're that scared of your quirk they should get a better education cause your quirk is extremely useful." The man says crossing his arms.

"Really?" The greenete nods enthusiastically. "So you don't think I have a villainous quirk."

"Is that what people say about your quirk?"

"There's no such thing as a villainous quirk, it's how you use it that makes it villainous." The man huffs looking clearly displeased, Hitoshiisn'tsure if he's upset at him or just upset in general.

"Right, your quirk is also perfect for hero work." Somehow now right next to Hitoshi the boy smiles.

"Really?"

"Of course." The boy starts listing reasons off his fingers."You can easily break up hostage situations and end fights before they even start, your quirk has so many possibilities."

Hitoshi just stares at the two speechless with tears in his eyes. "So, d-do you think I could become a hero." He asks hesitantly.

"Of course, why not. You'll make an amazing hero." The boy smiles enticing Hotoshi's lips to slightly curl upwards as well.

"Really." Hitoshi can feel a few tears trickling down his face but he doesn't stop them.

"Sorry to burst your bubble, but if your gonna be a hero your going to have to work twice as hard as others."

"Huh." He turns to look at the scruffy man who's now standing next to him.

"You have a mental quirk like me, unlike people with physical quirks we need to learn how to fight and defend ourselves using our physical strength."

Hitoshi stays silent and just stares at the man.

"I'm pretty sure the UA exam or any exam for hero courses are bias towards people without physical quirks." The boy says.

"That's right, I've been trying to get principal Nezu to change the UA exams for years now but I haven't been successful."

"UA?"

"Aizawa is a teacher at UA." The boy says turning to Hitoshi cheerfully.

"Um, so your name is Aizawa."

"Right we haven't introduced ourselves yet have we. That's Shota Aizawa and you can just go ahead and call me Deku."

"Deku?" Hitoshi says looking kind of skeptical.

"It's what his boyfriend calls him." Aizawa chimes in as if that makes any difference.

"Why would your boyfriend call you useless?"

"Don't question it, it's not like he'll tell you his real name anyway."

Ignoring the hero Deku just smiles. "I'm fine with the name Deku."

"Yeah but that's an insult."

"It used to be but now things are different so if you want you can call me Deku but if you don't want to go ahead and call me whatever you want."

Hitoshi sighs. "No it's fine I'll call you Deku." Deku smiles wider causing Hitoshi to have to shield his eyes a little from the sheer brightness. "I'm Hitoshi Shinso."

"Nice to meet you Shinso-kun."

"You don't have to call me by my last name, I mean I'm calling you Deku so go ahead and call me Toshi for all I care."

"Okay then, Toshi it is then." Hitoshi smiles. "I would ask if that's what your friends call you but you don't have any do you." Deku mumbles to himself quietly, but clearly not quietly enough.

"That was uncalled for, how many more friends could you possibly have."

"No, no, I'm sorry I didn't mean to say that out loud." Deku waves his arms around in a panic while Hitoshi just sighs, dealing with this now would just make his head hurt.

"Aizawa." Hitoshi says turning to the man.

"What is it kid."

"You're a teacher at UA right." The man nods. "So do you think there's any chance of me getting in."

"I don't know, maybe." The man's immediate reply made Hotoshi's heart sink but not long later did Aizawa start talking again. "Like I said before I've been unsuccessful when it comes to changing the entrance exam, but maybe that could change if a very capable student ends up joining the hero course next year." Aizawa smirks.

"Who?" Hitoshi tilts his head in confusion.

"Oh wait," Deku jumps up just realising something. "Are you gonna train him?"

"Train me?"

"Why not, I mean that big idiot is training your even bigger of an idiot boyfriend."

"Kacchan isn't an idiot."

"Of course you'd say that, he's your boyfriend." Deku sticks his tongue out at him.

"You wouldn't like it if I said your husband was loud and tiring."

"But he is loud and tiring, I suffer through that all the time. Although your right that I don't like you saying it."

The two's banter continues for a while as Hitoshi just looks back and forth between them."Are you two related or something."

"Huh." Deku turns to face Hitoshi. "We're not related, what makes you think that."

"Ah, sorry it's just that you both seem rather close and know a lot about each other."

"Really, I've only known the kid for about 5 months now."

"Wait really. How did you even meet."

"The paedophile refused to leave when I was changing."

"Would you stop that, your giving him the wrong idea about me."

"So you didn't refuse to leave when he was changing." Hitoshi asks, too interested in the story of how they met to care about the image that gave Aizawa.

"I did refuse to leave but only because he would have ran away the moment that I did."

Hitoshi tilts his head in confusion. "And why was that a bad thing."

"Cause I'm Karma." Deku says blankly.

"Karma."

"I didn't expect you to tell him just like that."

"It's fine, Toshi seems trust worthy enough. You won't tell anyone will you Toshi." The intimidating smile is back. Was this really the boy who saved him all those years ago.

"Don't threaten the kid, your the one who told him out of nowhere so it'll be your fault if he tells anyone."

"I'm not threatening him"

"Then what's with your smile."

"What do you mean."

"Are you playing dumb or are you just never aware of how intimidating you can be."

"I don't know, maybe a little of both." Aizawa sighs clearly tired of everything.

He turns to the purple boy still sitting on the couch. "Your parents were the ones who put you in the muzzle correct." Hitoshi nods, a little confused on why he brought the subject back up so suddenly. "For how long?"

Hitoshi couldn't remember exactly but he knew that it had to have been a while. "It was after dinner, I was getting told off and I accidentally talked back, they thought I was trying to Brainwash them."

"That must have been a while ago. If you want then, you can stay with me here at my house and I'll do something about your parents. Putting a child in a muzzle is not okay."

"Wait what."

"Or would you prefer to go back to your house. I'll still do something about your parents, but I understand that I'm a stranger and me being a pro hero doesn't say very much."

"If it helps, Present Mic is his husband."

"Wait really, Present Mic has a husband."

Aizawa sighs. "Yeah he's my husband, he's on patrol right now so he should be back in an hour or two. So would you rather stay here or go back."

"They've probably noticed that I've gone already."

"That's not a problem I can deal with that."

"When you say you'll do something about them what do you mean."

"They'll lose the right to you for starters."

Hitoshi shakes his head. "That won't change anything. They're just my foster parents and I've been in foster care ever since I can remember."

"If they're your foster parents then they should especially not be putting you in a muzzle."

"It's a requirement. The care home will give the muzzle to anyone who fosters me."

"So then it's the care home that I need to deal with." Aizawa makes a mental note of that in his head. "That's fine, I'll find a way to remove the muzzle as a requirement and I'll make sure you find a new family that'll love and support you." Hitoshi could feel tears of joy pricking in his eyes for the second time that night.

"I'd like to stay here for the night, I can deal with my foster parents later."

Aizawa nods. "And you?" He says turning to Deku.

"I can stay too?"

"Were you considering leaving at this time of the night."

He shakes his head. "I'll stay."

Opening the door Hizashi can instantly tell that something is different. A bunch of furniture has been moved just the slightest bit and the prints in the carpets make it obvious that someone other than Shota has been walking around. His husband was a careful guy and could easily avoid moving furniture or causing prints in the carpet. Walking up to their bedroom door he could tell there was someone in there. There was a specific direction he and Shota left the door knob in, and right now it was not in that direction.

Continuing past the door he walks up to the living room where he finds his husband sleeping on the couch. Quickly, Hizashi goes over to wake him up. The man being a very light sleeper wakes up before Hizashi even touches him.

"Oh, your back." Sho says as he sits up.

"Yeah I am. Hey Sho is there a person in our house."

"Person? There should be two people."

"Huh. Why are there two other people in our house."

"One of them is Karma. He brought a kid over here."

"Did he kidnap him?"

"Of course not." He pauses for a while as if thinking. "Well kinda, it's not like anyone knows he's here."

"So you didn't think to go contact the kids parents."

"I will, but that can wait for the morning."

"Why's Karma bringing a kid over in the middle of the night anyway."

"He saved the kid from getting kidnapped, then he brought him here so I could help him get the muzzle of his face."

Hizashi gasps. "They put him in a muzzle."

"He already had the muzzle on, his foster parents put him in the muzzle."

"They did what!" Hizashi says getting kinda mad. What kind of stupid person would put a kid in a muzzle.

"Apparently the muzzle was a requirement of his foster home for anyone who fosters him."

"So we have to destroy his foster parents and the foster home, got it. We should go ahead and destroy anyone who's put him in a muzzle actually." He says picking up his car keys. "Where can I find these people."

"Calm down will you, I've already got this sorted. In the morning I'll go over to their house with him and make sure he packs all his things. He's not staying in that house for another night."

"Well then I'm coming with you, I'd like to give those foster parents of his a peice of my mind."

"Sorry to interupt-" Turning to the direction of the living room entrance there's a boy with messy indigo hair and bags under his eyes almost identical to Shota's. "- but could you not make such a big deal out of everything."

"Your not asleep."

"Insomnia." Shota just nods.

"Sho is that the kid you were talking about." Shota nods again.

"Where's Deku?"

"He left like an hour ago."

"Wait he left, but I wanted to meet him." Hizashi pouts slightly, feeling a little disappointed.

Sho sighs. "Why say he'll stay if he's just going to leave."

"He said something about forgetting that he was supposed to meet Kacchan, or something like that."

"Who's Kacchan again." Hizashi asks.

"His boyfriend."

"Oh right. So he forgot that he was meeting him, did he really have to leave in the middle of the night though."

Shota shrugs. "I don't understand what that boy is thinking half the time."

"He's nice, but then he can switch to scary and intimidating so quick." The kid says as he shivers a little. Hizashi doubted it could be that bad though.

"It's that bad." Shota says reading his mind.

"Well then," Starts Hizashi. "Enough about him, what about you." He says looking at the kid. "What's your name."

"Hitoshi Shinso."

"Nice to meet you Shinso, I'm Hizashi Yamada but you probably know me as Present Mic." He nods. "Well then it's about 4 in the morning so I think you should try and get some sleep, but if you really can't your free to stay up a little longer. I've still got some work I've got to complete."

"You've still got work to do even though you came back late." Hizashi could hear the disappointment in his husbands voice.

"I'm working on a special case so it can't be helped. I've spent the last 2 hours looking through quirks registered in the database."

"Is that what that flash drive is." Shota points to the flash drive in Hizashi's hand.

"Uh yeah."

"Do you think I can quickly do something."

"Sho I'm not so sure if that's a good idea."

"It'll only take a second. I think I can finally find out Karma's identity." Sho says as if that was the most justified reason ever.

"Really, but you've tried many times and could never find him."

"Yeah but that was before he told me he use to be quirkless."

"He used to be quirkless." Hitoshi exclaims, now sitting on the couch. "Wait should I even be here right now."

"It's fine, it's his fault in the first place for telling you he's Karma."

"That's a little harsh Sho." Hizashi says giving the flash drive to his husband.

"Not my problem, he's supposed to be here right now but he's not." He puts the drive into the computer and looks for the file with data on all quirks and their holders.

Hitoshi looks on in bewilderment from the sofa and Hizashi stands to his side as Shota types 'quirkless' into the database. After a few minutes of scrolling through quirkless people Shota finally stops on a file. The picture that came with it is of a little boy, his smile awkward but bright as his messy green hair got into his face. There was a large difference from the boy in the picture and the boy Shota knew but he could tell that it was most definitely the same person.

"Izuku Midoriya." Shota reads out. "That's his real name."

Hizashi scrambles to get out his phone and proceeds to type in the name Midoriya.

"Nothing comes up when I search up Midoriya, what does it say on his file."

"Izuku?" Hitoshi says aloud as he thinks about something.

"His parents are Hisashi and Inko Midoriya, there's nothing here on Hisashi though except that he lives in America."

"Hey can I see the spelling of his name." Hitoshi asks. Aizawa nods as he continues to look at Izuku's file.

Hizashi continues speaking. "What about his mother, does it say anything important about her?" Hitoshi is next to Hizashi now as he looks over his shoulder to see the screen.

"There's nothing that really stands out here except the fact that she seemed to disappear around 9 years ago."

"Is she dead?"

"It doesn't say she is although there's no missing persons report."

"There wasn't a report for Karma either when he was kidnapped." Aizawa nods.

"Izu..ku, de..ku, ohh Deku." Hitoshi says looking as if he just solved the secret to world peace.

"What are you on about kid." Aizawa says turning to him.

"Look the character for Izu can also be read De." The two men look at the name he's pointing at.

"Oh yeah, it can be read like that." Hizashi says.

"That's so stupid...but now I feel like I should have investigated the name he gave me."

"It's fine Sho." Hizashi says resting his hand on his shoulder. "We've already found him anyway."

"Did you really not question why he made you call him useless."

"Useless isn't the only connotation to that word you know."

"Yeah but it's the only one that makes most sense."

"He's right. I thought it was weird but didn't think to look into it."

"It's not like you could really suspect anything unless you asked him to write it out."

"That's true."

Leaving Aizawa to his lamenting Hitoshi goes back to the couch and picks up his phone.

(4:35) - You said I can call you whatever I want right.

It's not even a minute before Izuku is texting back.

Deku(4:35) - Yeah, why

(4:36) - Then can I call you Izu

Deku(4:36) - ...

Deku(4:37) - He found out my identity didn't he

Deku(4:38) - I should have stayed

Deku(4:39) - There's nothing I can do now I guess. I said you can call me whatever you so want so go ahead and call me Izu

"Deku says I can call him Izu." Hitoshi calls out from the couch.

"Wait you told him."

"Yeah is that a problem. I said I don't feel comfortable calling him Deku so now I don't have to."

Aizawa sighs as he slouches in his chair. "I can tell your going to be a lot to handle, how do I end up attracting all the problem children."

Katsuki meets Hitoshi

Katsuki currently doing his homework looks over to his boyfriend who's lying on his bed. The nerd is giggling as he texts someone which is weird because Katsuki knows for a fact it couldn't be the pro hero that he's talking to.

"Who are you texting?"

"Huh" Deku says finally registering his boyfriends glare. "I'm talking to Toshi."

"Who the fuck is that?"

He crosses his arms. "The guy from a month ago. How do you not remember, I told you all this."

"Wait you mean the brainwashing freak."

"He's not a freak."

"Well obviously he is if he barely reacted when you told him your Karma."

"So you do remember me telling you about him." He says as he rolls his eyes.

"Of course I do, now stop texting him and giggling like a little girl."

"I'm not giggling like a little girl." Deku pouts but Katsuki doesn't stop.

"Yes you are, now stop texting him."

"But I don't want to. Is there a specific reason that you don't want me to text him."

"Cause it's fucking annoying and I'm trying to concentrate."

"How is my texting stopping you from concentrating, your faced away from me."

"The giggling is annoying too."

"Then I'll stop giggling."

"And stop the texting too."

"Why, because your jealous I've been spending so much time with him."

"Jealous of that brain fucker, as if." He scoffs.

"Then why don't you want me to text him."

"Because I don't."

"You need a better reason."

"No I don't."

"If you admit that your jealous then I'll stop."

"I'm not jealous."

"Then continue with your homework and I'll continue texting." He smiles and goes back to texting.

Finally giving in to the little fuck, Katsuki turns away a little to hide the slight blush creeping up his cheek. "Fine then I'm jealous, now stop." Putting his phone down the nerd gets up to go hug him from behind.

"Aww, Kacchan you don't need to be jealous you should already know how much I love you."

"Get off me." He growls pushing Deku away and crossing his arms.

"Come on Kacchan, are you mad now."

"No."

The nerd tilts his head to the side. "Really cause you seem mad."

"Sometimes I don't know how I can handle you. You can be so fucking annoying."

Deku pouts. "That's mean you know."

"The truth hurts, deal with it."

"That's why I'd rather be texting Toshi right now, atleast he's nice to me."

"I'm nice to you as well."

"Only when you want to be, Toshi is nice to me all the time."

"Maybe he's scared of you." Katsuki turns back around to glare at the nerd.

"That's not true."

"If you say so."

Pout deepening the nerd stalks over back to his bed where he picks up his phone and resumes texting. With a grunt Katsuki stands up and goes after him to take his phone away.

"Hey give it back." He demands trying to grab it as Katsuki holds him back.

"Do you want to go out on Friday." He says ignoring the nerds futile attempts at getting his phone back, if he really wanted it he wouldn't have given Katsuki time to take it.

"Why do you want to go out all of a sudden," He squints his eyes questioningly as if trying to solve some kind of riddle. "Are you trying to prove that your nicer than Toshi-kun or something?"

"It's your birthday idiot." Katsuki flicks him on the head.

"Oh right, I forgot about that." Deku mumbles, rubbing his forehead.

"I'm not surprised." Katsuki says rolling his eyes. "So you wanna go or not."

"Can Toshi come with." The nerd requested eagerly.

"What, no! Why do you want that freak to come."

"I mean it is my birthday so can you really complain, plus Toshi-kun doesn't have any friends so I think it'll be nice for him to come with us." The nerds expression was kind and thoughtful which made Katsuki's heart flutter. Katsuki couldn't say no to him when he looked so genuine.

He sighs. "Whatever he can come, but don't expect me to be nice to him or anything."

"Yay Kacchan, so you can be nice sometimes." He says jumping into Katsuki's arms.

"That's implying that I'm not nice to you most of the time." Katsuki growls but makes no effort to push the nerd off this time, instead embracing him as well as they both melt into the hug.

Leaning on a store window Katsuki scrolls through his phone as he waits for Deku and his friend to meet him. It's already past the time they had agreed to meet but it wasn't all that surprising the nerd was late, that was precisely why Katsuki had set the meeting time a little earlier than necessary.

While Deku had terrible time management obviously his friend didn't as soon enough he can see a greenete waving in the distance before running over to hug him. Accompanying him is a guy with purple hair standing awkwardly to the side. He looked like shit, as if he hasn't slept in days but considering what the nerd has told Katsuki about him, he probably hasn't.

Deku pulls away from Katsuki as he goes to stand next to brain fucker. "Toshi this is Kacchan, Kacchan this is Toshi." He says introducing them both.

"If your gonna introduce people to each other don't use your stupid nicknames for them idiot."

"That's really your boyfriend." The brain fucker asks pointing at Katsuki.

"The fuck is that supposed to mean."

"Sorry didn't mean to offend you, it's just that you two seem so different, like very different." Somehow the brain fucker has grown some balls in the last thirty seconds since he's now standing confidently and staring Katsuki down.

"I already told you this didn't I Toshi, Kacchan might seem mean on the outside but he's actually really sweet."

"I'm not mean." He growls, his expression completely contrasting his point as he glares back at the brain freak.

"Tell that to our childhood." Instantly shut him up.

Looking between the two Hotoshi's glare falters, "I'm not going to ask."

Deku sends a warm smile the brain fuckers way. "Yeah that's probably for the best."

"I take back my earlier suprise though, I forgot how intimidating you can be."

"What's that supposed to mean." Katsuki snarls.

"It means he could easily control you if he wanted to."

"The fuck." Katsuki marches up to the brain fucker now pissed. "Deku doesn't control me."

"Yeah, that's implying that I'm controlling which I'm not."

"So he isn't always doing some weird glaring thing to influence your actions." He says completely ignoring the nerd.

"I mean he does but-"

"What about that innocent smile that you just can't say no to."

"Yeah there's that-"

"And when he threatens you in the most unsuspecting way."

"Okay, I've got to admit that's annoying."

"Right, and he somehow always makes them sound so innocent even though they're threats."

"Exactly, how does he even do that. And then he can switch from intimidating to innocent so quick."

"What's going on..." Deku stands there staring at the two.

"That's what I'm always saying, and I bet you he doesn't even notice it half the time."

"Of course he doesn't notice he's an idiot."

"Are you bonding over my flaws." Deku says, unsure if he should be insulted or glad their getting along.

Purple freak smirks. "Huh, I guess we are."

"I like this guy." Katsuki points in his direction.

"Wait really." The other two boys say in unison.

"Yeah, he understands how much of a handful you can be, I can relate to that."

"Wow, you don't seem like the type of person to say something like that so easily so I appreciate it."

"I still think your a freak though."

"For some reason I'm not surprised you'd follow a complement up with an insult."

Katsuki snorts. "You can't just expect me to give you free complements."

"Why do I kind of regret introducing you two."

"Wasn't much of an introduction cause I still have no idea what his fucking name is."

"It's Hitoshi Shinso, you can go ahead and call me whatever you want."

"Brain fucker, that was decided a long time ago."

"You can call me anything you want except that."

"Why not, it really emphasises your characteristics." Katsuki smirks.

Crossing his arms brain fucker glares at Katsuki. "Yes, and Kacchan really emphasises how sweet you can apparently be, but I doubt you'd like me calling you Kacchan."

"My name is Katsuki Bakugo asshole."

"I like the name Kacchan."

"Well to bad you can't use it."

"You've got no right to be picky about what I call you if you won't let me change what you call me."

Katsuki clenches his teeth. "Fine, I'll try to use your actual name but no promises."

"I doubt he'll even be able to remember your name by the end of the day." Deku points out but the two boys ignore him.

"Why can't you use my actual name all the time."

"Toshi you can't negotiate anymore that's the best you'll get from him."

He sighs. "Fine I'll accept that, I wasn't going to call you Kacchan, that would be weird anyway."

"Good now that that's settled I booked reservations at a restaurant for 6."

"6, but it's still only 4, why'd you make us meet so early."

"Cause I know someone that can never be remotely on time."

The freak fiddles with his fingers as he looks at Katsuki. "Is the reservation for all three of us or-"

"Of course it is idiot, why would I book a reservation for two when there's three of us."

"Yeah ok," he says rubbing the back of his head. "but isn't that expensive."

"Do you have money on you." He nods. "How much?"

"5000 yen."

"Well then your paying for your own food."

"Aizawa gave you money, considering the way he looks people would mistake him as poor." Deku mutters to himself but purple freak hears anyway.

"You never think before you speak do you." Deku tilts his head in confusion. "If he was to ever hear you say that I'm sure he'd hold a grudge against you."

Katsuki snorts. "If he's that type of person then he's probably holding a lot of grudges already."

"I'm pretty sure he's the type of person who'd hold a grudge against you for a really long time without letting the person know." Brain fucker states.

Deku thinks for a second before replying. "Yeah he does seem like that type of person. Like he'd probably be planning a way to get back at you when you least expect it, but if he had a grudge against someone I'm pretty sure he'd make sure you know it."

"I doubt that, what's the point of letting someone know you hate them if you wanna get back at them when they least expect it." Brain freak argues.

"There are many ways to do that even if they do know, you just have to be cunning enough."

"Yeah but Aizawa is an underground hero he's sneaky so wouldn't let you know."

Already tired of their pointless argument Katsuki snaps. "Could you both stop making stupid assumptions and just ask the guy or something."

"What makes you think he would tell us." Deku deadpans.

"Have you even met him before." Brain fucker asks.

"No."

"Well then I'll tell you now, he'll either look at us as if he's done with his life or take the mick and give us an answer that doesn't actually answer anything."

"That's exactly what he would do." Deku agrees.

Katsuki just raises an eyebrow but doesn't say anything, he starts walking and eventually getting the hint the two idiots follow. They both chat for a while, Katsuki just listening from a distance until he eventually comes to a stop by a shop window.

Realising that they've stopped the two boys look up.

"A hero merch store?" Hitoshi questions, raising an eyebrow.

"Deku loves shit like this so just this once I'm actually going to let you buy something."Deku's smile brightened after every word till it couldn't brighten no more so instead he jumped onto Katsuki embracing him.

"Thanks Kacchan I promise not to buy that much."

"You better not, hero shit is fucking expensive you know." The nerd bounces into the store probably the most giddy out of everyone there. Which was fair since Deku barely has the money to afford necessities talkless of useless hero merch.

Brain fuck just stares in slight confusion as he and Katsuki follow the nerd in. "The nerd really likes heroes despite his identity." Katsuki tells him, he just nods.

About an hour and a half later their leaving the store, only because Katsuki had to drag the nerd out. The little shit was indecisive of whether he preferred the bronze age All Might figure or the silver age golden figure. In the end Katsuki was forced to buy all three or stay in the store for another hour which he really didn't want.

Leaving with three different All Might figures, two posters(an extra one of Present Mic for Brain freak, also paid for by Katsuki), a mug and several key chains, they finally make their way to the restaurant for their reservations. Deku being happier than ever skips infront of the two other boys humming as he went. Katsuki sighs as the nerd crosses the road just as the green man turns back to red, hoping that he'll stop walking eventually both Katsuki and Brain freak wait at the traffic light.

Feeling the awkward atmosphere between the two, Katsuki decides to initiate the conversation. "Your living with Aizawa right, did he adopt you.? He asks as they wait for the red man to turn green.

"He didn't adopt me, he just has temporary guardianship. He said he wasn't going to risk sending me back to the foster home before he got a chance to destroy it."

"I guess being a hero has it's perks, he wouldn't have been able to gain guardianship over you otherwise."

"Yeah I guess your right. I'm suprised it only took about a week."

"Damn, that's way too quick even if you lot were blood related."

"Aizawa says it's all thanks to Detective Tsukauchi." At that Katsuki growls a little earning a questioning look from Brain freak. At that moment the man turns green and they both cross the road.

It doesn't take long for them to find Deku and they once again start walking all together.

"Never thought that asshole would actually be good at his job." Katsuki mutters under his breath but the freak must have super hearing cause he looks at Katsuki once more."

"Who, Tsukauchi?"

"Yeah, man is damn annoying."

"Really, he seemed really nice to me."

"I don't think Kacchan and the detective have such a good relationship." Deku says finally walking at their pace.

Purple freak tilts his head, "How do you know Detective Tsukauchi anyway?"

"Deku hasn't blabbed about it to you yet."

"Kacchan that's mean." The nerd pouts. "I can keep a secret you know."

"So you haven't told brain fucker yet?"

"No I have, he's probably just forgotten." Katsuki glares at his boyfriend.

"So are you going to tell me or-"

"He was with All Might when he asked to train me." Katsuki answers.

"Oh right, I forgot that All Might is training you, Izu told me quite a while ago." Katsuki scoffs.

"Of course he did."

Deku pouts. "Kacchan are you mad."

"No. It's not like there's anyone else you could possibly tell."

"What about Mic, he could still tell Mic."

"I haven't actually met Present Mic yet." Deku points out.

"He probably already knows anyway."

The three boys talk on as they near their destination. Eventually they stop infront of a colourful building decorated with different pro hero posters. Deku's eyes widen as he stares in bewilderment, turning towards Katsuki he jumps on him.

"Thank you so much Kacchan, I've been wanting to come to this restaurant for so long." His smile stretches from ear to ear as he hugs Katsuki.

"You really love hero's don't you Izu." Brain fucker commented.

"Of course I do, hero's may be useless when it comes to child trafficking but they're still amazing." The nerd skips through the door once again leaving the two other boys by themselves.

"That idiot, how does he expect to get in without me." Katsuki grumbles as he runs after his boyfriend.

"I guess Izu was right, he may seem mean on the outside but he really cares about him doesn't he." Hitoshi smiles to himself as he wonders after them as well.

"Are you sure this is a good idea Toshinori, I still have my doubts."

Sitting around a table in a Principal Nezu's office are Nezu, All Might, Tsukauchi and Recovery girl. They're discussing the decision of giving One for All to Bakugo but of cause Tsukauchi has his doubts.

"The boy seems like a good kid to me, I don't know why you're so against it." Recovery girl says.

Tsukauchi crosses his arms. "I agree that he is not that bad but do you really think things won't end terribly. The first time we met he was being scolded for strangling a classmate, when we told him not to tell anyone about the training he lied when saying his boyfriend wouldn't tell anyone. Meaning his fully aware that his boyfriend isn't going to keep his mouth shut, and considering he can read memories this is way too risky."

All Might and Recovery girl wait patiently for Tsukauchi to finish his rant. "First of all Tsukauchi, since when did you think of young Bakugo as 'not that bad'." All Might teases.

"It's not like I've ever said I hate him, he's powerful and is totally capable of bearing OFA. You get used to his language eventually and I've got to admit he's dependable and somewhat trust worthy but I still don't think it's a good idea."

Takinga sip of her tea, Recovery girl sighs. "It's true that his boyfriend is a problem but he did say they're childhood friends, I'd like to believe that he knows how to handle him."

Nezu, who had been silently observing this whole time, puts down his tea cup. "He said his boyfriend is unable to meet you, right." The adults all nod. "I've also heard you mention that he tries to avoid any talk of his boyfriend."

Tsukauchi lightly slams his hands on the table. "Right, doesn't that seem suspicious to you, he usually tells the truth but when it comes to his boyfriend it's like he has something to hide."

"I agree that his boyfriend seems a little suspicious but we can't base this decision around him, he isn't even the one getting the quirk." All Might argues.

"That is true, the only reason we are still here arguing is because of his boyfriend. Why don't we just do a background check and get this over with." Says Recovery girl.

Tsukauchi sighs and leans back in his chair. "I would, except the name Deku isn't much to go by."

"Deku you say?" Asks principal Nezu, suddenly very engrossed in the conversation.

All Might flinches slightly at the principals sudden interest in the conversation"Yes that's right, young Bakugo had only ever referred to him as Deku. Seems like a weird name too me though."

Nezu laughs, it's the same manic laugh he gives when he figures something out. "In that case I think it's perfectly fine to give this Katsuki Bakugo one for all."

"Really, do you know his boyfriend?" Tsukauchi asks, a perplexed look on his face.

"No, but I might know someone who does." Nezu picks up his tea cup and takes a sip looking content with himself. "As fate would have it, it seems like he's on his way here now."

———

"Ah Aizawa, how lovely to see you."

Shota walks in to principal Nezu's office intending to talk about the progress of his students, seeing the three people all sat around a table having tea he gets the feeling that that won't be the only thing he'll be talking about.

Shota fully aware that this is another one of Nezu's scheme's goes into overdrive to try and figure out what the hell is going on.

"I came here to discuss one thing and I plan to only discuss that one thing." He says glaring at the rat, bear thing.

"Of course that's not a problem. Although this seems a little more important so I'd appreciate if you would sit down."

There's another chair at the table as if he had been expecting him, which he probably had considering all the cameras in the school, Shota should really find a way to avoid them.

Eventualy giving in to the principals request Shota goes to sit down. "Tea?" Shota politely declines but Principal Nezu gives him some anyway.

"Um, is Aizawa the one who knows about the kid." Tsukauchi asks hesitantly.

Kid, what kid. Shota knows about lot's of kids.

"Yes that's right so go on ahead and ask him whatever you like."

Shota crosses his arms. "I don't like where this is going but I'll try to answer anyway." He says reluctantly.

All Might clears his throat, looking a bit hesitant to ask. "So do you know a boy named Deku." Shota freezes.

"Judging by that reaction it seems that you do." Nezu says, a slight smirk on his lips.

Shota raises an eyebrow as he stares at the three adults, and bear, mouse thing, in astonishment. "How do you know about Deku?"

"Nezu was right, you really do know who he is, although that's no suprise, the principal is always right and that's scary." Recovery girl says tapping her finger on the table.

"Toshinori has been training a certain kid and we have a few doubts about his boyfriend." Says Tsukauchi, answering Shota's earlier question.

Aizawa sighs as he calms down a little and slouches in his chair. "Right, the problem child did mention that you were training Bakugo."

"Wait you know young Bakugo?"

"Only through his boyfriend, have only ever spoke to him on the phone."

"Ah wait a sec, so you were the one his boyfriend told about Toshinori training Bakugo?" Tsukauchi asks.

Recovery girl sighs. "It looks like we were jumping to conclusions."

"Could I ask what type of conclusions." Shota raises an eyebrow, curious as to what was going on.

"That doesn't matter right now." All Might says waving him off.

"I think it does, I get the feeling that anything you tell Bakugo, Aizawa will end up knowing about." Nezu says sending a slight glare All Might's way. All Might cowers slightly at his gaze.

"Well this is unexpected." Recovery girl states, trying to change the mood.

"Were you the only one he told." Tsukauchi questions.

"What? About the training? Probably, although the only other person he could have told is Hitoshi."

"Right that makes sense." They all agree.

Recovery girl sits up straight. "Since Tsukauchi is still looking doubtful, are you sure that you two are the only ones he could have told."

"I don't see why it's such a big deal that he told me, if this is about him keeping a secret then he won't tell anyone."

"Yes but how can you be so sure."

"I've known the kid for quite a while now and I know he's trust worthy, plus Bakugo and Hitoshi are his only friends, he doesn't really talk to anyone else except us three. And if that still doesn't convince you I told him that you were going to start teaching at UA next year, and considering Bakugo probably still doesn't know and neither does the media I'm pretty certain he can keep a secret."

Everyone is silent for a while but eventually All Might speaks. "Well that certainly does make me feel better, now there shouldn't be anymore complaints right."

"Whatever, do what you want." Tsukauchi says waving his hand in acknowledgement.

Still confused, Shota looks to all of them one after the other. "So is anyone going to explain to me what is going on."

Recovery girl sighs, clearly done with everything. "I think we might as well considering there's a chance that he'll end up knowing anyway."

"Better Aizawa than anyone else I guess." All Might sits up straight and turns to Aizawa.

Turns out he really did go in there discussing one thing and one thing only because after all that was revealed to him, the progress of his students was the last thing on his mind.

Katsuki sits staring out into the distance, lost in thought. He doesn't realise classes have ended until one of the extras accidentally bumps into him while packing up. He scowls but the extra pays him no mind, they've realised that something has been going on with him ever since he's been forced to stop using his quirk and are now taking advantage of that.

That brings him back to the exact reason he's lost in thought, because of fucking All Might giving him one for all and then all of a sudden being too busy to even see him. Katsuki hasn't been able to use his quirk for nearly two weeks now. It wasn't even the lack of his quirk that pissed him off, it was how society held him up so high and then suddenly disregards him cause he stops using his quirk. So many rumours have already spread about why that is that Katsuki can't even keep up with them, the only positive thing about this whole situation is that atleast now he knows that every single one in his school is a quirkist bastard. If society only cared about quirks then sure as hell he'll change that view, crush it and leave it in the dust because he hates that invisible fucking hierarchy people have somehow created. Katsuki is going to show them all that quirks don't matter in this messed up world.

He sighs, he knew that the only reason this hierarchy only really existed was because of Deku decreasing the rate of child trafficking. Of course the ones with unlucky quirks had hard lives, it was harder for them to get a job or the same opportunities as other people, but it was just as hard for the ones with the most powerful quirks. People with powerful quirks have all nearly been kidnapped atleast once because of it, others used to fear the same thing happening to them if they hung around these people giving no room for a hierarchy to form. Katsuki isn't saying that the kidnappings should continue, people shouldn't stay away from others out of fear they should actually realise that quirks don't matter, and that's exactly what Katsuki is going to make happen, lucky for him All Might gave him the perfect opportunity to do it. Doesn't excuse the fact that the asshole gives him his quirk, tells him not to use it and then deserts him for two weeks.

Being so lost in thought Katsuki doesn't even realise when he makes it outside the school, it's the sight of green curls in the distance that snaps him back to reality. The nerd is surrounded by three extras who are standing in his way. Katsuki can't hear what they're saying but he doubts its anything good.

Speed walking closer to the group he starts to hear parts of their conversation. He decides to stay at a distance.

"Your here to see Katsuki right, if you hangout with him you must have a powerful quirk so tell us what it is." Says a boy with short orange hair.

The nerd crosses his arms. "Why should I, I'm not about to satisfy your stupid curiosity so get your nose back out of my business."

"Wow this guy is stuck up." The orange asshole comments.

"Not much of a suprise if he's friends with Katsuki." The three bitches laugh, their sick and twisted smiles only making Katsuki more angry. Who the fuck did they think they were anyway.

"Move out of my way quietly and I might forgive you for what you just said." Deku said giving them a death stare. He was obviously holding back or else those fuckers would be shaking in their boots.

A guy with thin strings of red rock around him laughs. "Hah, who said we wanted your forgiveness. What you think of us doesn't mean shit."

"What you gonna do anyway report us to Katsuki, make him beat us up." Another extra with long black hair and yellow markings curling around his face says getting uncomfortably close to Deku. "I'm surprised that Katsuki would keep around a guy that can't even fight his own battles but your probably doing something to manipulate him aren't you."

"Oh is that your quirk, you trying to get in a good spot with someone who has a strong quirk cause you know you can't protect yourself."

"Katsuki isn't very strong though if he can fall for your tricks so easily, he was never really that strong in the first place. Just cocky and violent, no one likes him so I know you don't either."

"Of course he wouldn't like him, why would anyone hang around a villian willingly." That's when Katsuki snapped, but that feeling was quickly driven away seeing the angry expression on Deku's face.

The nerd grabs one of the bullies by the collar and pulls him close. "Shut the fuck up before I cut out that tongue of yours and feed it to you." He spat, Deku could take care of himself so Katsuki wasn't worried.

The bully looked scared for a second, he just stood there silent and unmoving. It wasn't until his friends snapped him out of it that he got over himself and shoved Deku away.

"You fucking bitch!" The fucker punches Deku in the gut sending him sprawling to the floor. "Should have expected you were just as villainous as Katsuki." The rest of the fuckers come up to join him. "But it's a hero's job to get rid of villians isn't it."

The bitch kicked Deku up the head giving him a nose bleed, at that point Katsuki was going to help but the nerd still had that expression as if he was going to do something. He didn't do anything, again and again just took every blow they sent his way. It pissed Katsuki off, he knew deku could have punched them and ended this long ago or he could have used his quirk. Then he remembered, Deku was supposed to be fucking quirkless and he'll stay quirkless just incase anyone tries to make a connection to Karma. What pissed Katsuki off even more was that the fucking nerd was getting beat up because of him and yet he just stood there watching.

Eventually the sick fucks got tired of Deku's lack of reaction and started using their quirks. The orange fucker's fingers glowed red before he touched Deku making him scream. Katsuki jumpes up, unable to watch the extras hurt Deku any longer,wasn't till then that Katsuki came to intervene.

All three of them having their backs towards Katsuki didn't notice him sneak up behind them and kick the one with orange hair standing in the middle hard enough that he swore he heard the cracking of ribs. The other two turned around, the other one turning much slower due to the pain.

"Get the fuck away from my boyfriend." Katsuki snarled and they all instantly wore an expression of horror. That changed though, literally as quick as it had started, the fuckers just smiled and one even had the audacity to go back and hit deku again.

"What the fuck, are you deaf or something, I said get the fuck away from Deku!"

"Or what, your gonna hit me with your quirk, the quirk you haven't used in two weeks." The fucker said kicking Deku once again. "Have you not heard the rumours Katsuki, there's nothing you can do you've lost your quirk haven't you."

"Who the fuck told you that!"

"Come on Katsuki people know how to put two and two together, you haven't even been making those tiny little sparks you usually make randomly during class." Yeah cause a tiny spark could fucking blow up the whole school. "We have come to many conclusions but that was the most obvious so I repeat, what are you going to do about it."

"I'll kick your fucking ass, that's what I'll do about it!" Katsuki barks as he runs up to the fucker, his hand clenched into a fist. Running up to the bastards Katsuki punches the same asshole he had kicked previously, he then dodges a round of needles coming out of the guy with yellow markings.

Dodging out of the way meant he was forced closer to the red rock extra who he was still yet to know the quirk of, wasn't a mystery for too long though cause as soon as Katsuki got close to him he sent a spike of crystallised blood from a cut on his hand, the blood now pooling on the floor. Katsuki was too close to avoid it so jumping out of the way resulted in a pretty deep wound in his arm, better than getting impaled though he thought. Turns out he didn't have enough time for thinking as another barrage of needles came flying his way, not being quick enough to dodge them all, a few scratch him.

The orange fucker, seeming to have recovered slightly from his probably broken ribs and nose, comes back to join the battle. Running up to Katsuki with his palms wide open it was easy to tell that it probably had something to do with his hands. Katsuki side stepped the extra and sent a fist to the back of his head, the guy stumbles a little and barely stays upright. Police tape goes to see if he's okay while red rock sends another spike of crystallised blood.

Easily dodging once again, Katsuki then runs forward aiming a kick at the red rock's feet. Knocking him onto the floor Katsuki quickly nails him down to the floor, a fist mid-air aimed for his face. This stops police tape in his tracks as to not put his friend in danger. Giving in police tape takes a step back as a sign of surrender, satisfied with that reaction but still cautious Katsuki signals for Deku to come over to where he is.

The nerd rushes over to his side, walking as far as possible from the two bullies in the centre. As soon as the nerd is by his side he gets of the crystal asshole and lets him scurry back to his friends, that was his first mistake.

He had let his guard down and all of a sudden a spike of red emerges from the pool of blood on the ground, sticking through Deku's chest, that was the fuckers first mistake.

Deku was going to be fine, and Katsuki knew he was going to be fine. If it hit a vital point his force field quirk would have activated and even if it didn't Deku's other quirk could heal him easily. If Katsuki knew that then why did he get so angry, why did he lose his self control and attack the fuckers one last time, that was his second mistake.

There was still a pool of blood on the floor which meant the red rock fucker could still use his quirk. A spike hit Katsuki from behind dangerously close to his heart. Seeming to have also realised how close to killing him he was the crystal asshole let the rock pool back into blood but not before stabbing Deku once again. That was their second mistake, a mistake they would regret for a long time.

Deku getting impaled once had made Katsuki lose control, Deku getting impaled twice made Katsuki lose all his morals and self restraint. He uncurled his fingers directing his palms at the three fuckers infront of him. He must have forgotten the reason why he shouldn't use his quirk because the intended tiny spark ended with several cries of pain and a broken arm.

OFA

"So they're in hospital right now?"

Sitting on a roof next to Izuku is Aizawa sipping coffee. Like usual they're sitting by the edge looking over the city, it's become almost tradition now for them both to sit their gossiping about their lives.

"No, thankfully it wasn't serious enough for them to have to go to the hospital, the school nurse was enough but it was still pretty bad. Although Kacchan had to go hospital to fix his broken arm." Izuku pauses for a second a little hesitant to continue talking. "Hey Aizawa."

"What is it kid?"

"This won't effect Kacchan's chances of getting into UA will it?"

Aizawa shakes his head. "I doubt it, there's substantial proof that those boys started it and that Bakugo was just working in self defence. Nezu is probably aware of the situation as well and knows its not Bakugo's fault. If anything it's that big idiots fault."

"Who? All Might."

"Obviously All Might, who else." Izuku chuckles fondly before looking up to the sky.

Things are silent for a while except for Aizawa's occasional sip of coffee. Getting tired of sending Izuku occasional glances Aizawa breaks the silence.

"So..."

Izuku looks over to Aizawa. "So what?"

"So are you not going to tell me what happened when All Might explained his quirk to your boyfriend." Aizawa says kind of annoyed he had to spell it out for him.

"I didn't know you were interested in that, you usually get annoyed when I bring up stuff about Kacchan randomly."

"It isn't random if we were just talking about him injuring three people, a couple of minutes ago." Izuku just stares at the man, surprised that he's showing a little more interest and emotion then he usually does. "So are you going to tell me or will you keep on staring at me." He snaps.

"Damn ok, relax. I'll tell you."

It's 6am and Katsuki arrives at his and All Might's usual training spot. He's surprised to see that it's not just Yagi-sensei waiting for him but Tsukauchi and Recovery girl as well. They usually don't come to his training and even when they do it was always one or the other, the only other time he'd seen all three adults together was his first training session with All Might. Katsuki wasn't sure what he had expected, All Might had never asked him to come over early in the morning so he probably had something important to say. It was obviously very important if the other two adults were there as well.

The adults seemed tense and had yet to notice the middle school boy standing at the entrance to the beach. Based on the atmosphere Katsuki was seriously debating with himself whether he was ready to hear whatever news they were about to give him. Ready or not it didn't matter because it was at that moment Yagi-sensei turned around and saw the spiky haired boy, just barely letting his anxiety show, following his gaze the other two adults also turn. Yagi-sensei waves Katsuki over and he has no choice but to get over his concern and make his way to them.

"Ah young Bakugo, good to see you." Yagi-sensei says, wringing his hands together.

"Good morning dear." Granny greets while the detective just nods.

Minutes pass as Katsuki looks between the three adults who just stand there not saying anything. "So are you going to tell me what the fuck is going on. I don't have infinite time you know, I still have to go to school."

"It's only 6am." The detective says.

"Your point."

"That you should be patient you brat." He snaps.

Usually Katsuki would have replied with an insult but today he decides not to, he knows the detective can be an asshole once in a while but he's never snapped like that. This only makes Katsuki more anxious.

"Sorry." The detective says rubbing his temple. He faces Katsuki looking apologetic. "I didn't mean to say that, I've just been very busy lately and on edge."

Katsuki just grunts in reply but understands that he must be stressed. They all stand there, no one wanting to break the silence. Eventually though All Might clears his throat at the insistent stares of the other two adults.

"Right so Young Bakugo," Katsuki turns to All Might, hopeful that he'll finally get some fucking answers. "Thank you for coming to see me so early in the morning."

"It's fine I'm usually up earlier anyway."

"Right, then I guess I'm sorry for taking up your time-"

"Just get to the fucking point already, it's obvious you have something to tell me. If it makes you feel better I'll try my best not to react." Katsuki's outburst only makes Yagi-sensei more reluctant to talk.

Sighing, granny goes over to Katsuki. "Katsuki dear maybe we should find a place where we can sit."

"Can't you just tell me what's going on, if you have something to say just spit it out."

"Yes but it's not really my place to say." She sends a glance Yagi-sensei's way, he sighs then also comes up to Katsuki.

He rests his hand on Katsuki's shoulder for a second before finally gathering the nerve to speak."Your already aware of the secret to my injury but there are still many more secrets I wish to tell you."

Katsuki now sitting down on a broken washing machine looks up at All Might. "So you mean to tell me that your quirk was given to you and you used to be quirkless." Yagi-sensei nods. "Ok so what the fuck does that have to do with me?"

"I'm losing more and more time in my hero form each day and soon enough I will no longer be able to protect Japan, that is why I'm looking for a successor to take my place."

"So you want me to help you find you one or what?"

"What he's trying to say is that he wants you to be his successor." The Detective says getting kinda impatient.

Katsuki looks over to all three of them individually. He doesn't say anything for a while just sits there waiting for the 'We got ya', but it didn't come. "So this isn't a joke then, you're actually serious."

"We could never joke about something this big." Granny says.

Katsuki pauses for a minute before he lowers his head, looking at the ground.
"No."

"What?"

"No!" He says again leaving no room for argument.

"Young Bakugo you can't j-"

"I said no." Katsuki looks up at the hero with tears in his eyes instantly silencing the adults. "Why me, out of all the people in Japan there is sure to be someone much better than me, so why me? I don't deserve your quirk, talkless about being trained by you. I-"

The adults just stare at him, bewildered and unsure what to say. All Might kneels down so he's level with Katsuki and cuts him off.

"Young Bakugo why do you refuse to believe in yourself?"

"What-"

"Why do you wear that fake mask of confidence?"

"I don't-"

"You refused my offer to train you just as quickly, do you think you don't deserve to be my successor or is there something more."

"I-" The words choke themselves in his mouth leaving him silently crying into his hugged knees.

"You deserve the world and more, not just you, everyone does so please stop doubting yourself. I don't know why you're crying but I beg that you stop thinking about others and focus on just yourself. Forget about if you deserve my quirk or not and just think purely about what you want."

Katsuki stops crying for a second and looks up at All Might. "Young Bakugo do you want my quirk?" Hesitant but confident Bakugo nods his head.

"Good, now eat this."

"You are out of your fucking mind if you think I'm about to eat your hair."

"Come on it's just one strand, this is the easiest way for you to injest my DNA, unless if you want to eat one of my finger nails."

"Give me a drop of your blood then." Katsuki demands.

"Huh, what are you a vampire?" The detective says sarcastically.

Ignoring the sarcastic remark Katsuki continues to shout. "Your damn stupid if you think I'm gonna eat your hair, I don't know what all that has been through."

"I wash my hair frequently."

"Doesn't matter when your constantly applying gel to it, yours looks greasier than what most fast food restaurants sell, so over my dead body will I eat a strand of your hair. Give me your blood, that seems like the least disgusting solution right now."

"Blood seems like the least disgusting solution to you?" Tsukauchi raises an eyebrow.

"Would you eat someone's finger nail?"

"Wouldn't eat my own talkless of someone else's so go on and do what you want." Tsukauchi waves him off.

Recovery girl sighs. "What if he had a disease which can be transferred by body fluids, would you be asking for his blood then."

"So what you want me to eat that greasy strand of hair?"

"I don't have any diseases... Not that I know of anyway."

Recovery girl rolls her eyes. "Would you rather drink his saliva-"

"Give me the hair."

———

"I don't feel anything."

"You won't for several hours so by our training session this evening you'll have the quirk." Katsuki nods. "By the way don't use your quirk until our training session, not only would it be dangerous for others but it would be dangerous for you as well."

"The quirk is dangerous?"

"Well if you can't control it then yes, nothing a little bit of training can't fix."

Katsuki stares at his hand as if expecting to see it morph infront of him. He says nothing for a while, just going over the new information he's learnt which doesn't take long case he realises he hasn't learnt that much.

"I just took your quirk,"

"Huh, uh yeah you just did."

"I just took your quirk even though I know literally nothing about it."

All Might just stares, dumbfounded. "Yeah I guess you did."

"How the fuck did you do that?"

"Do what?"

"Trick me into taking your quirk."

"How did he trick you." The detective says looking amused for the first time that morning.

"I said fucking no but now I have his stupid quirk, even managed to get me to eat his hair. If that isn't manipulation then I don't know what is."

"That was all your will, Toshinori didn't do anything." Recovery girl says.

"That's not fucking true who in their right mind would take a quirk without knowing anything about it."

"Who in their right mind wouldn't." Replies Tsukauchi.

"Me."

"Well obviously not or we wouldn't be having this conversation." He rolls his eyes.

"Maybe I should continue explaining then. I promise I didn't trick you, I just thought it would be best to give it to you before you started having doubts again."

"So you purposefully didn't tell me everything."

"Wha- that's not true."

Recovery bangs her cane on the floor bringing everyone's attention to her. "Katsuki dear, get over it. He's going to explain everything in detail now so let him speak."

"Tch, whatever." He crosses his arms and looks away, still a little pissed.

"Okay then, so as I've already told you my quirk can be passed on, it's a stockpiling quirk meaning it gets stronger from person to person and from today on you are the ninth user."

Katsuki perks up. "Does that mean I'll be more powerful than you?"

He nods. "There's a great possibility that you'll easily surpass me."

"Hell yes!"

Yagi-sensei smiles. "Eventually you'll be able to fully control OFA and as you grow the quirk will grow with you."

"Wait if I have OFA now, then what about you."

"Ah, no need to worry about me Young Bakugo, I'll still have the embers of OFA so don't you worry. Although I was quirkless before I got the quirk so I'll probably go back to being quirkless."

"Why'd you give me your quirk if it meant being quirkless."

"Young Bakugo, I'm the symbol of peace but I can no longer back that up with my power. It's best that I give the quirk to you so you can one day also be a pillar that holds this country up and continue my legacy." Yagi-sensei smiles.

"You want me to be the next symbol of peace." He nods. "...I don't think I can do it-"

"Young Bakugo what did I tell you about confidence. Forget what other people would think and focus on yourself."

"I am focusing on my fucking self and I'm telling you I can't do that shit. If you were really looking for a symbol of peace why'd you entrust that to me of all people. I'm cocky and arrogant and can't go two seconds without swearing. I'd start a war before bringing peace-"

"Katsuki!" He looks up, stopping his rampage at the sound of All Might using his first name. "If I really thought you couldn't do it then I wouldn't have bothered looking for you. Your a strong and reliable person who won't give up till he reaches his goal, I learnt all of this during the sludge villian attack. A person's true emotions are revealed when they are in the clutches of death, and Young Bakugo you were anything but arrogant and cocky. You were a true hero."

Katsuki looks out to the sea trying his best not to let his tears spill for the second time that morning. No words are said as he uncurls himself from the little ball that he's formed. Looking up at All Might he clenches his fist as a spark of determination glistens in his eye.

"So that's what happened?" Aizawa tosses away his now finished coffee cup.

"Pretty much, yeah."

"That was unexpected."

"It was?"

"Yeah, your boyfriend seems really confident to me, I would have never expected he doubts himself so much."

Izuku sighs, averting his gave from Aizawa to the floor. "It's probably because of the people at his school." He says pausing for a second. "He doesn't say it but I know that what people say at school really gets to him. The only reason he deals with their crap is because he hates being alone. Sometimes I wonder what life would be like if I didn't find Kacchan again, I'm pretty sure that would hurt him more than it could ever hurt me." Izuku sighs and looks up to the sky in an attempt to stop the tears threatening to spill.

"He knows nobody actually likes him for who he is, only because he's got a strong quirk. They're threatened by it and don't want him to use it against them, so they decide to be his friends to save their own skin. They don't care about him, they have no intention of actually getting to know him, they'll say horrible things about him behind his back and every single time he'll hear. They say he's arrogant and cocky but that's how they made him, even if he was to do something selfless they would take it the wrong way. Anything he does they'll instantly see it as aggressive, people only perceive people how they want to see them, they don't see people for what they really are." Izuku's attempts to stop the tears prove futile as they come pouring down his face. Aizawa just listens quietly, not wanting to interrupt the boy.

"Kacchan is big and strong and always glaring, that immediately means he's scary and intimidating no matter what he does, the nature of his quirk doesn't help either. If other people see you a certain way you'll start to see yourself like that as well, start to doubt yourself and believe them even though no one knows you better than yourself. The way society sees us is important, you can never truly become strong unless you stop caring about how other people will see you. It's the same thing for Toshi, all his life people have thought of him as a villian just because of his quirk. He has the power to make them do whatever he wants and that scares them, unlike with Kacchan, instead of staying close to save their own skin they decide to stay away. Eventually even Toshi believed he was villainous, he cried when we told him there's nothing wrong with his quirk.

Even when I was younger I was bullied for being quirkless. I was powerless which made everyone else seem powerful, they held that fake illusion of power because there was someone who would always be weaker than them. Eventually I started to believe it as well, that I'm useless and weak. Even when I was kidnapped for weeks I just sat there crying the whole time watching people get taken away one by one. I could have done something but I convinced myself I was weak and powerless, that I couldn't do anything. Even all the other children there, they all had strong quirks but as soon as they could no longer use them they did nothing cause they believed that a quirk is what makes you powerful.

Society upholds the one's with powerful quirks because they know they can't beat them. They disregard the ones with weak quirks because it makes them feel strong. They get rid of the ones with 'villainous' quirks cause they're scared of the possibilities, because they don't fit the social standards. It's because of all this that society unknowingly created a social hierarchy.

Kacchan hates this and wants to get rid of it, he wants to be number one so he can change the way society sees each other. He doesn't think he can be a symbol of peace, peace isn't something he's ever really known, I don't think he realises how much peace and happiness his goal could really bring." By now Izuku was full on sobbing, tears streamed down his face while Aizawa made an attempt to reassure him.

Aizawa sighs as he wraps his arms around the boy. "I agree that social views heavily influence what we think of ourselves. I too was bullied when I was younger and discriminated against. It wasn't as bad as kids nowadays but it still made me miserable. It wasn't till I got into UA and made great friends that I started to believe in myself more and discard the standards of others. You three are lucky, you have each other now and I know you all will do great things."

Still sniffling a little Izuky wipes away his tears. He looks up at Aizawa. "Aizawa can I ask you something?"

"What is it kid."

"Can Kacchan help train Toshi instead of me?"

"Why?" He asks a little confused.

Izuku sniffles. "Well I won't be around all that much for a while, and also I think it would benefit Kacchan just as much as it would Hitoshi."

"Elaborate."

"All Kacchan will be doing with All Might is quirk training for a while, training with you two will give him a change of pace and he'll be able to hang out more with Toshi. They seemed to get on pretty well when we went out on my birthday so I think they'll make great friends.

Being friends with Kacchan might improve Toshi's confidence as well, similarly Kacchan's if he gains another friend who likes him for who he is and not his quirk."

Aizawa thinks for a moment, he understands where he's coming from but wonders if it would be too much for his boyfriend. Seeming to have read his mind Izuku smiles. "Don't worry Kacchan can handle anything."

Aizawa looks at the determined smile on the boys face. In turn his lips curl up as he ruffles the boys hair. "I guess we can give it a shot."

Bakugo meets Aizawa.

Walking up to an alleyway Katsuki checks his phone to see if he's at the right place. Determining that it is he walks inside looking around.

"Hello, anyone here?" Katsuki waits for a reply but of course non comes. He crosses his arms as he walks through the alleyway. "Why tell me to meet you here if you weren't going to fucking show up." He grumbles to himself. "Who even asks to meet someone in an alleyway, how could you possibly train in an alleyway?"

"Parkour." A random voice says out of nowhere making Katsuki jump.

"What the fuck-" Katsuki turns around to find a man standing behind him dressed in all black. He has bags under his eyes and his hair and clothes are scruffy. A plain scarf, thats probably seen better days, lays around his shoulders. "For fuck's sake it's just a hobo."

"I'm not a hobo."

"Really? Cause you look like one."

"That's Aizawa." Looking up Katsuki sees brain fucker standing on the roof of a building. "I thought you've talked to him before, how do you not remember his voice."

Brain fucker climbs down a ladder and goes to stand next to Katsuki. Looking closer he can see that he's wearing the same scarf as the not hobo standing infront of him.

"Is this really Aizawa?" Katsuki asks, pointing at him. Brain fucker nods. "Well shit. Deku wasn't lying when he said you could easily mistake him as poor."

"Yeah well Deku doesn't know when to keep his mouth shut."

"You remember how you two were arguing about if he would let you know if he's holding a grudge against you or not."

"Yeah."

"Well I think Deku won, pretty obvious that he's planning a hundred different ways to kill me right now."

"I'm not planning ways to kill you." The hobo grumbles.

"You keep saying that your not something but how you look doesn't tell the same story."

The hobo pinches the bridge of his nose looking done with Katsuki already. "Well looks can be deceiving. That's why you don't call someone a hobo when you don't even know them." Aizawa glares in his direction. "From the beginning you shouldn't be calling anyone a hobo."

Katsuki leans close to Brain fucker to whisper in his ear. "Is he mad at me?"

He nods. "I'm pretty sure he is." Katsuki stands up straight to look at the pro hero who obviously heard everything they were saying. They just stand their for what seems like an eternity staring each other down. Eventually, Eraserhead turns around and starts walking, taking that as a hint to follow the two boys start walking as well.

"How All Might thought you'd be the perfect successor I'll never know." The not hobo grumbles to himself, a little too loudly as the other two could hear. Katsuki had a feeling that was intended.

The pro hero stops in an area slightly wider than before then turns to the boys. "Keep in mind the only reason I'm tolerating you is because of your boyfriend." He says pointing at Katsuki. "He's the one who recommended you come help Hitoshi train, he said it would probably benefit you just as much him so you better prove this isn't a waste of time."

"Yeah whatever, okay." Katsuki crosses his arms. "I've only been doing quirk training recently so atleast this'll be a good change of pace."

Aizawa continues walking and the boys follow. "And how far have you gotten on your quirk training. Can you control it now, I won't have to send anyone to the hospital will I."

"Of course he fucking told you."

"He tells me pretty much everything, you shouldn't be so suprised."

Tired of his boyfriends bullshit he ignores the topic and answers the not-hobo's question. "I can control it now thanks to Deku. I can use about 2% without breaking any bones."

"Wait what, your quirk breaks your bones?" Brain fucker asks.

"Does he know?" Eraserhead shakes his head. "Then yeah my quirk is strong enough to break my bones."

"You said thanks to Deku, what do you mean?"

"Before I was focusing on using the quirk in just one area of my body, he's the one who suggested I try circulating it throughout my whole body."

"So All Might wasn't able to teach you how to use the quirk, it was your boyfriend, who knows nothing about the quirk or how it works."

"Yeah pretty much."

Aizawa sighs. "That idiot can't even teach someone how to use his own quirk." He mutters to himself.

Hitoshi previously walking behind Katsuki runs up next to him. He continues walking at his pace unable to start conversation. Katsuki sensing that he wants to say something glares at him.

"What?"

"Huh-"

"You want to say something so spit it out."

Brain fucker flinches a little at the harsh tone. "I-it's just that you've been training with All Might for months now, s-so how come you've only worked on your quirk?"

Sighing Katsuki stops walking, in response Hitoshi does the same. "I haven't only been doing quirk training, that's what we've just started focusing on. If you really want to know more ask Deku or the hobo, I give them permission to tell you."

"You really want to tell him." The hobo walks up to the two just realising that they had stopped. "You hardly know each other."

"I hardly know you but you still know."

"That's because your not the one who told me. Technically it is your quirk now so you have the right to tell who you want but still."

"If I'm gonna be training with you then I might as well. Makes life simpler."

"You are aware that you'll have to hide this from your classmates IF you get into UA, it'll be harder to hide and you won't be able to tell them. Even if it 'makes life simpler'."

"WHEN I get into UA I'll have better control so it will be easier to hide, right now it's harder to hide and knowing how big of a mouth Deku has he'll know anyway. I don't know why your so against letting him know, it's not like it would be a big problem."

"I'm not against letting him know, I agree that we should tell him but you need to realise you can't just easily decide to tell someone."

"I don't have anyone else I possibly could tell so relax."

Hitoshi looks between the two. "I feel like you both are keeping a really big secret from me which is weird cause I thought you both didn't know each other."

"Shut up Brain Fucker we're having a conversation." The freak rolls his eyes.

"Brain Fucker?" Aizawa says as he glares Katsuki's way. You don't happen to mean Hitoshi would you?"

"Aizawa it's fine, he promised to use my real name sometimes."

"He should be using your real name all the time."

"Izu said this is the best I can get from him so I'm not complaining."

"Well I am. Bakugo say that all over again using his real name."

"The fuck, I don't have to listen to you." Aizawa gives him a glare rivaling Deku- they've been spending way too much time together. "Fine then. Shut up Shi-Shi...no. Is that your name, Shino?"

"You really did forget my name."

Aizawa's glare turns into an expression of absolute disappointment. "Try again."

"Shi...suno?"

"Shinso! his name is Hitoshi Shinso!" Aizawa snaps.

"I think you're more annoyed about this than I am."

Aizawa's glare deepens. "Does this mean you don't know my name."

"Oh I know your name. It's something Aizawa."

The hobo face palms. "You're more of a problem child then your boyfriend. We've already been here for over 5 minutes and haven't even started training yet."

"That is because you insist on arguing with me and judging every little thing I do."

"You expect me to ignore you calling me a hobo, putting no thought into sharing one of the most biggest secrets and lastly calling my son-" Aizawa clears his throat, "Brain Fucker."

"Do you prefer brain freak?"

"Wait son?" Brain freak asks a little suprised.

"That makes no difference whatsoever." Aizawa complains ignoring his 'son'.

Brain Freak sighs. "You're definitely more upset about this than I am."

"If you wanna start training so bad then stop complaining and lets go."

"Wait a sec rewind to the part about sharing one of the greatest secrets. Are you going to tell me or?" They both look over to Shinso.

"Your not going to let this go are you." He shakes his head.

"I guess training is on hold, I knew letting you train with us would bring problems." Aizawa glares at Bakugo.

Katsuki just smirks back. "Not my fault Deku can be so convincing."

——

"So All Might's quirk is One for All?"

"Yeah."

"And now you have it."

"Mhmm."

"All Might... the number 1 hero, gave you his quirk. One of the most powerful quirks in the world?"

"Yes."

"...Well shi-"

"-Language." Aizawa sighs as he sips the coffee he insisted on getting before they started the conversation. "But yes. Now you know everything so can we start the training?"

"Wait, you can't tell me something like that and expect me to just get over it and start training."

Taking a deep breath Aizawa rubs the bridge of his nose. Katsuki, obviously enjoying the mans suffering, smirks. "You can't possibly tell me that you got over All Might telling you this quick." Katsuki teases.

"Atleast I'm not stupid enough to take a quirk before knowing anything about it."

Katsuki scowls. "Deku really gave you all the details didn't he."

"Wait you took the quirk without knowing anything about it. I mean I get that getting All Might's quirk would be exiting and all, but even I would want to know a little about it first."

"Shut up! All Might tricked me okay."

Hitoshi raises an eyebrow. "All Might tricked you?"

Aizawa grins. "That isn't even the best part. He refused the quirk but still ended up taking it without knowing the details. He started a whole argument as well about how he'd take the quirk before even considering the fact he knew nothing about the quirk."

"I already told you, All Might tricked me. He made me say yes even though I told him I didn't want his stupid quirk."

"Do you still think it's a stupid quirk now? Do you still regret taking it?" Aizawa asks setting down his coffee, his previous grin disappearing from his face.

Katsuki looks away, thinking for a while. "Not all the time, no. I still think he could have given the quirk to someone better than me though. Like you said earlier, I have no idea what made All Might think I was the perfect successor."

Aizawa shakes his head. "I didn't mean that, I was just irritated. All Might can be an idiot sometimes, and I don't like him all that much, but one thing I'm sure of is that he definitely didn't make a mistake in choosing you."

"Oh yeah. And how the fuck would you know that, you don't even know me." Katsuki sneers.

A soft smile plays on Aizawa's lips. "I think we both know way too much about each other considering this is the first time we've met. Courtesy of Deku."

Katsuki's expression softens as he looks up to the sky. "Deku talks way too much, but I guess it's not exactly a bad thing."

"If it wasn't for Izu I would still be with my foster parents getting muzzled every night. He might share way too much but he's what connects us all together." A wide grin spreads across Brain Fucker's face. "You've got a pretty amazing boyfriend Bakugo."

Mirroring the two sitting infront of him, Katsuki smiles as well. "Yeah. I guess I do have an amazing boyfriend."

They sit there for a few more seconds, smiles not leaving their faces throughout. Picking back up his coffee Aizawa finally breaks the silence. "Maybe we should postpone training to another day." He turns to Katsuki. "Same time next week?"

"You still want me to train with you?"

"Well of course, one training session isn't very beneficial to anyone is it."

Katsuki stays silent for a moment, to shocked to speak. Eventually his previous smile slips back onto his face. "Then sure. Same time next week."

Entrance exam.

It's 6am in the morning and Katsuki is meeting All Might in their usual training spot. Walking up to the now totaly cleared beach in his school uniform, he can see not only All Might but Recovery girl and the detective as well, he sighs. The last time all three of them were together he got tricked into getting One for all, he knew that they all wanted to wish him luck before the exam but he still couldn't help the slight feeling of dread bubbling up in his stomach. That feeling is quickly dissipates though when Recovery girl spots him and waves him over, a soft smile plastered on her face.

Reaching the adults Katsuki can immediately feel the warm and happy atmosphere which melts away all his worry and doubts. As soon as he gets to them Yagi-sensei pats him on the back and smiles.

"How are you feeling Young Bakugo?"

With a confident smile on his face Katsuki nods. "Ready as I'll ever be."

Inflating into his other form All Might gives a booming laugh. "That's great to hear Young Bakugo. You'll do great so don't lose that confidence now."

Katsuki crosses his arms. "I told you to forget about that." He huffs.

"Forget about what? You crying because you didn't think you deserved OFA." Tsukauchi walks up to the two snickering, Recovery girl comes up behind him.

"Yes that, so hurry up and forget about it." Katsuki growls.

"Relax he's just messing with you." Recovery girl ruffles his hair, he doesn't push her off.

"That's right, I'm just messing with you. That incident never happened okay." Tsukauchi mimics zipping his mouth shut before smiling. Confused by the turn of events Katsuki just growls and crosses his arms.

"Whatever, atleast you understand."

"Anyway I should be leaving now, I've got something to take care of before the exams start. I just came to wish you good luck." Recovery girls says as she gathers her things. She walks back to Katsuki and ruffles his hair one more time but this time he pushes her away. "I'm sure you'll do amazing dear, I'll see you soon okay."

He nods as Recovery girl takes her leave. When she's gone the three who are left continue to talk, (tease in Tsukauchi's case) until they realise they should get going.

"I'll give you both a ride, okay."

"Thank you Tsukauchi, I appreciate it."

The drive is long and for the majority of the way Katsuki doesn't say anything. He preferred just listening into the other two's conversation, it relaxed him and helped him forget about the weight and responsibilities AFO has put on him. He smiles, All Might might not be the best teacher, and Tsukauchi might be annoying but either way he was glad that they were both here with him now.

Arriving at UA Katsuki looks out Tsukauchi's car window. He's astonished by what he sees, he's always only seen the school on TV never in real life, the school was ten times bigger than the TV ever made it seem and it radiated ten times more greatness. Hearing a door opening Katsuki turns to see Yagi-sensei getting out of the car in his All Might form. Following suit Katsuki gets out as well, he look to see if anyone is around. It still being pretty early with no one around he turns to All Might.

Frowning, Katsuki asks, "Is it really necessary for you to be in your hero form throughout the whole exam? No one is going to see you and all the teachers already know what you look like." All Might looks at Katsuki kind of suprised. "What, wasn't that what you were planning on doing?"

Flustered for a second All Might quickly snaps out of it and rests his hand on Katsuki's shoulder. "Don't you worry Young Bakugo, if you really think I shouldn't then I'll stay in my other form during the exams."

"He really knows you so well doesn't he." The two jump as they see Tsukauchi besides them unsure of when he got out the car. He just smirks before going over to Katsuki.

"Good luck." He says laying his hand on his shoulder. "We're a little early so use this extra time to prepare yourself, I believe you will do well so do your best." The detective gives Katsuki an approving smile before making his way to the driver's side of the car.

"...I think that's the nicest thing you've ever said to me." He can hear the detective laugh, genuine and bright. The detective turns towards the two once more, smile still plastered on his face.

"Unfortunately I can't stay, my case on Karma has been keeping me busy so I've got quite a lot of work to do. I'll see you both later though, okay." They both nod, Katsuki sightly going pale at the mention of his boyfriend. The detective gets into his car as they wave him off and continue to do so even after the car is out of sight. Eventually stopping, Katsuki turns to All Might once more.

"So I'll be off then, if you want I can let you into school now and you can find a place to sit." Katsuki nods as he follows All Might.

The outside of UA was one thing but going inside was a whole different experience. One step inside and you could already tell it was a prestigious school. The marble floor stretched far beyond the eye could see and sturdy pillars held up the school. Every step he took and every sight he saw radiated an expensive aura.

He looked around for a while but eventually finding a bench Katsuki goes to sit down. Taking out his phone Katsuki checks the time. It's still 7:30 meaning he still has an hour and a half before the exams starts. Removing the time registration opens then that meant he has 45 minutes of peace and no disturbance. He leans back closing his eyes so he could calm his nerves. Not even two minutes later his phone vibrates and he picks it up to see a text from Deku.

'Good luck Kacchan. Sorry I couldn't be there right now', is what it says. He smiles as he quickly replies with a 'I don't need luck, my success is already guaranteed'.

"Yo, Bakugo." Turning towards the voice Katsuki sees brain fucker strolling towards him. Taking a seat next to him, brain fucker smiles. "I guess Aizawa was right."

"Right about what?" Katsuki asks while turning his focus back to his phone.

"He told me that you were here, I'm guessing there's quite a lot of cameras." At the sound of that, almost on reflex Katsuki looks around for cameras, he spots a tiny black sphere barely visible to the human eye and sighs.

"Well that's unsettling, the hobo could be watching me right now."

"Actually I think it was Principal Nezu who told him."

"Well that's even more unsettling, both the hobo and Yagi-sensei said I should try my best to avoid Principal Nezu."

"Yeah, Aizawa told me the same thing. I don't think he likes Nezu."

"Isn't he a mouse?"

"I thought he was a bear."

"That's stupid how is he a bear."

"How is he a mouse?" The two glare at each other, both refusing to back down.

"Actually no one knows what he is." The two boys turn around to the new voice.

"Oh granny did you just get here?/Good morning recovery girl." The two boys say simultaneously.

"Good morning you two. That's right I just arrived now, I had some things to take care of."

"Will you be judging the entrance exam?" Brain freak asks.

Recovery girl shakes her head. "I won't be one of the judges but I'll still be there just incase anyone gets injured."

"UA really keeps you busy, huh."

"Without Recovery girl I'm pretty sure UA would have been sued by now." Katsuki comments.

Recovery girl laughs. "Your both very correct. UA works there students too hard and then that effects me. But enough about me, I should get going now. See you both later.

Recovery girl leaves and the two boys sit and chat, conversation coming easily. Its not until people start flooding in that they realise registration is open. They both make their way to the front of the school together to register and get their numbers. Having to wait in a line for over 10 minutes to register, the boys decide to walk over to the exam hall as the start time starts to near.

Finding no empty seats at the back the two boys sit together in the middle. They continue chatting for a while to pass the remaining time they had left. Nerves weren't a worry for the two, they were both the top of their class and had no doubt they would ace the written exam.

By 8:55 all seats are taken and the atmosphere is tense. Most of the people around the two are bubbling with anxiety, that anxiety only skyrockets when the written exams start to get passed around.
By 9AM the last paper is handed out and the exam starts. While all the other applicants are annoyed and seething with concern the two boys in the middle effortlessly complete their exam with ease. It was a good feeling to have, knowing that you could ace the only thing that was left up to your own power. No efforts of another to appreciate but that this outcome was all you, it made the two confident of what's to come.

Finishing their exams early Katsuki leans back and closes his eyes, his legs raised onto the table. Beside him, Hitoshi takes his lead, resting his head on the table he closes his eyes patiently waiting for the time to end. Soon enough time is up and everyone starts to pass along their exams to the end of their rows. Taking both his and Katsuki's exams Hitoshi passes them along to the person next to him.

As the lights start to dim Katsuki hasn't moved a muscle except for the occasional glances around the room. It isn't till a loud booming verse reverberates around the hall that Katsuki opens his eyes to pay full attention.

"EVERYBODY SAY HEYYY!!" The energetic shout is responded with silence except for the loud scoff coming from the middle of the audience. Hitoshi lays his head on his desk in embarrassment with a slight groan, also heard clearly in the silence.

Up on the stage Present Mic smirks before continuing.

"Well then little listeners I'll be giving you the low-down on how things are about to go." A display of three robots appear on the screen behind him.

"First of all you all will have 10 minutes to destroy as many villians you can and rack up points. There will be three different types of villians and your aim is to either destroy or immobilise them." he points to the screen. "There's the one pointer, two pointer and three pointer. You can use your quirks in anyway you want, but directly sabotaging or attacking any of your fellow examinees will not be prohibited and you'll be kindly escorted out of the exam. Understood?"

"Excuse me, I have a question." A few rows infront of Katsuki, a blue haired boy stands up, his arm raised.

"Go ahead little listener."

"On this hand out it says there's 4 robots yet you only mentioned three, if this is an error then it's highly disappointing. As a prestigious school this mistake is intolerable. And you two," he turns around and points at Katsuki. "get your legs off the table and tell your friend next to you to pay attention, you're obviously underestimating this exam and everyone taking part in it which is highly disrespectful-"

"First of all Four eyes, shut the fuck up. If you had waited a little longer you would have realised that the Cockatoo-" Hitoshi snorts raising his head from the table briefly. "The Cockatoo was just about to explain the fourth robot. Second of all if your any better than us then why are you focusing on people behind you instead of the instructions on the board. Aren't you the one underestimating the exam."

"Okay you two calm down." Present Mic says, his slight smirk widening. Katsuki sits back down crossing his arms. "Like you said there are four robots in total but the last one is a zero pointer, it would be best for you to just avoid them. Well then if that's it let's get started, get changed and in 15 minutes meet at your respective zones."

Getting up Katsuki grabs his bag. "I'm at zone D."

"I'm zone A so I guess I'll see you after the exam, you can come over to my house if you want."

"Yeah sure, why not. Deku won't be back for a while anyway. Let's meet by the front gates alright."

Hitoshi nods as the boys part ways to go and change, barely 5 minutes later they're making their way to their respective zones waiting for the exam to start.

———

Waiting right infront of the gate is Hitoshi. He stretches as he watches everyone else mentally prepare themselves. He spots the blue haired boy that had shouted at him and Bakugo earlier, he has engines coming out of his calves so his quirk is most likely speed based. The boy turns around and spots him staring so Hitoshi immediately turns away.

It's not a very long wait for everyone to arrive but it feels like hours as he feels the blue haired boys glare. Once everyone has finished changing and arrives the gates open. Hitoshi runs straight through not waiting for a signal, it's obvious that no ones followed him so he's got a head start. He picks up a metal pipe from the ground and is faced with his first robot.

Hitting it in it's weak point he can hear Mic yelling at the students that there's no start signal in real life. Soon there's a scampering of feet but Hitoshi is already onto his second robot. It was just a one pointer so it only took a few hits before he was running through the city again. It had only been a few seconds but everyone had already caught up and was making good work of the robots in his area.

He ran past them all, deciding to focus his attacks in the center of the city. He wasn't sure if he could handle the 2 and 3 pointers but he knew he couldn't rely on only the one point robots. Soon Hitoshi spots his first 2 pointer and his heart immediately sinks. It was much bigger than the 1 pointer and possibly stronger as well. It had a lot less visible weak points and even if Hitoshi was able to hit them he wasn't sure if he could do it with just a metal pipe.

Charging towards the robot he aims for its leg hopeful that he'd be able to topple it over. That would be much more easier with a capture scarf but he was yet to be able to use it in the midst of battle. To use it he currently needed a lot of focus just to move it, doing that while fighting someone seemed like an impossible dream but if Aizawa could do it then he knew one day he could too.

After quite a few hits the robot goes down and Hitoshi grabs one of it's arms. The metal it's made of is definitely sturdier than the one pointer so would give him a better chance against the three pointers. He continues running till he finally finds a three pointer, he runs up to it but his attention is caught by a boy with orange hair on the floor about to get his leg stepped on by a one pointer. It would have been more beneficial to get the three pointer, he's only on 4 points after all and he's sure that's nowhere near enough. However not being able to ignore the scene infront of him, he goes for the one pointer, aiming for it's legs first in hopes of stopping it from trampling the boy. By the time the robot is down someone else has already destroyed the three pointer, and that's how it continued on for most of the exam. He continuously spotted people in danger and sacrificed points to help them. It turns out when people are intently focused on a goal they lose all sight of their surroundings.

It was nearing the end of the exam and he knew he barely had enough points, right now he was unsure if he could possibly pass, but it was fine if he doesn't pass this exam there was always the sports festival. That's how Aizawa had gotten into the hero course, he had told Hitoshi that he would definitely get into the hero course first try but had let him register for gen ed to quench his anxiety. But it wasn't over yet, he still had a few more minutes to increase his points. That hope was crushed though when the zero pointer appeared.

"We have many promising applicants this year." Says Nezu, taking a sip of his coffee.

Cementoss crosses his arms. "I feel like this year's test scores will be very close together, but I think we all know who's going to come out on top."

"Katsuki Bakugo, quirk explosion." Power loader reads out from his file. "Well that explains the destructiveness."

"The little listener is certainly doing well, at this rate he could score a new record." Hizashi says through his intercom connected to the observation room.

Aizawa grimaces. "If he does score a new record no one tell him, I don't think I'll be able to handle his big ego."

"I don't think he's got that big of an ego, he's pretty humble." All Might points out.

Aizawa just snorts. "Maybe with you he's humble but the next time he sees me he's gonna rub it in my face."

"Do you both know him?" Snipe asks.

"Isn't that the kid from the sludge villian attack?" Vlad King questions.

"That's right." Principal Nezu sets down his tea. "All Might has been training him for months now."

Ectoplasm turns to All Might. "You've been training him, no wonder he's doing so well."

All Might chuckles shyly while rubbing the back of his head. "I don't think I did all that much. I'm 100% sure he would have done well even if he didn't know me."

"I completely agree. All Might did absolutely nothing." Shota glares his way and All Might immediately stops laughing.

"Sho come on, your letting your emotions show." Hizashi scolds.

"Hey Shota is that not the kid who you said you met in an alleyway?" Nemuri ask.

"Not him, his boyfriend."

"His boyfriend? He's got a boyfriend! But he looks so intimidating, totally not my type." she exclaims.

"They're childhood friends, and your 'type' has nothing to do with this."

"Aw look, Sho's getting defensive. The little listener really brings out the best in you."

"Shut up Hizashi."

"Okay, relax. I still haven't met the little listener yet, he always leaves by the time I get home."

Vlad King looks between the two adults in confusion. "Ok someone backtrack. Your telling me you both know this Bakugo Katsuki. Aizawa knows his boyfriend and seem to know a lot about him by the looks of it. Are you two playing favourites."

"That's insulting, I only tolerate Bakugo because of his boyfriend."

"And Hitoshi, him and Hitoshi are pretty good friends now." Hizashi calls out.

"And Hitoshi." Shota corrects.

"As for me I'm not participating in the judging because I'm fully aware he wouldn't like that."

"Oh, and why wouldn't he like that?" Nezu asks.

"He wants to win far and square, or in his words 'pummel all the extras without your or the hobo's help'."

Hizashi laughs. "Is Sho the hobo."

"I've told him many times to stop calling me that but he won't listen."

"Maybe it's because he doesn't remember your name, he has a hard time remembering names."

"He knows my name, he just wants to get on my nerves. Atleast that's what Deku said."

"Deku?"

"His boyfriend." All Might and Hizashi say simultaneously.

"Oh right, what's Deku's quirk anyway?" Nemuri asks.

"Read memories/Nail based." Both All Might and Shota say at the same time.

Shota looks over to All Might confused. How on earth did you think his quirk reads memories?"

"That's what Young Bakugo said, he told us his boyfriend can read memories and it's 100% true because Tsukauchi was there when he said it."

"Deku has a nail based quirk and I've seen him use it many times."

"I thought you said he refuses to tell you the details of his quirk."

"So, it's still impossible to have a memory reading nail based quirk."

"Well Young Bakugo said it himself, he has never mentioned anything about a nail based quirk only that it reads memories."

Aizawa narrows his eyes. "Is that why you were suspicious of Deku. Cause you thought that anything Bakugo does he would know as well."

"Well yes, is that not reason enough to be cautious. I don't know this Deku yet he knows just as much as Bakugo does about me."

"Sho, I think it's possible the little listener has a memory reading quirk cause when you tell me the things he's told you, they're in way to much detail for Bakugo to have just told him."

"No that's not possible, if he had a memory reading quirk he would have known about the call. He looked suprised when I told him Bakugo had called me so he didn't know."

"Aizawa are you doubting me, you can ask both Tsukauchi and Recovery girl they were both there when Young Bakugo said it."

Nezu sets down his tea. "Well this is certainly an interesting mystery but I'm afraid I'll have to cut this conversation short. We're nearing the end of the exams and have to bring out the zero pointer." He says pushing a button.

Crossing his arms, Shota decides to worry about Deku's quirk after the exams. A rumbling can be heard as the zero pointers start to walk along their respective cities, crushing everything in their path. As expected everyone runs away as soon as they see it. There wasn't anything special about the scene until Shota spots a participant trapped under some rubble and right in the robots line of path.

"Nezu there's a-" Shota doesn't finish his sentence when he sees one examinee run up towards the girl to help. It wasn't just any examinee either, it was his soon to be adopted son.

Having brought the other teachers attention to the scene as well they all watch as Hitoshi picks up a pipe and wedges it underneath the rock pinning the girl down. Pushing down he's able to lift the rock, not by much but enough for the girl to wiggle herself out. The robot growing ever nearer forces Hitoshi to dash towards it and strike it's weak spot in it's leg. Having delayed it for a few seconds he immediately runs back to the girl, picks her up bridal style and runs.

It was obvious that he wouldn't be able to out run it but thankfully he didn't need to as the exam ended before any real damage could be done.

Aizawa leans back in his chair and smiles. He wouldn't have expected anything less.

———

"Hey Bakugo over here." Hitoshi shouts as he waves Bakugo over.

Bakugo runs up to him where he's waiting with Aizawa and Mic and they immediately start talking about the exams.

They continue to talk, continuously talking over each other. Aizawa sighs as Mic just smiles.

"You both did well." Mic tells them.

Hitoshi frowns. "Really? I know I did fine in the written portion but I hardly got any points in the physical exam."

"Who told you that?" Aizawa asks making Hitoshi confused. "Do you really think UA would be the school it is if it only had one scoring method."

"Wait so there was another way to get points?" Katsuki exclaims.

"Technically I'm not supposed to tell you this but I'm pretty sure you both passed. Even if you didn't get many physical points you got quite a lot of hero points."

"Wait so we passed?"

"Yeah."

"We're actual students of UA now."

Aizawa smiles. "Wasn't that established from the start."

———

"Kurogiri start looking for him." A pale blue haired man sits at a bar table as he itches his neck.

"I'm afraid that will be a little difficult unless we become directly involved in a trafficking crime." A mist of purple smoke tells him getting the man upset.

"Then get involved with a trafficking crime." He snaps. "We need Karma if we're going to make a name for ourselves."

The mist guy sighs. "Yes but Shigiraki Tomura, I see no benefit for him if he joins us. The only reason he isn't a wanted villian is because he has the support of the people, if he joins us the government will have a reason to make him a criminal."

"Is he not already a criminal, what difference does it make. We can work on convincing him later but first we have to find him. This is the best thing to do, right Sensei?"

An intercom connected to the TV perks to life. "It's true that this will be a hard task but I believe that there will be greater benefits."

Hearing the mans words Kurogiri bows. "I'll start working on that then."

Out of the TV a woman's voice also appears. "Tomura dear, don't be so hard on Kurogiri alright. Karma will be a hard target to track so this will take quite some time."

"Yes I know that, you don't need to tell me." Shigiraki grumbles. "It doesn't matter, in the end I'll get what I want.

I always get what I want. "

First day

Looking in the mirror Katsuki scowls, he takes off his tie and tosses it onto the ground. Picking up his bag he makes his way downstairs to the kitchen. Taking an apple he then makes his way to the front entrance to put on his shoes.

"Hey hag! I'm leaving now." He shouts as he finishes tying his shoelaces and stands up.

"Hold it right there!" Hs mother Shouts, stamping through the corridor before he even has a chance to open the door and leave. "You can't just leave like that, I even called work that I was going to come in late just for you."

Katsuki crosses his arms. "No one asked you to do that old hag."

"Don't call your mother a hag!" She growls, hitting him across the head. "Why are you leaving so early anyway?"

"I already told you yesterday that I'm going over to Brain freak's house. Aizawa will take us both to school."

"Who the fuck is Brain freak?"

"My friend, I already told you that."

"That's a lie you don't have friends." Katsuki glares at his mum, no real malice behind it cause it was kind of true, well used to be true. "Or is he the guy that you're always bringing over without us knowing."

"No hag he is not, can I leave now." He says in a sarcastic tone.

"So when are you going to introduce that special friend of yours to us then?" She asks ignoring her sons sarcasm.

"Eventually mum." He rolls his eyes as he opens the door. "I'm gonna leave now cause I have somewhere to be." He says as he walks away, he waves. He can't see it but he can feel the slight frustration radiating from the hag.

"I'll be back late, so will your dad!" He hears her shout from the door. Waving again to let her know he heard he speeds off to the train station so he can meet Brain fucker and Deku.

Ringing the door bell Katsuki waits patiently for someone to answer. A tired Eraserhead is the one who answers the door and immediately lets him in.

"It's your boyfriend!" He shouts.

Entering the living room Katsuki feels a force tackle him over. By the tuffs of green curls he can easily tell that it's Deku who tackled him onto the ground. It hurts like hell but Katsuki doesn't complain, it was the first time he was seeing Deku in weeks after all. Patting Deku's head a few times he then pushes him off.

"Someone's happy to see you." Brain Fucker walks up to the two, a smirk clearly evident on his face.

"Of course I'm happy to see him, it's been weeks. Sorry that I wasn't able to see you for the exam." Deku gets up and goes to stand next to to Brain Fucker.

Getting up as well Katsuki sets his bag down on the couch. "It's fine Brain fu- Shinso was there so I wasn't worried." Looking over to the hobo he can see the slight glare he sends his way.

Deku smirks. "Glad to see you two are such great friends, you even remember his name."

Hitoshi snorts. "When he said he'd use my real name sometimes I didn't know he meant only when Aizawa is around."

"It better not only be when I am around." Katsuki sighs shuffling away from the hobo and making his way next to Deku.

Deku just laughs as he wraps his arms around his boyfriend. "Aizawa your scaring him."

"No he's not, he's not enough to scare me!" Katsuki growls. Everyone just laughs making him blush a little in embarrassment.
"Where's the Cockatoo?" He asks changing the subject.

"He went to the school early, has a few things to take care of." Aizawa tells him.

Brain freak suddenly perks up. "Hey you know who our homeroom teacher is right? Tell us, who is it?" The hobo just stares at him, he shrugs refusing to answer his question. Brain freak immediately pouts a little as he crosses his arms.

"I didn't tell you before so I don't know why you thought I would tell you now." Deku laughs as he pats both the boys on the back.

"Don't worry Toshi, you'll know soon enough. You lot should probably get going now if you don't want to be late though."

"What about you? You can stay here if you want." Aizawa asks, Deku shakes his head.

"I've got somewhere to go, there's been more trafficking cases lately so it's been keeping me busy."

"In turn you've been keeping Tsukauchi just as busy. He's in charge of your case which makes life harder for me. "

"Hasn't he been in charge of my case ever since I started as Karma?" He asks rhetorically. "Oh well I haven't been outed yet so you should be fine for the time being."

"There's no reason for anyone to suspect us of knowing Karma, I doubt it will be a big problem if its Tsukauchi on the case." Aizawa comments.

"Why does Deku have a whole police case anyway, shouldn't he just be like any other vigilante."

"I should but the government is corrupt and are most likely responsible for the trafficking. I'm a hindrance to them so they need to get rid of me, the easiest way would be to make me a wanted villian. Thankfully though I have the support of the public so I'm regarded as a vigilante instead of a villian, makes life easier for me."

"That must be really hard, I never thought about how you must have so many people after you cause you always act so normal to me."

Deku smiles. "What's the point of being all careful, my identity will be found out eventually. I might as well have as normal of a childhood I can. But enough talk, you'll be late if you don't leave soon. I'll see you all later, we can meet back here, okay."

"Okay." They all respond in unison as they make their way out the front door.

"Oh right one more thing." The three boys turn around to look at Aizawa. "You two are going to need these.

He holds out two UA pe uniforms as an evil smile crawls across his face. The boys both look at each other feeling uneasy of what is to come.

Walking through the corridor together with Bakugo the two boys try to find their classroom. Aizawa had said it would be the first door to their right so taking a right turn they both look up at the huge door. On it it said 1a, guessing that that was the right place the two boys walked in.

They were a bit early so there wasn't many people yet. Much to Bakugo's dismay however, the blue haired boy from the entrance exam was there. He really pissed him off so out of pure spite he walks up to a chair at the far end of the classroom, ignoring Four eyes' greeting, and puts his legs up on the desk.

Sighing, Hitoshi walks over to the other students in the room, not wanting to get involved in whatever Bakugo was about to get himself into. He goes up to a boy with heterochromia, his hair is split down the middle in red and white. Contrasting the red scar on his face, the boy glared at Shinso with his grey and red eyes. It was obvious that the boy didn't want to talk to him but Hitoshi sat next to him anyway.

"Hi." "He says as he smiles. "I'm Hitoshi Shinso, nice to meet you." The dual hair coloured boy glares at him.

"I'm Shoto Todoroki." He says, his voice prickly. Hitoshi sweat drops, ever since he became friends with Izu he gained more confidence to talk to people, he thought that starting UA would be fresh start to make friends. He thought he would be free to make a good first impression, good enough to make people forget about his quirk.

He sighs and tries his best to put on a big smile similar to Izu. "Nice to meet you Todoroki, I-" Todoroki raises his hand stopping Hitoshi mid sentence.

"I'm not here to make friends." He snarls slightly, telling Hitoshi that he's overstayed his welcome.

"Oh, well then sorry for bothering you." Getting up Hitoshi quickly steps away from the awkward atmosphere he's created. He hears a scoff and immediately knows it was from Bakugo.

"I think you just got rejected." Hitoshi feels someone whisper next to him, he jumps. Turning around he sees a black entity right in his face. The thing chuckles at Hotoshi's suprised expression and returns too his masters side. Looking up from the entity to the crow head student Hitoshi takes a step back.

"My apologies, Dark shadow tends to sneak up on people." The bird head says. Still a little shocked Hitoshi just nods. "I'm Fumikage Tokoyami, nice to meet you."

"N-nice to meet you too, I'm Hi-"

"I know, I heard."

"Oh." That's all Hitoshi says before he's backing up and moving to the desk behind Bakugo's. There's a few more people in the classroom but Hitoshi had enough social interaction for one day.

Sitting down he hears a chorus of snickers coming from the front of the classroom. It's a blond boy with a lightning streak in his hair, a girl with earphone jacks attached to her ears and a boy with tape dispensers on his elbows. Turning towards Katsuki he can see that he's also laughing at him, of course this sets off the engine guy who's been telling Bakugo off for the last 5 minutes. Banging his head on the table Hitoshi tries his best to ignore the second round of the boys lectures.

"Heya Shinso." Having had enough interaction Hitoshi looks up tiredly. The blond boy who was laughing at him just a few seconds ago is now by his side smiling. "I'm Denki Kaminari, that's Kyoka Jirou and Hanta Sero." He points to the two standing next to him.

"Nice to meet you." Hitoshi says hoping that this wasn't going to end awkwardly like the other two conversations.

"Look at you making a lot of friends, who knew you were so sociable." Bakugo grins baring his teeth a little.

"And you are?" Kaminari asks turning to Bakugo.

"Katsuki Bakugo." He answers crossing his arms.

Not being asked but taking the opportunity anyway the engine boy bows. "I am Tenya Iida it is very nice to meet you all."

"Oh oh, are we introducing ourselves, in that case I'm Mina Ashido." A pink skinned girl exclaims coming out of nowhere. Looking behind her Hitoshi can see that quite a few people had entered during the time he was 'socialising' now the class was basically full.

The last person to enter was the girl that Hitoshi had saved. Seeing him she instantly skips over.

"Oh it's you! Thank you again for saving me the other day." The girl smiles brightly almost reminding him of Izu.

"You don't need to thank me, it's what anyone would do after all."

"Your so humble, I'm Ochako Uraraka, I hope we can be friends." She extends an arm out to Hitoshi and just as he's about to take it he feels a familiar presence nearby.

Having spent enough time with him Bakugo feels it too. "For fuck's sake don't tell me-" Bakugo growls.

"If your here to make friends do it elsewhere." On the floor in his bright yellow sleeping bag is Aizawa.

"Out of all people we just had to have the hobo as our homeroom teacher!" Bakugo shouts earning him an intense glare from the so called hobo.

"Hey man, do you know him?" A red head asks walking over to Bakugo. Bakugo just growls slightly but doesn't say anything.

After a few seconds of silence Aizawa finally gets out of his sleeping bag. "Took you a minute to quiet down." As he says this he takes the time to send another glare Bakugo's way. "Time is limited, you kids lack rationality."

He walks up to the stand in the front of the room and looks over all the students. "I am your homeroom teacher for the next three years, Shota Aizawa a.k.a Eraserhead. I would say its a pleasure to meet you but I can already tell your all going to be problem children." Nobody says anything just stares, the only thing that breaks the silence is Bakugo's slight growls and Hitoshi banging his head on his table.

Ignoring the two Aizawa continues. "Take these and go get changed immediately, then meet at the PE grounds in 15 minutes. If you can't find it ask those two. "He points at the two boys then leaves.

The silence stretches out even after he's left, it's Uraraka that breaks it. "He says you two know where to go so could you wait for us to all get changed before we go over."

Katsuki grits his teeth and barges his way to the door. "I don't know a thing, Brain fucker can direct you there just fine on his own."

"Brain Fucker?" Denki asks.

"You shouldn't call people names!" Iida starts to lecture again but Bakugo just walks out the door ignoring him.

"That's me, sorry about him you get used to his attitude eventually. I'll happily wait for you all, we can go together." Smiling he then runs over to Bakugo who is already far ahead marching through the corridor. "Hold up Bakugo wait for me."

"If you can't catch up then you're too slow." He huffs as he continues marching full speed ahead.

Hitoshi just sighs and quickens his pace so they're now walking side by side. "I guess now we know what the pe uniforms were for." Bakugo growls, obviously still displeased of who their homeroom teacher turned out to be.

The other students continue to stare down the corridor where the two boys have long left, it's not until they're hear something fall on the floor that they remember they've got 15 minutes and go rush to the changing rooms.

10 minutes later the last person comes out of the changing room. Together as a class they walk to the PE grounds, Hitoshi leading the way with Bakugo besides him.

Making it to their destination they see a very bored Aizawa waiting for them in the middle. They all gather infront of him and talk nervously amongst themselves.

Aizawa taps his foot on the floor. "You're all barely on time. I might have given you 15 minutes today but in the future I expect you all changed in less than 5." Bakugo rolls his eyes earning him his third glare in the past 20 minutes.

Sighing Aizawa takes out a clipboard and a pen. "We'll be having a quirk apprehension test."

"A quirk apprehension test?" Someone calls out and soon a chorus of complaints follow.

"What about orientation?" Uraraka asks causing Aizawa to scoff.

"If you want to be a hero you don't have time for such leisurely activities. So if you lot are done complaining, Bakugo."

"What!"

"How far could you throw a ball in middle school."

"67 meters."

"Take this ball and try using your quirk, your free to do anything as long as you stay inside the circle."

At the mention of the use of his quirk an evil smile spread across Bakugo's face. Throwing the ball with all his might and an explosion to propel it faster he shouts 'DIE'.

Suprise crossed everyone's face at the choice of motivation except for Hitoshi who just sighed and Aizawa who grimaced.

"705.2 meters."

The whole class cheers in amusement. One stupid person had to open their mouth and say 'this will be fun'.

"Fun." Aizawa repeats. "If you all came here to have fun then why don't we up the stakes and say whoever comes in last place is immediately expelled." Hitoshi sighs, he's known Aizawa for quite a while now but he still has no idea if he is joking or telling the truth. "If you think I'm joking then I'll tell you now that I have expelled a whole class. I am not bluffing."

Hitoshi gulps. If he wasn't sure before then he's definitely sure now that Aizawa is 100% serious. He's fucked and he knows it.

It was time for the last test and Hitoshi was yet to do something that could guarantee that he doesn't come in last place. So far he's been average in all the trials, but thankfully not down right last. It doesn't make much of a difference though if everyone has excelled in atleast one trial. All that's left is the ball throw and just like with all the other trials, brainwashing is absolutely useless.

"So what are you gonna do?" Hearing a voice Hitoshi looks behind him to see Bakugo. "If you don't do well in this trial you could come last."

"I'm aware Bakugo, I don't need you voicing my thoughts." Hitoshi replies, his voice bitter.

"Then what are you going to do about it?"

"That's what I'm trying to figure out now. I don't know what I'm gonna do, my physical strength won't do me any good and my quirk definitely won't help me."

"What if it can."

"What are you on about?"

"You can use Aizawa's capture scarf can't you?"

"Yeah so what, how could that possib-" Hitoshi looks over to Aizawa, then he looks back at Bakugo, he's got a smug smile on his face as Hitoshi fights the urge to hug him. "Bakugo you're a genius."

He smirks. "Yeah I know, you don't need to tell me. Although you probably won't get the highest score but it should be good enough."

"That's fine, my score should be better than most of the class."

Bakugo points to the front. "Even though round cheeks just got a score of infinity."

Following Bakugo's finger Hitoshi sees Uraraka jumping up and down in glee. He's happy for the girl but can't help but feel a little envious. Even with the capture scarf there was absolutely no guarantee that Hitoshi wouldn't come last.

"Next is Hitoshi Shinso."

Hitoshi freezes, feeling a hand lay on his shoulder doesn't help his nerves anymore. "Maybe he won't expel you, I mean would he really expel his soon to be adopted son."

"Shinso hurry up."

Bakugo sighs. "Well you might as well get it over with." He pushes Hitoshi forward and having no choice but to keep on moving he walks towards the teacher.

Aizawa hands him a ball and with trembling hands he takes it. Aizawa doesn't say anything more, just signals for him to throw the ball. Walking into the circle he takes a deep breath.

"Uh Aizawa...Sensei, can I borrow-" He points to the scarf. Seeming to understand what he's saying Aizawa happily gives it to him.

"What's he gonna do with the scarf?" He hears one of his classmates say before he drowns out all noise and focuses on moving the capture weapon.

Putting the ball on top of the scarf he then extends it as far as it can go before throwing the ball. Once the ball is out of sight he turns to Aizawa waiting for his results. A few seconds pass before Aizawa holds up the meter.

"658.4 meters, not bad."

Sighing with relief Hitoshi makes his way back to the class. His score wasn't much compared to the others but atleast it could barely guarantee his place. Minutes passed while Aizawa counted up the scores, looking over to Bakugo he could see that the boy was talking to a red head. Smiling a little he turns away, atleast Izu would be glad that Bakugo's making friends.

"Hey Shinso!" Turning towards the voice he sees the blonde with the lightning streak in his hair from earlier. He waves back and the boy grins as he makes his way closer. "That was really cool, what you did with the scarf I mean. How did you know how to use it?"

"I've been training with it for quite some time now. A capture scarf is really hard to use."

"Really. That's super amazing then if you can use it."

Hitoshi blushes. "It's not like I can use it that well. I-"

"Okay all of you shut up now." Stopping their conversations they all turn to Aizawa. He clicks a button on a remote and their scores appear.

Hitoshi looks through the table to see which place he got. When he saw his name next to a number 14 he let out a breath he didn't know he was holding. Kaminari's name was just below him which made Hitoshi glad, he didn't know him but he seemed really nice, it would be a shame if he was expelled. Wondering down to the name in last place it says Toru Hagakure, Hitoshi didn't know who that was but looking around it was easy to tell.

The girl was invisible but it's evident that she was crying. That's when an evil grin appeared on Aizawa's face.

"No one is being expelled." He says. Everyone looks at him confused and skeptical. "It was just a logical ruse so you would all perform to your best."

The invisible girl started crying harder, this time tears of joy and relief. Hitoshi looks over to Aizawa, evil smile still in place. He sighs, he knew that the logical ruse was probably a lie but he let it go. Atleast now no one got expelled.

After lunch, Aizawa Sensei had taken the whole class on a tour around the school since they had missed orientation. The rest of the time was spent going over safety rules and expectations, which in Tenya's opinion were very important.

Now he was leaving, Todoroki next to him. They had met a few times at hero events and other things like that. Tenya wouldn't say they were great friends but they got along well. They had decided to leave together and were now heading out the gates, they talked a little, mostly about what they were up to since the last time they saw each other.

It wasn't till they heard a commotion coming from a nearby alleyway that they stopped all they were doing and looked that way. Tenya thought it would be a better idea to get a teacher but it was a little too late for that as Todoroki had already marched into the alleyway. Sighing, Tenya still followed him, they both searched for what caused the commotion, calling out to see if anyone is there in the process.

"Over here!" A voice called out further into the alleyway. Tenya knew it would be a terrible idea to go deeper inside and tried to tell Todoroki as much but he did anyway and just like before Tenya followed.

Now they were pretty deep inside, if they screamed for help they doubted anyone would hear them. Still looking for the person who called them over they felt a liquid injected into them and they both went limp.

Cackling, a man probably in his 30s walks into view. He looks over the boys before picking them both up like it was nothing. Tenya tries his best to get out of the mans grip but his thoughts are swimming, if it wasn't for the fact this has happened to him before he would have no idea he was being kidnapped. He knew going into the alley was a bad idea and now he has to go through the same traumatic experience from his childhood.

A plead for help escapes his lips but his words come out all garbled. Fortunately that seemed to be enough as he sees a person come swooping in, punching the man holding him in the process. The man drops both him and Todoroki as he focuses on defeating the obstacle infront of him.

Tenya isn't sure what happens, he's still paralysed and unable to think clearly but he can clearly hear the grunts and groans of the man indicating that he's loosing. His suspicions are only confirmed when the same person who swooped in comes over to him.

Feeling a rush of liquid he shoots straight up immediately looking around to see where Todoroki is. Feeling two slender hands rest on his shoulder he looks up at his saviour who turns out to be much younger than himself.

"Are you okay?" The boy asks, his green curls swaying in the wind.

Hesitant, Tenya nods. The boy smiles before going over to Todoroki to heal him as well. Just like with him the boy asks Todoroki if he's okay, getting a positive response he stands up to look at the two.

"The effects of the drug should be completely gone since I healed you. You can go see a doctor if you really want too but I suggest you go tell one of the teachers about this so they can restrain him first." He points to the kidnapper in pain on the ground.

"D-did you do that?" Tenya asks and the boys smile just gets brighter.

"Don't worry, nothing like this should happen again. Kidnappers sometimes target new hero students since your yet to have training, it's only really the desperate ones who go this far but whatever." The boy answers dodging Tenya's question.

Standing up Todoroki strolls over to him. "And how would you know that?" He asks wary of the boys intentions.

"I just do." The boy tells him dodging the question once more. "If you think I'm part of them then I assure you that I'm not, I was just passing by and I heard someone ask for help. But that isn't important, since your both hero students would you happen to know where I can find Kacchan?"

"Who?"

"Nevermind what about Aizawa?"

"Why are you looking for sensei?" Tenya asks starting to get a little suspicious as well.

"Oh Aizawa is your homeroom teacher. Then if you don't know where he is can you direct me to your classroom, I can find my own way from there."

"Your not a student so you can't get in the school, and even if you could we wouldn't tell you where he is anyway."

"Oh right, I forgot about that. Oh well that's fine, I'll just call him."

"Call him?" Tenya questions but if the boy heard him he definitely pretended like he didn't cause he's already long gone as he skips out the alleyway.

Looking at the boys previous position he walks up to Todoroki. The dual haired boy looks just as confused as he is but that emotion is quickly erased as they remember the kidnappers presence and rush to go get a teacher.

Battle trial

The first half of the next day was boring, with the exception of the press bombarding the students when they arrived at school. Like any normal school they had maths taught by ectoplasm and English taught by present mic. Their first hero training lesson wasn't to begin till after lunch.

Katsuki, currently talking to shitty hair sighs. They were also joined by pinky, tape dispenser and ears. They had all sat next to him during lunch, pikachu included but he was currently talking to Brain Fucker.

Katsuki didn't want to talk to them, they kind of forced themselves on him. Why him of all people he had no idea, it's not like he was exactly approachable, atleast that's what he was told in middle school. It wasn't till the final bell rang that the extras finally left Katsuki alone and went to their seats.

Two minutes later Yagi-sensei, in his words, comes 'through the door like a normal person', in his hero form. Katsuki has no idea what normal person goes through the door like that but he knew for sure All Might isn't one of them. Of course like the fangirls they all are, the whole class erupts into chatter in awe of seeing All Might in the flesh.

"Your two minutes late!" Katsuki calls out from his seat causing All Might and everyone else to turn to him for ruining the mood.

"Ah, I'm sorry. I was setting up the final touches for this afternoons lesson." All Might says looking kind of awkward. All of a sudden his demeanor changes and he is once again his confident self. "Anyway for this class we will be building up your hero foundation with various trials. We will be starting with the trial of Battle!"

"Battle!" The class repeats in excitement.

Taking out a remote, All Might presses a button. Boxes come out from the wall behind them and they all gawk in awe. "That's right, and to go with that we've prepared your hero costumes."

Everyone cheers as they go and grab their respective case then go get changed. Fifteen minutes later they are all gathered in ground beta inspecting and complementing each others costumes. Katsuki sees Brain fucker walk up to pink cheeks from the corner of his eye and smirks. He walks over to them barely overhearing there conversation.

"I wish I had drawn my costume better, this wasn't exactly what I was going for." Pink cheeks says rubbing her neck awkwardly.

"Nah I think it's great. It looks really cute." Shinso replies causing pink cheeks to blush. The two haven't spotted Katsuki yet, and obviously haven't spotted pikachu looking jealous off to the side either.

"Y-your outfit looks pretty great too." Pink cheeks stutters. She then tilts her head. "It kind of reminds me of our homeroom teacher though."

Katsuki snickers. "I think Shinso here took a little too much inspiration from Eraserhead." Brain Fucker blushes only just realising Katsuki was there.

"You only think that because of the scarf, my costume isn't that similar."

"Mhmm, keep telling yourself that."

"Alright you zygotes, listen up!" All Might's voice echoes throughout the premises as all the students turn to look at him. "We will be having an indoor battle trial. You mostly see villian attacks occur out in the open, but in reality most villian activity happens indoors. Therefore for this test you'll all be sorted into teams of two. You'll be put up against another team, one acting as the hero's and the other villians."

"What about foundational training." Frog face brings up.

"This is foundational training!" All Might exclaims causing Katsuki to face palm cause this was so obviously not foundational training.

The other students question increase as they all start to talk over each other, overwhelming All Might. Katsuki smirks, it was obvious that All Might had never taught before, and he knew he probably shouldn't be making fun of him but it was funny to see All Might struggling. Katsuki had no idea what pushed him to be a teacher, it was probably to help him find a successor, but All Might is way better off as a full time hero.

Finally the question were getting too overbearing, so All Might in his inexperience takes out a cheatsheet and starts to read from it.

"The villians will have a paper bomb they'll have to hide. If the hero's capture the villians with the capture tape or reach the bomb and touch it they win. If the villians hold out till the end with the bomb or they capture the hero's then they win. Anyways let's start!"

Glasses raises his hand to ask a question but doesn't wait to be called on. "And how will we be choosing our teams and partners."

"Everything will be chosen at random." All Might responds looking proud of himself for holding out so long.

"Is that really how we should do it, wouldn't it be better to pick our own partners."

"Pros never really get to choose who they work with, they're just forced into a battle with other hero's they might not know that well. That is probably what this exercise is testing." Ponytail declares.

"That's right, thank you Young Yaoyorozu. Let us now begin."

All Might picks names from a hat to pair everyone up then gives them a letter. Katsuki ends up being paired with Shinso, which was great since they both already know how to work together. Katsuki is confident all the extras are going down.

Next All Might picked who each team would be up against and whether they were a hero or villian. First were Shitty hair and tape dispenser as the hero's, against pinky and sparkles who were the villians. All Might sent them to get ready and led the rest of the class to a room set up with screens overlooking every room of the building the villians were setting up in.

Soon enough 5 minutes are up and an alarm signals the teams to start. All Might encourages everyone in the monitor room to think of their own strategies as the two teams clash. Katsuki walks up next to All Might and he smiles.

"Hello Young Bakugo. How have classes been so far?" He asks still focused on the screen.

"Boring." Katsuki replies.

"What about my class?"

"Stupid."

All Might's smile falters slightly. "Is it really that bad? It took me a long time to think of a sufficient lesson."

Bakugo sighs as he shifts his focus away from the battle happening on screen. "It would be a sufficient lesson if we weren't having it on the second day of school."

"I'm afraid I'm not sure what you mean." He says now fully focusing on Katsuki instead of the screen.

"Your putting students, who have no basic training whatsoever, up against each other. Someone is bound to get really hurt. The lesson is fine but I think there are bigger priorities."

"So this was a bad idea? Aizawa is really going to lecture me on this later, huh."

"I'm not saying it was a bad idea, the hobo will probably agree on that as well. Plus it's not the end of the world, you could always teach us the basics in our next lessons then redo an exercise like this to see our progress."

"That is a really good idea young Bakugo, thank you."

"Your welcome. Atleast with this excuse Aizawa won't be able to lecture you all that much. But if we're being real your a terrible teacher."

"I thought you just said it isn't that bad."

"The lesson isn't bad. Your teaching is bullshit and it always has been. Your only strong point as a teacher is mental support. "

"Why are you only telling me this now."

"Cause you've only ever asked now."

All Might opens his mouth to argue but is distracted as he sees Shitty hair tie up sparkles with the capture tape. He then goes off to look for tape dispenser who had gone off without him. Tape dispenser was currently in a battle with pinky by the bomb, looking closer it would seem that pinky might have over done the acid a bit cause a burn could be seen spreading across his arm. They didn't have the privilege to stop fighting though as taking his chance Shitty hair runs into the room trying his best to avoid getting near the other two.

Pinky tries her best to fight the two off at the same time, Tape dispenser was slowing down significantly but was still putting up a good fight nevertheless. Pinky continuously flings acid Shitty hairs way to get him away from the bomb, but of course pinky couldn't handle them both for long and shitty hair makes his way past the acid trap pinky had created and touches the bomb.

"The hero team wins!" All Might booms.

The two teams go back to the observation room where they're met by many cheers and congratulations. Clearing his throat All Might brings everyone's attention back to him then he personally congrats them all himself before sending Tape dispenser off to recovery girl.

"Now who can tell me who the mvp of this battle was."

Ponytail raises her hand and All Might picks on her. "I'm fairly certain it's Kirishima." Shitty hair flinches, not expecting his name to be said.

"Young Yaoyorozu can you tell me why you believe this."

"First of all Aoyama had gotten too distracted while fighting Kirishima which lead to his capture. He was quick to walk out on Ashido who accidentally got a little acid on his cape, but I guess she's also in the wrong for smearing a little more onto it purposefully. They may have won if they had stuck together but I doubt there teamwork would have been up to par considering their little argument at the beginning.

Then we go over to Sero. He was quick to leave Kirishima and at the looks of it I don't think their split up was conversed, then again I don't think they had made any sort of plan. Anyway once getting to Ashido he did a significant job in fighting her but by the looks of it if Kirishima hadn't come he would have no doubt lost due to the injury he sustained.

Ashido had done a great job holding them back but then again she's only one person and it was harder for her to take them both on by herself, but once again if it wasn't for her little stunt at the beginning she could have avoided that.

Kirishima was the obvious choice. He was able to deal with the situation quickly and effectively so he could make it back quickly to his partner. Kirishima did also have his own flaws but in all he did a good job."

All Might claps. "Brilliantly explained Young Yaoyorozu, you've basically said it all. I couldn't have said it better myself!"

"Cough, cause you weren't watching, cough." Bakugo teases causing All Might to send a glare his way. It isn't very effective though considering his smile is still as wide as ever.

"Well then onto the next battle. Young Bakugo and Young Shinso are next as the villians. Your up against team c as the hero's."

Frog face and Bird brain perk up when they hear their manes called, together with Shinso and Katsuki they all make their way to their designated area.

Finishing setting up the bomb the two boys split up without even having to exchange a word. Even if they had tried to formulate a plan Shinso knew Bakugo well enough to know that he would go straight to the front lines no matter what he said so he was merely saving his breath.

Seeing that the boys preparations were done, All Might announces the beginning of the battle and immediately Tokoyami and Asui come hurtling into the building. They stick together as they make their way through the building soon enough finding a sparking Bakugo heading their way. With not even a hint of hesitation Bakugo aims a right hook at dark shadow who immediately recoils from the light. Pulling Tokoyami back with her tongue, she uses that momentum to pull herself forward and over Bakugo.

Immediately turning around Bakugo aims an explosion at Asui which she dodges, Tokoyami comes at him from behind while dark shadow wraps around his torso. Bakugo easily gets rid of it by aiming explosions then he takes a quick step back as the two students join back together.

Taking a deep breath Bakugo analysis the situation. It seemed his explosions were effective against the shadow creature so he decides to go after that first. Once the shadow creature is out of the way bird brain will be easy to catch, but if frog face escapes in that time it will end up as a long distance battle between her and Brain freak. Brain freak is yet to learn how to use his capture scarf properly. Similarly if Bakugo was to focus on frog face it would still end up as long distance fight for brain freak, meaning if they were to separate it would end badly. It seems as if the two are planning on sticking together but Katsuki isn't taking any chances.

Using this chance to use a new move Bakugo puts his hands together creating a stun greande which temporarily disorientated his opponents. Running past them Bakugo takes the shortest route back to where Brain Fucker is so the extras don't get there before him.

"Hey Brain Fucker I'm coming back to you."

"Hey wait! Won't that just lead the others straight to the bomb?"

"We've got a better chance at winning together so suck it up!"

"Suck it up! Your the one who just left without saying anything!"

"Yeah and your the one who just let me do it, what kind of friend is fine with letting the other do all the work." Katsuki smirks, he can tell that Brain freak is doing that face he makes when he's absolutely just done with everything.

"Should I stay here or go somewhere else?"

"Stay, I'm nearly there." No less than 30 seconds later Katsuki is bursting into the room which inhabits a disappointed Shinso.

"If we lose I'm blaming it all on you."

"We're not gonna lose idiot. We've know each other way longer then they have so we'll be fine."

And just like he said, they were. They easily defeated the two thanks to their experience fighting together. They were able to keep them away from the bomb and capture them, All Might signals the end of the battle stating that the Villian team has one. Both groups make their way back to the monitor room and similar to the team before them, they are congratulated. Just like before they are given feedback and Asui is awarded the title of mvp.

Next up is Todoroki and Shouji as the hero's against Ojiro and Hagakure as the villians. Unlike all the previous matches this one was over in a matter of seconds. Katsuki watches in distress as Todoroki easily covers the whole building in a layer of ice. He walks to the bomb along with Shouji and effortlessly touches it making it a win for the hero team.

Katsuki isn't sure what happens after as he's too busy playing those few seconds over and over in his head. He was no longer the strongest even if he hated to admit, there was someone at the same level as him or potentially even stronger. But if he was no longer the strongest what was he? Just another student who's aggressive and always angry? His strength was the only thing he ever had going for him his whole life, what now he thinks.
How will anyone ever respect him now.

Chapter 19

Chapter Notes

I'm so sorry for not updating I completely forgot TT

"I watched yesterday's battle trial. Even though you all have no basic training or experience you all did pretty good. Although if you did have basic training there wouldn't have been so many injuries." The last part is muttered to himself but everyone can clearly see that he's pissed.

"Whatever, let's get down to business. This is kind of late notice but-"

'Is it another tests', the whole class thinks as they wait in dread.

"-but we have to chose a class president." Relief washes over the whole class like a wave.

'Finally something school like', is probably the thought that passes through everyone's mind before the ruckus begins and everybody is raising their hands to be picked.

Aizawa sighs. "Don't ask me, you have to decide yourselves. I don't care how you do it as long as you have decided by the end of homeroom." He gets into his sleeping bag. "No one wake me up unless you've decided or if there's an emergency." He plops himself on the floor and once the class confirms he's actually asleep they get to work.

"Let me be the class president. It's such a manly job." Kirishima exclaims but is quickly shut up by Mina.

"You can't be class president because it's manly, what kind of reason is that. I think I would be a ten times better fit than you." She chastises.

"I think I'm just as fit for the position so I should do it." Another classmate says. Soon enough everyone starts arguing and talking over each other again, the only ones not participating being Todoroki, Shinso, Bakugo, Tokoyami and Koda.

Finally having enough of the noise Bakugo shouts, "Would you all shut up, your giving me a headache!" Slowly the voices start to settle as they look over to the pissed teen.

"This is obviously not working so we should find a different method to choose." Jirou suggests.

Iida stands up swift and sharp as he pushes up his glasses. "That is correct I agree with Jirou. I suggest we should take a vote."

"But we hardly know each other." Asui intervenes.

"Precisely, so whoever gets the most votes is most certainly the best person for the job if they're already trusted so much." Iida says and everyone else agrees.

The class eventually finish taking a vote, most of them having voted for themselves. The only people who have more than one vote being Katsuki and Ponytail with two and Brain fucker with three.

"Oh, someone else voted for me." Bakugo exclaims. "I didn't expect that."

"That was me." Shinso tells him. "Although somehow I got three votes even though I didn't vote for myself."

"Oh yeah, I guess I didn't expect that either."

"Why are you so suprised, you more than deserve it. You saved me after all during the entrance exam." Uraraka tells him, her usual bubbly smile plastered on her face.

Bakugo smirks. "Well now we know where one vote came from so what about the other two. Who's willing to bet that pikachu is the second vote."

Kaminari gasps. "How did you know? Are you psychic?"

"No your just an idiot."

"Okay all of you shut up now." Aizawa raises from his sleeping bag as if raising from the dead. With a glare the whole class stops talking and Aizawa looks at the results on the board. "Shinso got the most votes so he's the class president. Bakugo and Yaoyorozu both have two points so I'm making Yaoyorozu class president cause Bakugo annoys me."

"Wait can he do that." Jirou calls out and a glare is sent her way.

"I'm the teacher so I can do whatever I damn want."

"I don't want to be vice class president anyway, if I can't be the best then I what's the point of the extra responsibility."

"You can be president then, I don't want to." Shinso tells him, almost pleading.

"Too late to back down, homeroom is over. Congratulations Shinso and Yaoyorozu." And with that Aizawa walks out the class dragging his sleeping bag behind him. The class is left in absolute silence and Shinso banging his head against his table.

Finally getting through the line and getting their food both Katsuki and Shinso look for a table. Walking through the lunch hall their names are called by Pikachu who's sitting with Shitty hair, Pinky and Tape dispenser. Like the idiot he is Shinso makes his way over to them, it's Katsuki who has to pull him back.

"We are not sitting with them." He snarls in a slight whisper.

"And why not?"

"Because they're annoying and I said so."

"Well then that's fine by me. I can go sit with them and you can go sit by yourself." Brain Fucker goes off to sit with the extras leaving Katsuki to stand alone in the middle of the lunch hall.

"Little bitch." Katsuki mutters under his breath as he gets over his pride and follows Brain freak.

"Yo Bakubro, you actually came to sit with us. I guess that means we're great friends already." Shitty hair calls out as both Katsuki and Shinso sit down.

"No. We're not friends, the only reason I'm here is because Brain Fucker insisted."

"And because he doesn't like being lonely."

"Ha! How would you know that. Why would I ever get lonely!"

Brain fucker raises his hands in playful defence. "Deku's words, not mine."

"Of course it is."

"Who's Deku?" Pinky asks.

"Non of your damn business pinky." Katsuki retorts.

Brain Fucker smirks. "It's his boyfriend."

Pinky squeals. "You've got a boyfriend! What's he like? What's his name? Is he cute?"

"What the fuck Pinky, shut up!"

Tape dispenser smirks. "It's surprising that you have a boyfriend. Your the last person I'd expect to be dating someone."

"Oh the misery, how has a guy like Bakugo got a boyfriend when I'm still single as can be." Pikachu strikes a dramatic pose ignoring the snarl Katsuki sends his way.

"Come on guys. Bakubro ain't that bad. I'm sure his boyfriend is really manly." Shitty hair says.

"Does manipulative count as manly?"

"Your boyfriend is manipulative? Isn't that-"

"Getting back to the point," Pikachu turns towards Brain Fucker as he rest his head on his hands. "Do you have a boyfriend Shinso?"

"No."

"Would you ever consider getting one?" Katsuki doesn't miss the the thumbs up that pinky and pikachu exchange. He rolls his eyes.

"I don't know I've never thought about it before." Dense motherfucker, Katsuki thinks but Pikachu seems to accept that answer with a goofy grin on his face.

"Hey guys!" Turning to the voice he sees pink cheeks and Glasses making their way to their table. "Can we sit here?"

"Of course." Shitty hair replies and they take their seat. Pink cheeks sitting opposite Brain Fucker while glasses sits next to her.

"So what were you all talking about?"

"Blasty has a boyfriend." Pinky squeals once again.

"Wait really! Like Bakugo, this Bakugo sitting with us right now?"

"Is there a problem with that?" Katsuki sneers.

Pink cheeks shakes her head. "No it's just surprising, that's all. Your probably the last person I would expect to have a boyfriend. You don't really look like the type you know."

"Well looks can be deceiving."

"That is correct, Uraraka you should refrain from assuming stuff about other people." Glasses comments, waving his arms in a robotic movement as he does.

"Right, sorry Iida-Kun." She turns back to Katsuki. "So what is he like?"

"He won't tell us anything about him but apparently he's manipulative." Pinky replies for him.

"I won't tell you anything about him because it's non of your damn business!"

"Oh come on Bakugo. Just tell us a little bit about him." Tape dispenser whines.

"Please refrain from forcing your friends to talk about something they're uncomfortable discussing." Glasses comments once again.

"He can be manipulative but he's really small and cute." Brain Fucker tells them.

"Hey I never gave you permission to tell them!" Katsuki yells. "And don't call my boyfriend cute!"

"Well I don't exactly need your permission to talk about my friend. Plus I'm doing this to get them off your back so be grateful." He replies, completely ignoring the cute comment.

"Oh Shinso-kun you know Bakugo's boyfriend as well?" Pink cheeks asks.

"That's right, we're good friends."

"Did you all go to the same middle school or something?"

"I don't even know where his middle school is." Katsuki says.

Shitty hair tilts his head. "So you both met through his boyfriend?" They both nod.

"That's really cool. You both seem really close." Pink cheeks giggles.

Brain fucker shrugs. "We haven't known each other for that long, only a couple of months."

"Seriously! But you both worked so well together yesterday, it was as if you've known each other for-"

Suddenly out of nowhere an alarm starts blaring and immediately people start to panic. Confused about the situation glasses asks an upperclassmen what's going on.

"This is a level 3 security breach meaning someone has infiltrated the school, we need to get out as soon as possible." The upperclassmen says panicked as he rushes towards the door just like many others. Soon enough everyone is gathered at the exit trying to make their way out of the door, Katsuki and the others having been swept into the panic as well. It was more or less a stampede at this point meaning people were bound to get hurt.

Katsuki was separated from Brain freak and the rest of the extras by the crowd, the only person he could recognise near him beimg Shitty hair. He can feel someone grabbing him and he squirms in pain accidentally elbowing someone in the process. He hated this situation, it was suffocating and he didn't know how long he could stay trapped in this crowd before bursting inor a panic attack. This situation reminded him of the sludge villian attack, an attack that he thought he was already over yet here he is remembering the situation over again. He grabs onto shitty hair, him being the only person he could possibly trust right now."

"Hey...b-bro, you okay?" He can barely just hear Shitty hair say. To focused on keeping his breathing steady Katsuki doesn't answer. Shitty hair tries his best to get closer to Katsuki making sure he doesn't let go of him for even a second but he stops as he sees a grey blur flying over the crowd.

Standing ontop of the exit sign glasses screams at the top of his lungs that everyone should calm down. He informs them that the intruders are just the press and slowly but surely the crowd starts to separate. By the time everything has gone back to normal Katsuki has calmed down and somehow found himself being hugged by Shitty hair. Pushing him away he sees as the rest of the extras who were sitting at the table with him start to rejoin.

Shitty hair pulls Katsuki's gaze away from them bringing it to him so they're looking eye to eye. "Are you alright?" He asks and Katsuki pushes him away once more.

"I'm fine Shitty hair why wouldn't I be."

"You were on the verge of a panic attack."

"Wait really, Bakugo are you okay?" Brain freak asks having overheard Shitty hair.

"I'm fine so everyone shut up!" Katsuki walks away leaving the rest of the extras who didn't hear anything confused.

———

Walking to who knows where Katsuki walks through the hallway. All the students are still in the lunch hall leaving the corridors deserted and Katsuki alone with his thoughts. Stuck in his head space he doesn't realise where he is until he hears a draw closing in the room to the left of him. He looks around the hallway not knowing how he strayed so far, he hears a door open and all of a sudden he's standing face to face with someone he's never seen before.

"Are you one of those assholes from the press, how'd you get so far into the school." Katsuki growls and the man stares at him flustered.

The mans face is all dry and his neck littered with scars. His blood red eyes create a peircing gaze and his hands hang poised by his sides. He smiles, every wrinkle curling up so clearly.

"Yeah, sorry for the ruckus. I seem to be lost so could you direct me to the exit." He says, his voice raspy.

"I'm pretty sure I have to report you."

"Please don't do that, just direct me to the exit, someone might find me before I get there anyway but there's always a chance they won't."

Glaring at the man Katsuki eventually gives in, he was exhausted and had a growing headache so he directs the man to the exit and decided to forget about the whole situation. Soon enough it's the end of lunch and the final bell is ringing, Katsuki sits alone and no one dares approach him.

The afternoons events obviously being the main topic of the extras conversations comes to an end when the hobo walks into the room. Everyone goes silent waiting for the lesson to start when Brain fucker raises his hand. Aizawa nods and Brain fucker walks to the front of the room.

"Yeah so turn of events," he says shoving his hands into his pockets. "I'm resigning as class president."

"You can't resign just like that." Pinky calls out a little shocked.

"Yeah I can, but don't get me wrong it's been fun, especially since I haven't even done anything yet. Whatever, long story short I assign Iida as the new class president, yay." He raises his hands unenthusiasticly.

"Can he do that?" Jirou asks for the second time today.

Aizawa shrugs, "I don't really care."

"Hey. It's my first and last command as class president so accept it." Just like that Brain fucker walks over to glasses kicking his chair to make him stand up, then pushes glasses to the front of the class. "Congrats to our new class president."

He starts to clap as does the rest of the class accepting it by this point. Brain fucker makes his way back to his chair smirking as he goes. Idiot.

For who knows what time this week, Izuku engages into battle. Almost on auto pilot Izuku easily dodges every attack thrown at him and in retaliation electrocutes anyone nearby. He continues to dodge and attack making sure that he leaves some of them alive for information, by the time they're all down he's running through a corridor looking for the kidnapped children.

For some reason Child trafficking cases had suddenly risen. Why they had decided for this to happen now, Izuku had no idea but he was aware that it was most likely because of his recent lack of activity. Ever since Kacchan had been attacked by the sludge villian Izuku has purposefully been spending more time with him, but that meant he had been slacking quite a bit. Every day he spent having fun a child was getting sold off but he forced himself to remain emotionless about the situation. He's only one person after all, he can't spend all his time saving every child and trying to have a life as well.

Entering a room where he believes the children are located he encounters another group of men who all start to hurl attacks his way. There were more men this time so it took a considerably longer amount of time to defeat them all but this time he didn't have to hold back. He had already figured out where they keep their files anyway, there was no more good they could possibly do for anyone then die.

Once they had all been defeated Izuku was pretty sure that the rest of the men who were involved had all run away. That was fine though, they hadn't seen his face and he could always go after them one by one another time. His priority now was the kids but he made a detour first to get the files before making his way back to the room he had been fighting in previously. Looking around there he eventually finds the children and places the files in a door infront of them. Following his usual routine, he calls the police and makes sure to write Karma on the wall. He hadn't gone in to tell the children to not leave but if they saw his name they would probably stay there, so with that Izuku leaves.

Changing out of his bloody clothes a shadow lurks, an entity that shouldn't be there watches him from the corner of it's eye. Ignorant to this Izuku keeps on changing, atleast this time whoever was watching had the decency to wait for him to finish changing (cough cough aizawa). Once Izuku had fully changed he picked up his bag wanting to make his way home but is stopped by purple mist all of a sudden materialising infront of him.

He watches in awe as the previously empty street now inhabits a person formed from the night, his suprise only grows when the inhabitant starts to speak.

"You are Karma, correct?" The mist man says.

"I'm afraid you've got the wrong person." Izuku replies as he quickly puts on his shirt and rushes to leave.

Stepping infront of him the mist man asks, "So you're not the one who killed all those people?"

Pausing for a second Izuku then rolls his eyes. "Why does everyone do this. If you saw me kill all those people just say so from the beginning, what's the point of asking if I'm Karma if you already know." Izuku sighs as he glares at the mist man. "What do you want?"

"My name is Kurogiri, I am apart of the league of villians."

"I asked what you want, not for an introduction."

Kurogiri bows. "My apologies, I'll get straight to the point. I am apart of a villian group known as the league of villians."

At that Izuku walks away but is once again stopped by the mist guy. "I'm not joining any villian group." He says firmly.

"I'm not asking you to join, my boss just wants to talk to you. That is all."

"Well I don't want to talk to your boss. I'm not interested in anything a villian has to say."

"Quite hypocritical don't you think. I may be a villian but you've killed more people in your 15 years of life then I have."

"How do u know I'm 15?"

"I've been tailing you for quite a while now on my masters orders. I know quite a lot about you by now which means if it comes to it I have a lot I can use against you."

Izuku glares at the entity trying to activate his quirk. For some weird reason his memory reading quirk won't work, he bites his lip. He has no idea why it's not activating, the only possibility were the mist man was unconscious and being controled, or he isn't even human. Not moving a muscle as he tries to figure out if he's bluffing or not he thinks of Kacchan and his new found friendship in Aizawa and Toshi. Before he didn't have anything to lose but now if anything were to happen to them he would be devastated.

"All I have to do is come with you right." Izuku says after a long silence.

"That is correct, you can just come with me and I can bring you back here straight after."

Izuku nods as he watches the mist guy create a warp gate. Hesitant he looks inside before finally gaining the courage to go inside.

Chapter Notes

Slight trigger warning, I put stars around the part so be warned.

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Walking through the warpgate feels like walking through a cloud, it's soft and relaxing, strongly juxtaposing it's appearance. Just as quickly as he had gone through though he had come out except this time in a completely new location. Izuku steps into a well furnished bar as he looks around.

It really was just a normal bar, there was nothing out of the ordinary about it, so how could it possibly be the secret hideout for a group of villians. His thoughts continue to race but are then interrupted by the sights of a man covered in hands playing video games. He seems to be really into it and has yet to notice Izuku, this only brings a whole new wave of thoughts but his doubts are the same. There was no way that they could actually be villians, they seemed so normal. Then again he was considered a villian to some yet he had a fairly normal life.

The mist man signals for him to take a seat while he goes over to the pale blue haired man who still hasn't noticed his arrival. Kurogiri takes the controller from the mans hands, he looks pissed at first but when brought to the attention of Izuku's presence completely forgets his previous anger. Like a little kid he rushes to put his game away then walks over to Izuku, the excitement evident in his eyes. Izuku was never going to even consider whatever requests they asked of him, but if he was this was already a bad sign.

The man takes a seat infront of him and smiles. "So your Karma? He's a bit younger than I expected." The last part is directed to Kurogiri who is now behind the bar table and cleaning cups.

"Rest assured Shigaraki Tomura, this is Karma."

The man accepts this claim easily and with a slight nod from him Kurogiri asks Izuku if he wants a drink. Being fine with just water the entity goes to get it for him but from the look in the other man's eye he can tell that there's something going on.

"Well then, my name is Shigiraki Tomura, the leader of the league of villians and to put everything shortly, I want you to join." The man's lips curl into a wider smile, Izuku has to stop the urge to offer the man lip balm.

He looks up at his ruby eyes, unsure what this man would do if he refused his offer. Taking this chance to use his quirk Izuku looks him eye to eye and stays like that for a while. Shigaraki stares back confused, it wasn't a requirement for them to be looking eye to eye for the quirk to activate but Izuku liked the flustered look that appeared on the mans face.

Kurogiri places a cup down loudly infront of Izuku catching him off guard and making him break eye contact. He grabs the water but thankfully now he knows not to drink it. They had planned to put some kind of substance inside which meant they could track his movements for 24 hours, Izuku wasn't sure of the details but he knew that it was best to just not drink it. Who took that long to give someone water anyway.

With the cup in his hands Izuku looks back at Shigiraki. "You asked if I want to join right?" The man nods seeming to perk up a little. "Then I'm going to tell you the same thing I told that guy. I'm not joining any villian group." The man's face instantly sours.

He glares at Izuku for a while before his previous smile appears back on his face. "We have a similar goal though."

"Really? And what might that be."

"We want to reform society."

"And how exactly do you plan to do that?"

"With your help of course." The man grins as Izuku rolls his eyes.

"Stop with the flattery and tell me your real intentions."

"The quickest way to rebuild something is to break it down first. We're going to break this society apart, and we'll start with killing All Might."

Izuku chokes on air, startled by the mans claim. "You want to Kill All Might?" He asks again to confirm he didn't mishear. The man nods and Izuku instantly goes back to reading his memories.

This time he finds out much more about the mans goal. Looking deeper into his memories he sees him breaking into UA and looking through files. Deeper. He sees a whole army of villians while he dishes out orders and tells them where they will be in an attack he's planning for a few days from now. Deeper. he sees a monster, it's limbs limp besides it's body with it's brain exposed. He hears Shigiraki asking for confirmation that the monster could really kill All Might, he sees a display of it's raw power. He gulps, maybe they really could kill All Might.

"Hello?" Izuku snaps out of his trance and finds himself looking at the villian. "Have I keepen you past your bed time or something?"

"Shut up, I don't have a bed time, I can sleep when I want."

"Really? Sleep is important for a growing child you know."

"I bet you regret not telling yourself that when you were a child, huh." Shigiraki snarls and Izuku tries to hold his firm gaze but gives out and rubs his eyes, the strain he's put on them becoming too much.

Shigiraki smirks. "I guess it really is past your bed time. You should drink the water, since you don't take care of your sleep schedule I'm guessing you don't keep hydrated either."

"What are you, my mum. I've known you for a few minutes and your already telling me how to live my life."

"I just empathise with you, you remind me of myself you know. You could be my little brother."

"Gosh I hope not. Who would want a brother delusional enough to think he could kill All Might."

The playful smile morphs back into a snarl. He clicks his hand on the table before wrapping all of his fingers around his cup. "Who would want an insolent brother." He says as the cup turns to dust. "You're looking a little pale, drink the water." He says slow and intimidating.

Realising Shigiraki wasn't going to let this go he takes a sip of the water, he really wants to leave now and this might be the only way to do it.

"Are you sure that's enough, if you really are dehydrated you should drink more." He says with a bitter sweet tone, the snarl still on his face. Wanting to leave a soon as possible Izuku gulps down more of the water, atleast he knows what's in it so he's got that advantage.

Putting the half empty cup down he looks at Shigiraki. "I'm not dehydrated, I don't need anymore water but thanks anyway. If you wouldn't mind I would like to get going."

"Really but you've barley been her for five minutes. Plus you're yet to give me an answer."

"I already gave you an answer and it's not changing. We definitely do not have the same goal, I want to stop trafficking not rebuild society, and you killing All Might isn't going to help me in any way. If you thought I was someone you could easily persuade you were wrong. I may be 15 but that doesn't mean you should treat me as a child, I can kill you in an instant if I really wanted to."

"Oh really?"

"Yes really, I'm not afraid to do it either." Izuku stands up looking quite insistent now. "Even if we really did have the same goal I wouldn't join you, joining a villian group will only be a disadvantage for me, I'm not like you."

"Shigiraki stands up as well. "Oh really, Your not like me you say. What's so different between you and me, we've both had a lonely childhood and we've both gone down the same path in life, so please tell me what could possibly be the difference between you and I."

"I'm not a villian."

"I'd beg to differ, you might not be a villian to the people but at the end of the day it doesn't matter what they think as long as there's a corrupt society. You may not be a villian legally but once your caught your crimes will rival that of a serial killer. Even more so considering how many people you've killed, you could even be given the death penalty."

Ignoring his words Izuku glares at him, the usual intensity of the glare gone due to the strain he put on his eyes. "Let me go. I'm not joining this group and I don't want anything to do with you."

"Shigaraki Tomura let's let him leave." The mist man says, intervening in the conversation. "We could always try again later."

Sighing Shigaraki stands up. "Fine, take him back."

"As you wish." Kurogiri opens a portal and signals for Izuku to go through.

He walks up to it not wanting to stay another second in this godforsaken place. He turns around looking the two villians in the eye. "You can try to persuade me as many times as you want but the answer will always be the same." Izuku walks into the warpgate, the last image he sees being Shigaraki's dark and twisted smile before everything fades to black.

Inko sitting by the monitor watches as the young boy leaves through the warpgate. He seemed strangely familiar, as if Inko had seen him before. She has no idea who the boy is but this was going to bug her for quite a while. She watches as AFO turns on his mic so he can speak to Tomura. All he says is a few words of encouragement to make sure Tomura doesn't feel down, it doesn't take much effort though since his meeting with Karma seemed to spark some determination in him.

Inko spaces out half way through the conversation, not realising that they had long finished till AFO starts to call her name.

"What's wrong?" He asks with his usual fake concern. Knowing this fact Inko still stayed with him, she loved him, even enough to give up her one and only child for him.

"It's nothing that boy just seems familiar somehow, that's all."

"Maybe he's that son of yours."

Inko stops, thinking over the possibility. It was true he had the same green hair as Izuku but many people had green hair.
"That's impossible, Izuku was definitely quirkless and Karma has a quirk. Plus Izuku was a boy that could never amount to anything, he was useless and there's no doubt he still is. I gave birth to him so I should know, he's way too kind and loving to even hurt a fly."

AFO looks skeptical for a while but eventually gives in. "If you say so, I guess it's true that boy could never amount to anything. Your his mother so you know him best. Although everything would have been much less troublesome if you had just killed the boy."

"Yeah. Maybe it would have."

Walking out of the warpgate Izuku finds himself back in the area he was prior to meeting the villian. Luckily he was brought back somewhere out of the police's sight but there was still quite a lot of them roaming around meaning it was risky to stay where he was.

He had planned to go meet Kacchan after he had finished saving the children but due to whatever substance the villians had given him he certainly couldn't go anywhere near Kacchan or anyone he cared about until he got it out of his system.

*Deciding to take the risk of being caught Izuku travels further into the alleyway, prioritising getting whatever he had drank out of him instead of running from the police. Bending over Izuku places his finger in his mouth, he coughs as he vomits out everything in his stomach, which wasn't much since he hadn't eaten all day. As he vomits he feels a lump forming in his throat, he coughs and a black gloop comes out his mouth.

Izuku writhes in disgust, whatever he had drank must have formulated into that black substance. Not sure whether he had gotten it all out he continues to cough and vomit out all the contents of his stomach, of course he wasn't going to take any chances even if it seemed like it was all gone from inside him. Getting up he wipes the corner of his mouth, feeling weak he pushes himself to get out of the alleyway quickly, he didn't want to get caught by the police.*

Once out he looks for a 24 hour store where he goes in and using the last of his money he buys water. He might have told Shigaraki that he wasn't dehydrated but in all honesty he probably was. Kacchan is the one who takes care of his health and makes sure he eats and drinks, without him around he probably would have starved to death a long time ago.

Having drank the water in one gulp, Izuku tosses the bottle away. Now he had nowhere to go for 24 hours, he wasn't familiar with this area either making life all that much harder. He walks around no particular goal in mind, he's tired and wants to sleep but knows it's to dangerous for that. Its the middle of the night and there's hardly anyone out, it would be the perfect opportunity for others to take advantage of him.

He keeps on walking, not wanting to stay in one place for too long. It seems like hours since he's started walking but the sky is still the same pitch black from when he started, checking his phone he sees its only been about an hour since he drank the mysterious substance. Just 23 more hours to go, he knew those hours were going to be hell.

From the corner of his eye he sees a few shady men eyeing him so he decides to move to the roof tops. Once getting to the roof of a 5 story building he sits down completely exhausted. Lying on the cold rooftop he looks up to the sky trying his best not to fall asleep, even so he finds his eyes closing several times threatening to pull him into a deep slumber. It isn't till he sees something fly past him at high speed that he gets over himself and wakes up completely.

Sighing he looks over to whatever had flown by, it was just a blur by now but Izuku could just barely see familiar red feathers. Getting up he decides to go after it, he had nothing better to do anyway and if he were to stay any longer he'd definitely fall asleep.

Jumping across the roof tops Izuku can no longer see whatever had flown by. He saw it land not that long ago but he had no idea where. Looking around as he jumps across the buildings it looks like he's lost what he's chasing, it must have been a person, they were too big to be some kind of bird. Izuku sighs, if that was the case they could be anywhere by now, it's 2am and way to dark out for him to even see anything.

Jumping from the rooftop he lands on the concrete deciding to look from the ground. He has no idea why he's still looking for this person, maybe it's the lack of sleep making him do this, or it could be the boredom. Either way he continues looking until eventually he realises the fruitless endeavour he's embarked on and gives up. Sighing he slumps down to the floor, he checks his phone, it's barely been half an hour.

He scrolls through his phone not having anything better to do, his battery percentage is low and he doesn't have a charger with him but he would deal with his phones death when he gets to it. While scrolling through his phone he hears conversation coming not that far from where he is. He knows it's stupid to go look and that he should leave but the lack of sleep is really getting to him.

Creeping through the alley he sticks his head out slightly trying to hear what the people are saying. He's too far away for him to hear what they're saying so he risks getting closer. He can only hear bits and peices of their conversation but he very clearly hears the name of the no.3 hero, Hawks, brought up. Getting even closer he looks round the corner seeing that the hero in question is the one talking.

Suprised Izuku takes out his phone. The hero was with someone else, he wasn't sure who he is but if they were meeting in the middle of an alleyway he certainly wasn't a hero. Setting his camera to night mode he takes photos of the two and records them for a while just for extra measure. Maybe these next 22 hours weren't going to be too bad now that he has blackmail material. Switching on the microphone in his phone he walks up to the two.

"Aren't you Hawks." He says matter of factly as he appears from seemingly nowhere infront of him. Now that he's got a better view he can clearly see that the person the hero is with has really bad burn marks that travel all across his body. His eyes shine blue like the ocean yet hold a dangerous gaze to them.

"Ah, yeah I am. And who might you be kid, you seem to have strayed a long way from home."

"I'm 15."

The hero flinches in visible shock. "Wait really. You look way younger."

"Thats not what's important right now." The other person says shutting the hero up. "Why are you here kid. It's the middle of the night you know, that's the time bad guys like to roam around." He bends down getting closer to Izuku. "Or did you run away from home, is that it? If that's the case whatever your going through there won't be half as bad as what you'll go through on the streets."

"Your right things would be so much better if I was at home right now, but unfortunately I'm unable to go home for 22 more hours so if your done babying me will one of you buy me food."

"You can't go home?" The burnt man asks, confused.

Hawks crosses his arms. "Didn't anyone ever teach you about talking to strangers, your not supposed to do that. And your especially not supposed to take food from them."

"Your not a stranger your literally the no.3 hero, and I'm not telling you to give me food I'm telling you to buy me it. I'll be right there the whole time, I'm not about to ingest some weird substance for the second time today."

The other man shouts, clearly pissed. "What the fuck is up with this kid. Go home!"

Izuku takes out his phone. "I've taken several pictures of you two together, I don't know who he is but I can easily find out. I'm pretty certain anyway that he's not someone a hero should be seen associating with."

"Are you trying to blackmail me?" The hero asks glaring at the boy. Unfortunately for him that glare couldn't even be compared to Izuku's as he glares back.

"Yes. There's literally no other word to call it except blackmail."

"Your blackmailing me because you want food?" The hero asks, still glaring even though he knows he's been outmatched.

"Yes. And because I'm bored and tired and need someone to talk to for the next 22 hours."

"So are you going to explain the 22 hours thing or what?" The blue eyed man questions, bringing himself back into the conversation.

"I was pressuresd into drinking a mysterious substance that tracks my location for 24 hours so I can't go home."

"Wow, kids get up to some weird things these days, how are you finding a substance that tracks your location?"

"Urgh, I'm not finding anything it was that damn villian that gave it to me cause he's trying to get me to join his little group."

"Okay hold up, where did villians come from. I thought you were a run away."

Frustrated now Izuku answers the others question. "I never said I was a run away, I said I can't go home for 22 hours. Where am I even going to run away from if I don't have parents."

"Ahh, so your an orphan accustomed to life in the shady part of town, got it."

"First of all that's rude. Don't call people orphans, second of all I'm pretty sure my mother is still alive somewhere."

"So you were abandoned. Not suprised, with an attitude like that who wouldn't abandon you."

Izuku glares at him. "I'm betting that if you weren't abandoned yourself you ran away before you could be."

"Yes I ran away but I wasn't going to be abandoned, that flaming peice of garbage would never do something like that which would ruin his image."

"So you have daddy issues. Okay, explains a lot."

"Would you both stop, I don't even know what's going on anymore!" The hero bangs his foot on the ground bringing the two's attention to him. "Look kid I don't know what you've gotten yourself into but if you didn't notice we were in the middle of a conversation before you rudely interrupted."

"Oh thats fine I'll wait. I'll continue voice recording while I'm at it as well."

The man sighs. "Damn this kid is annoying."

"I'm just trying to get what I want, what's so bad about that."

"Get what you want a different way and stop bothering us!"

"Fine then." He turns to Hawks. "Your a pretty much a slave to the hero commission meaning I have all the reason to kill you. Usually I wouldn't care about anyone not related to my goals but your different, if I were to kill you now I wonder how the commission would react."

"Are you threatening to kill me? What makes you think a kid like you could kill a hero like me with years of experience."

"You shouldn't underestimate me. Unless if you wanna die then hurry up and buy me food, isn't it your job to save people. So save me from starvation."

The other man just stands there speechless. Izuku stands there for a second wondering if he should take the risk of telling them that he's Karma. On the one hand if he got the no.3 hero on his side like Aizawa is then it would be highly beneficial. Then again, Hawks directly works under the commission so there's a high chance of getting caught.

"How should I phrase this? If you had a secret, and like there may be benefits to telling someone if they take it the right way, but then again telling them could be a huge risk and a danger to you if they take it the wrong way."

"Where is this coming from all of a sudden?"

"Oh you mean the fact that your Karma." The blue eyed man says with his phone in his hand.

"What?"

"How the fuck do you know that?"

"Just like you could easily figure out who I am I could do the same, and you've got the green hair. Plus there's a new Karma case on the news, happened about 2 hours ago, you've been going on about how you can't go home for 22 hours so I put two and two together. Oh, and you just threatened to kill this guy cause he works with the commission." The man takes a picture of Izuku with his phone.

"This tiny little kid is really Karma?" Hawks says bewildered.

"Fine if that's the way you wanna play-" Izuku activates his quirk. "-Your alias is Dabi, quirk is cremation and it seems like you've committed several crimes of arson, you pyromaniac." He looks deeper into his memories. "Your real name isss... Toya Tod-" All of a sudden he feels a pain in his eyes and reflexively rubs them, it was stupid for him to use the quirk again after he's already straind his eyes so much.

"How the fuck did you know all that."

"Looks like it's got something to do with his quirk, must have over used it."

Izuku sighs. "All I wanted was some food, is that too much to ask for." He says to himself.

"You know I can arrest you right now."

"I'm aware."

"I know what you look like now as well."

"Yeah I know."

"Your not gonna run?"

"I still want food... and a safe place to sleep while your at it, oh and a charger."

"Your really persistent."

"Its the lack of sleep. Once I've gotten some rest I'll regret all of this."

The hero sighs, pinching the bridge of his nose. "Fine then, come with me and I'll buy you food."

Izuku perks up. "Really? Your not trying to secretly arrest me are you?"

"No, considering you've been voice recording this whole time, and the fact that it would be a real bother to fight you, I think life would just be easier if I give you what you want. Plus I'm not about to ruin my public image by arresting you, I'll leave that job to someone who doesn't care what the public thinks of them."

"Yay!" Izuku jumps up and down as he goes after the hero who's already started walking, he waves at the pyromaniac who just rolls his eyes and leaves without saying another word.

Yep, he was definitely going to regret this later.

Chapter End Notes

Merry Christmas for those of you who celebrate. I forgot it was Christmas.

TT I'm the exact definition of academically smart but actually stupid.

Anyways Merry Christmas/Happy holidays and have a happy new year.

Chapter 21

"Aizawa I'm telling the truth. They have a guy covered in hands and a guy made of mist who probably isn't human. They're gonna attack during class 1-a's USJ visit so they can kill All Might."

Shota sighs. "Okay Deku, and tell me how do they plan to do that."

"They've got some big ass monster thing with multiple quirks that's just as strong as All Might. They're gonna hire multiple small time criminals to take care of the students."

"So they have a-" He clears his throat. "-big ass monster thing with multiple quirks, is that right."

"Yes, Aizawa I'm not lying."

"I'm not saying your lying, I'm just questioning how you know all this. I know for a fact they wouldn't have told you all of this when you met."

"Oh yeah, and how would you know." Deku says mockingly in slight annoyance.

"The villians were smart enough to sneak into UA, I think they're smart enough not to give you such crucial information. So I'm going to give you one more chance. I expect the truth and the complete truth. How do you know all this?"

Shota watches as the kid stays silent for a while, contemplating what to say. "... my quirk."

"Your quirk?" Shota repeats.

"I know it doesn't make sense and you might not believe me but a part of my quirk lets me read memories. That's how I know."

Aizawa stands there in complete silence, thoughts rushing through his mind at 1000 miles a second. This confirmation solves one mystery but the kids quirk didn't make sense, atleast now Shota knows All Might had been telling the truth about the memory reading. If so, how many times has this been used on him, how many times has Deku read his memories.

"Do you still not believe me, why won't you trust me!" Shota snaps out of his thoughts.

"No I believe you."

"Wait you do?" Pure suprise forms on the boys face as if he hadn't expected Shota to believe him at all.

Shota sighs. "What exactly do you expect me to do about this though. Nezu is going to wonder where I got this information from you know."

"You don't have to tell him anything, I will."

"You will?"

"If I leave an anonymous note he'll take it just as seriously."

"Your an idiot if you think you'll make it into UA and be able to slip Nezu a note while still being anonymous."

"It'll still be anonymous as long as he doesn't know who I really am."

"What are you getting at?"

An evil grin spreads across his face. "Do you think you can get me a UA uniform."

———

"Aizawa Sensei is late, he's always usually on time." Shitty hair says leaning on Katsuki's desk. The blond boy ignores him looking up at the ceiling instead.

"He's probably busy, that doesn't mean you should be messing around so go back to your seat." Glasses chastises.

Rolling his eyes Shitty hair makes his way back to his seat. "Yeah yeah, I'm going."

"But it is weird that sensei is late. Do you think something bad happened? Could it be about yesterday's incident? " Pink cheeks asks growing increasingly panicked after every word.

"I'm sure Aizawa Sensei is fine."

"Oh, oh, he's coming." Ears tells the class and they all immediately stop talking. "Oh."

"Huh what's wrong?" Asks Invisabitch.

"He's with someone else. They're about our age I think." There isn't anymore time to ask questions as the two being spoken about walk through the door.

Aizawa walks to the front of the classroom, glaring at everyone individually as he goes. The bags under his eyes are bigger than usual but no one comments on that. The boy following him looks around the classroom, his black hair, half gelled back and red eyes searching every corner. His uniform was slightly baggy but it was understandable considering how small he was. No one could have guessed he was the same age as all of them.

"This is Hisui, he's an exchange student and will be in this class for a day. Usually in a situation like this I'd say be nice but in all actuality I don't care what you do, ignore him for all I care. He sure as hell deserves it." The last part is muttered under his breath but the so called exchange student hears anyway.

Katsuki still ignoring everything around him, he doesn't take a good look at the exchange students face until a stunned Shinso taps him on the back, bringing his attention to the happenings of the class.

"Why the fuck are you here!" He shouts out instantly bringing the attention of the whole class to him.

"Bakugo that is no way to talk to a student, especially one who's just come from another school! Your setting a bad example!"

"Shut it Four eyes!"

Aizawa smirks. "Hisui, Unfortunately we don't have enough desks so why don't you grab a chair and go share with Bakugo."

"What!" Half the class shout out simultaneously.

"Is their a problem?"

"No offence but I don't think Bakugo isn the best person to put him next to." Tape dispenser comments.

"And why is that?" The hobo asks with fake concern.

"Because I have a strong feeling that the exchange student will be dead within an hour." Pink cheeks answers. Katsuki just growls too focused on the idiot infront of him to give a crap.

The whole class expect the exchange student flinch at the implications of the situation but he remains perfectly calm. "It'll be fine, I doubt anything bad will happen." The exchange student says.

"You say that but you don't know Bakugo." Pinky says.

Shinso sighs then proceeds to bang his head repeatedly on the table. "I'm not surprised." He mutters over and over again.

Katsuki growls, he speaks trying his best to look calm but is significantly failing. "He can share my desk, nothing will happen." His eye twitches in annoyance.

The 'exchange student' perks up. "Thank you, Bakugo is it? I really appreciate it." Damn this motherfucker is good, Katsuki thinks.

The protests of the class prove futile as Hisui walks over to Katsuki and takes a seat.

Katsuki glares at the boy as he takes a seat to the side of his desk. "Your going to explain all of this and it better be good." He whispers so only Deku can hear. Deku just smiles his stupid innocent smile then turns his attention to Aizawa.

For the rest of homeroom Deku ignores Katsuki's glares. If he noticed them he sure as hell didn't make it obvious. Soon enough homeroom ends and Aizawa rushes out the classroom without waiting for the next teacher to arrive like he usually would.

Mic enters the classroom and is suprised to see that Aizawa has already left. It isn't till after he's finished setting up all his stuff that he realises there's an extra pupil in his class.

"Who are you?" He asks suprised as he stares at Deku.

"He's the exchange student." Pikachu tells him. "Shouldn't you know that?"

"Exchange student?"

"Y-yeah. Didn't you know about this?"

"I had no idea about this. Since when did UA have exchange students?"

Deku smiles. "This was set up by Aizawa Sensei, he said he thought it would be a good thing for his class to learn the methods used in other schools."

"Oh, Shota didn't tell me anything about this." Aizawa's idiot husband doesn't ask anymore questions and just accepts it. He continues as normal not noticing Katsuki gritting his teeth in frustration.

"If I didn't know better it's like you want me to get exposed." Deku leans closer to Katsuki, his innocent grin now mischievous. "Don't you like the fact that I'm here Kacchan?"

When Mic's back is turned Shinso leans forward. "The fact that your here means you've roped Aizawa into one of your shenanigans. How you managed to do that, I don't know, but I do know it's a bad sign."

"Shinso, concentrate."

"Sorry."

Time goes by and eventually it's lunch time. Just like Mic all the other teachers had easily accepted the transfer student act which infuriated Katsuki. Throughout the whole morning he radiated a pissed aura which everyone felt, so they all decided to stay away from him for a while. Everyone except Deku who was unaffected by the teens rage.

As soon as their teacher leaves the whole class gets up to swarm the transfer student. Keeping up the act Deku smiles and answers all their questions even though he's just spouting bullshit.

Katsuki slams his hand on his desk instantly shutting the whole class up. The only one who dared to speak being the transfer student.

"I have an idea. Why don't you take me on a tour around the school Bakugo."

"Wait, you want Bakugo!" Most of the class shouts out simultaneously.

Deku tilts his head. "Is there something wrong with that? I just assumed that Aizawa put Bakugo in charge of me for the day."

"Yeah but Aizawa Sensei isn't here." Pink cheeks says. "So I could take you instead."

"Really? I appreciate the offer but are you alright with that Bakugo?" He turns to his boyfriend a playful smile etched onto his face.

"This little-" Katsuki mutters under his breath.

"What was that?"

"No, I'm not alright with that! I'll take you!"

Shitty hair rushes over to Katsuki. "Come on Bakubro, why don't you reconsider."

"If it'll make you all feel better I'll go with them." Shinso offers.

"No, no it's fine. Just Bakugo should be enough to show me around. I wouldn't want to take you all away from your precious lunch time."

"Your safety is more important to us than lunch."

Deku laughs. "I'll be fine, we can always meet up again once we're done."

"That's right, he'll be fine! Come on let's go." He drags Deku away, barging out the classroom and into the hallway.

——

The two turn the corner walking into a deserted corridor. As soon as they're out of sight from prying eyes Katsuki pins Deku to the wall, a snarl etched onto his lips.

Deku blushes. "Kacchan what are you doing all of a sudden. What if someone sees us."

"Cut the bullshit Deku! Why are you here?" Katsuki slams his hand against the wall but Deku doesn't even flinch.

"Can't I be here? I don't know why you're making such a big deal out of this."

"Deku answer the damn question!"

"Would you accept that I wanted to be with you as an answer?" Katsuki raises a hand letting off a few explosions in an attempt to intimidate the boy but as expected Deku is unaffected.

"Give me the real answer, dammit!"

"Shh, Kacchan people are gonna hear you." He says lowering his voice.

"I don't fucking care, hurry up and answer the question! I know you're here for a reason so tell me alrea-"

Katsuki's words are cut off when he feels Deku's lips touch his, his tongue sliping into Katsuki's open mouth and for a moment he's completely entranced. Snapping out of it not even a second later, Katsuki has the urge to bite him but doesn't when he hears scampering feet and giggling.

The giggling can still be heard far down the corridor and it isn't till after he makes sure that the girls have left that Deku parts from him. "See, I told you someone would hear us."

"What the fuck is wrong with you." Katsuki mutters, slightly out of breath.

"It was either that or make them think you were picking on an exchange student."
Deku crouches to make his way out of Katsuki's hold and looks down the corridor. Katsuki just stares at him in bewilderment, unsure what to say.

"Hey Kacchan do you happen to know how many cameras are in Principal Nezu's office?" Deku asks changing the subject.

"Why on earth would I know that."

"You've never been in his office before?" Katsuki shakes his head.

"Then do you know what time he wouldn't be in his office?"

"Are you planning to break into his office. Is that why you're here?"

"Do you know what time he wouldn't be in his office." Deku says again ignoring his question.

"I don't know. I think he teaches the third years in the afternoons but there's always teacher meetings at the end of the day in his office, so he'll be back there about half an hour before the end of lessons."

Deku smiles. "Thanks Kacchan. Let's hurry up and finish this tour so you can go back to your friends."

"They're not my friends and you still haven't told me the reason that your here. Why are you trying to break into Nezu's office."

Deku sighs and walks up to him. "I thought maybe the first kiss would get you off my back. Do you need another?"

"Deku." Katsuki growls and Deku just laughs in response.

"I'm joking, I'll tell you after school okay."

"Fine."

"Do you still want that kiss though."

"Fuck off." Katsuki growls as he stomps down the hall.

"So you don't?"

"Later." Is all he says before he goes out of sight leaving Deku sprinting to catch up to him.

——

"Hey you two. That was quick." The red head who Kacchan refers to as shitty hair says as he waves the two over. "Bakubro didn't do anything to you right?"

"Hey! Why would I do anything." Kacchan shouts.

"I mean you never know. With your personality and everything, you can never be too careful."

Izuku giggles. "No, everything was fine." He says before Kacchan can spit out another retort.

Sitting down next to Toshi Kacchan grumbles under his breath. "Why am I the one they assume did something. I was the victim in all this."

"What did he do?" Toshi asks so only them two can hear but Izuku hears as well.

He sits opposite the two and next to a blond with a lightning streak who's name he thinks is Kaminari. Sitting down he swiftly kicks the two under the table. They yelp bringing everyone's attention to them.

"What's wrong?" The nice girl who had introduced herself earlier as mina asks.

Toshi waves his arms in the air. "Nevermind, it's nothing." He tells them as Kacchan snarls Izuku's way. Izuku just smiles, the most happy he's been in a while.

1A is having their afternoon classes in their classroom but thankfully they were being taught by Aizawa. This would make it easier for him to sneak out of class for an extended period of time cause he was fully aware that Aizawa would tolerate just about anything if it was cause of Izuku. It was flattering that the man loved him so much and he wasn't sure what an actual father and son relationship looked like -he wasn't really sure that Aizawa and Hitoshi were the most normal father and son to use as an example - but how their relationship ended up like this, Izuku had no idea. To be honest he hadn't expected Aizawa to care about him so much.

Raising his hand Aizawa glares before allowing him to speak.

"May I go to the toilet?"

Dismissing him with a wave of his hand, Izuku gets up ignoring the look Kacchan and Toshi send his way. Making it out of the classroom he sets to work, he makes it past all the security cameras to the section of the school that the principals office is located. From now on it would be hard to avoid the cameras so Izuku decided use one of his quirks instead. He refrained himself from using any quirk other than his three main ones but none of those could help him right now so just this once he's breaking that rule.

Slipping into the wall he makes his way to the principals office, he could always just turn himself invisible but he's pretty sure that there were motion sensors around the office so this quirk was a better fit. It took quite a while but he eventually found the office and effortlessly went in this time turning invisible as an extra precaution. No alarms seemed to be set off so he goes over to the table taking out the note he had made sure to write before, he places it on the desk making sure it's somewhere that can easily be seen then turns to leave.

Changing his mind he walks up to the computer on the desk. It has a password but luckily Izuku also has a quirk for that but that meant his other one would have to be deactivated. He sighs as he hopes everything will turn out alright, deactivating the invisibility quirk he then activates a quirk which allows him to hack into the computer. Once unlocked he looks through it looking for the security system so he can delete any footage of himself. He isn't exactly sure what he's doing but it seems like it worked so he quickly closes the computer and rushes back into the walls to make it back to class.

If anyone wonder what took him so long they sure didn't ask as he took his seat, a wide smile plastered on his face.

He signed the note

"Someone snuck into my office this afternoon." Nezu says with a grim expression on his face. "And they left a note." He watches as all the teachers mirror the exact same expressions of slight horror on their faces, all of them except for one teacher who keeps a straight face.

Refusing to meet the principals gaze Aizawa turns away slightly pretending to be preoccupied with something else.

"What did the note say." Mic asks, looking a little panicked.

"The note is informing me of a villian attack during tomorrow's USJ trip."

"A villian attack? That's impossible. No villian should be able to get through the barrier and even if they did it would alert the whole school. No one would be stupid enough to risk that." Another teacher argues.

The principal crosses his arms as he reads from the note. "Well the note goes into a lot of detail. Apparently they call themselves the League of Villians. They've got a guy with a warpgate quirk and for some reason they've said that he's most likely not human."

"Isn't that enough proof that this is probably fake."

"Be patient this is just the beginning. They've also said that they have a monster with multiple quirks which they plan to use to kill All Might." All Might pales.

"This note just keeps getting stupider by the second!" The teachers start to shout, not able to hear them all talking over each other Nezu holds up his hand.

Vlad King being the only one to ignore the principal takes the silence as a chance to say his opinion. "How is it possible to have a multiple quirked monster. This is probably some prank."

Shota grits his teeth trying his best not to snap at the teachers. With the way things are going the teachers were most likely to ignore the warnings of the note and if that were to happen, Aizawa hates to think of what Deku would do to him. When it came to Bakugo and his safety he didn't joke around.

"Yes this may be some prank but it also may be real information so let me finish explaining."

"There's still more?"

"Yes. They're plan is to hire small time villians and to warp the kids away to separate them and make it easier to attack them. So far all this information might be unbelievable but at the end it clearly says the person behind all this is named Tomura Shigiraki. He's most likely in his 20's and his quirk is decay. Anything he touches with all five of his fingers will disintegrate." Nezu stops, looking up to observe the teachers reactions.

"Is that everything?" Nezu nods.

"If the culprit really has a decay quirk then it's highly likely that he is the one who broke into UA yesterday. No one other than us teachers should know that so it increases the probability of the events in this note happening." Nezu turns to Aizawa, a mischievous glint in his eyes. "You haven't said much Aizawa. What is your opinion on this situation?"

"I believe that we shouldn't take any chances."

"That's unusual. That isn't something you'd normally say. You'd usually pick the most logical solution. "

Aizawa curses the rat in his mind, obviously the principal knew what he was doing, it wouldn't be a secret to say that Nezu obviously suspected him. "The last part of the note increases the probability right, and this is the children's safety we're putting on the line so we shouldn't take any chances."

"Do you not have any security footage of who left the note?" Midnight asks.

"I do but they're face is hidden the whole time. Has there been anyone suspicious walking around lately?" Nezu looks at the teachers waiting for an answer but most of the teachers shake their head.

"Everything seemed normal to me. There aren't any students I would suspect of putting the note there." Snipe comments.

"If that's the case, there's most likely a student affiliated with this League of Villians who decided to give us this information." Cementoss concludes, most teachers agreeing with him.

"That is the only explanation I can think of."

"Unless..."

"Huh, unless what?"

"Unless it was the transfer student."

"Transfer student?"Nezu asks in suprise as he instinctively sits up straighter. "What transfer student."

"Didn't you know? Class 1A had a transfer student today." Hearing this the chimera turns his head towards Aizawa who immediately looks down, muttering a string of curses under his breath.

"Aizawa." Nezu says waiting for an explanation.

"There was a transfer student but I was told that Hizashi had been the one to bring him in. I had just accepted it cause Hizashi always does stupid things."

"Wait what!" Mic yelps. "First of all, I don't always do stupid things and second, the kids told me you were the one who brought him in." Mic sends a glare Aizawa's way. He sighs knowing he'll have a lot of explaining to do.

"Well checking who brought him in now, there's no footage of a transfer student ever entering the school." Nezu turns his computer for all the teachers to see. "This is him right." The teachers who had taught Class 1A today all nodded their heads.

"The kids had also told me that Aizawa had brought him in."

"And me." Both Cementoss and Ectoplasm raise their hands.

"Well obviously they were fooling you if I didn't even know about it. The most logical thing was to use me as an excuse so you all don't get suspicious."

"Okay but how would your class know to use Mic against you."

"I think you forget my son is in that class. I don't know what he tells those kids."

"Okay all of you, relax." Nezu says as he tries to calm them all down. It didn't take much trying though cause they all immediately shut up as soon as he started talking. "Why don't we do this. Just incase the letter is real we should postpone the trip to the USJ and have some teachers observe the area. The teachers still at the school will be on standby, if there is really a villian attack then immediately tell us. Does this sound like a sufficient plan?"

All the teachers nod, easily agreeing with the principles verdict. "Well then let's start planning. First of all we'll need a signal incase communication gets cut off..."

The teachers stay there for an hour more perfecting there plans against a villian attack that might not even happen. Once they've got all the details down they plan to meet again early in the morning. Nezu let's all the teachers go but makes Aizawa stay behind.

This was the moment he was dreading. He had somehow convinced the teachers that he wasn't the one who had brought in the transfer student but he knew that Nezu wouldn't be so easily swayed.

"What do you want from me."

"It's nothing hard, I just want you to bring Karma to the USJ tomorrow. I would like to speak to him after this is all over." Aizawa freezes.

"How did you know."

Nezu chuckles fondly. "I'm the Principal of this school and I'm smarter than most humans. I have no idea why you thought I wouldn't realise who left the note but if you really didn't want me to find out, he shouldn't have signed his name on the note."

Wait what. "He signed the note." Nezu nods. "Then what was the point of all this. He made me go through all of this to remain 'anonymous' yet he bloody signed the note." Aizawa aggressively mumbles to himself.

Chuckling, Nezu rests his head on his hands. "Seems like Karma is one interesting person. I've been suspicious of this Deku that you would talk about and today only confirmed my suspicions." Of course the fucking rat had suspected it all along.

"So what now?"

"Wait till after the attack to see. Your dismissed. " Shota grumbles as he makes his way out of the office as quickly as he can.

——

As soon as outside Shota is tackled by Hizashi's barrage of questions and has to put a finger to his lips to shut him up.

"First of all where's Hitoshi and Bakugo?"

"I'm not sure, I think they're with the transfer student, speaking of transfer student who is he and why did you try to push him onto me!" He says with a slight pout on his face.

"The transfer student was Deku and he pretty much threatened me to do this."

"He threatened you?"

"Well not directly but I felt pretty threatened."

"He made you, Shota Aizawa feel threatened. I thought you both had a good relationship?"

"We do but obviously he priorities the safety of his boyfriend."

"Okay but why did you bring him in as a transfer student, there was surely a better way."

"Of course there was a better way! I did all this to protect his identity!" Shota shouts, clearly frustrated. "He said he wanted to remain anonymous and I go through all that. This could seriously put me in trouble then what does that idiot do, he fucking signs his name on the note!"

"He signed his name on the note?"

"Yes!"

"I guess that's why Nezu didn't actually show us the note. But that doesn't matter right now, if it was from Karma then it means there most likely will be an attack."

"Yeah I'm pretty sure Nezu knows that."

"Then why did he put teachers on standby."

"Who knows what that rat is thinking. But it was probably the smartest thing to do without getting the other teachers suspicious. Nezu is also protecting Deku's identity but I have no idea why."

"That isn't a good sign. Things can spiral out of control very quickly."

"I'm aware Hizashi. If something bad happens I'm pinning it all on Deku." Shota says sending a few quick messages.

"That's kinda pathetic pinning your problems onto a 15 year old you know."

"Shut up, he's murdered hundreds. He might have the body of a 9 year old and the physical age of a 15 year old but he's got a mentality much older than us. Well that's what I thought before the idiot signed his own name on the note."

"Still pathetic." Hizashi mumbles under his breath as they make their way to their car.

"Hurry up and spill."

Izuku tilts his head to the side. "Spill?"

"Don't act dumb you know what I mean!" Kacchan shouts, clearly frustrated.

"I actually have no idea what you're on about."

Sighing, Toshi interupts before Kacchan can end up doing something he'll regret. "Come on Izu, you said you would explain so explain."

Knowing that they weren't going to get off his back till he answers he gives in. "Then do you wanna hear something interesting?"

"Is it related to this situation?" Kacchan asks.

"More or less."

"Then no!"

"He means yes." Toshi states before abruptly pushing Kacchan away.

Kacchan grits his teeth. "No, I said what I mean."

Laughing a little he stops walking and turns around to face the two. "I met hawks yesterday."

"Wait what." The two say simultaneously.

"Yeah and he took me to go buy food. Pretty sure he doesn't like me very much though, oh and he gave me one of his feathers. Although, that's probably so he'll always know my location, not the best situation for me but I kept the feather anyway."

"Wait, backtrack for a moment. How and where did you meet Hawks?" Kacchan asks.

"In an alleyway while I was waiting for the effects of some mysterious substance to wear off."

Toshi raises an eyebrow. "Mysterious substance?"

"That part isn't important."

"Uh, I think it is. Bakugo explain to your boyfriend how important that is."

"Are you doing drugs." Kacchan asks Izuku.

"No."

"Then I couldn't care less. Now tell me more about Hawks."

Toshi stares at the two absolutely bewildered, he has a strong urge to say something but knows whatever he says will be futile. He sighs as his phone starts to buzz and he takes it out of his pocket, seeing the messages only makes him sigh even more as he turns to the couple infront of him.

"Aizawa says we need to go meet him back at school." He tells them. "And he says Deku has to come too, he seems pretty pissed."

"Not suprised. Let's go Deku, maybe then we'll finally get some answers to your little stunt today."

"Ah, I was hoping you had forgotten about that."

——

Hearing knocking on the car window Shota turns to see his three problem children. Usually he would be happy to see all three of them together, even if he tries to hide it but seeing the green haired boy reignites his previous anger. He opens the door and they all step inside in complete silence, this silence continues even as they drive through the streets, with the exception of Hizashi's failed attempts to lighten the awkward atmosphere. Shota's anger clearly radiates inside the car so none of the problem children dare to make a sound.

The awkwardness continues even when inside the house. Shota signals with his eyes for Deku, and Deku alone, to sit down on the couch. Seeming to understand Hizashi takes the other two to a different room to save them from his husbands wrath.

From the corner of his eye Shota can see Deku signal to his boyfriend for help but him also being the person he is, also just ignores him.

Glaring at the green haired boy Shota makes sure the others have left before he goes of. "You signed your name on the note!"

"Yeah I did. Is that a problem?"

"You signed your fucking name on the note and your asking me if that's a problem!" Shota grits his teeth. "I put up with your stupid scheme because you wanted to protect your identity! I put up with your stupid scheme even though there was a high chance of me getting in trouble cause of it!"

"Okay, but did you actually get in trouble for it?"

"Shut up Deku! That's not the point, I put up with everything to protect your identity then you go and expose it. I put up with everything because you desperately wanted to protect Bakugo but how do you expect to do that if the teachers make the connection. I told you I would go talk to Nezu but you insisted on doing it yourself, Deku- no, Izuku, at this point I have no idea if you did all this to protect everyone or for yourself."

"For myself?" Deku repeats, his gaze now on the floor. "Are you insinuating I risked getting caught and revealing my identity for myself?"

"That is exactly what I'm insinuating. Sometimes I feel like you want to get caught. There was a much easier way to tell Nezu but you risked not just my safety but Bakugo's and even Hotoshi's as well. The boyfriend your fighting so hard to protect, what will happen to him when you're caught, or when the police find out that he knows you. He'll be seen as an accomplice you know. The secrecy of your identity doesn't affect just yourself, it affects everyone you know and love as well."

"DON'T YOU THINK I KNOW THAT!" Deku shouts, tears in his eyes. The unexpected outburst leaves Shota speechless. "Don't you think I already know the future implications this could have! Do you really think anyone would believe that note if I hadn't signed my name. I don't care about any of the implications right now though, the only thing that matters is all of your safety right now. There might not be anyone I know and love left if you don't stop tomorrow's attack."

"Deku-"

"Is that all you wanted to say?"

Shota pauses, unable to make eye contact. "No, Principal Nezu said you are to come to the USJ tomorrow."

"Okay, I will. Tell Kacchan I'm leaving." Getting up Deku strides to the door and Shota doesn't make any effort to stop him. Once he's left Shota sighs before going off to find his husband.

Waiting outside the school, Izuku looks around to see if he's caught anyone's attention but no one seems to care about his presence. He pulls his hoodie over his head and just as he's about to call Aizawa the gates automatically open. Confused for a second, Izuku quickly dismisses it and walks into the school. He knew that the USJ is on campus but his tour with Kacchan didn't extend that far.

Having to call Aizawa anyway Izuku goes to a deserted area as he waits for his phone to ring, there was a high chance of one of the teachers mistaking him for one of the villians and he really didn't want that. Hearing a click on the other end of the phone Izuku starts to whisper.

"Aizawa I'm here."

"Where exactly is here." He asks causing Izuku to look around before he answers.

"I'm by the edge of the school building."

"Okay that's fine, keep going round and you'll find it, you'll know it when you see it. I'll be waiting outside."

"K." Izuku tells him before he's hanging up the phone and making his journey around the edge of the school making sure no one sees him.

Half way through he sees Aizawa and forgetting yesterday's ordeal runs up to him. As soon as he's in arms length Aizawa pulls his hood further down his head completely shielding his face. He pushes him to a corner where he kneels down on the ground so he's now eye level with Izuku.

"Deku I'm gonna tell you this now so you better listen to me." There's a serious expression on his face and for once Izuku actually takes it seriously, this was risking Kacchan's safety as well after all. Izuku nods. "No matter, and I mean no matter what you are not to show yourself to any teachers even if it's Mic. You're to stay hidden in the USJ at all times even from the villians, no one must see you or know that you were there apart from me and I'm fully aware that your capable of all this. I know that you want to see everything unfold yourself, that is the only reason I'm allowing you to stay in the USJ during the attack. Do you understand?"

Izuku's nods but the stern expression doesn't leave Aizawa's face. "There's one more thing."

"What is it?"

"No matter what happens to me or any other teacher, no matter how injured we get don't come out."

"Are you saying you're expecting to be seriously injured?"

"No I'm saying there's a chance of getting injured so even then don't come out."

"Even if it's life threatening? I can save them you know."

"I'm aware Deku but even if it's life threatening, even if it means someone dies, you cannot let anyone know that your in there."

Izuku's mouth quivers as he looks at the ground. He doesn't want to agree to something like this if it means someone could die. He was curtain that saving someone's life was way more important than his identity or revealing himself.

Seeming to have read his mind Aizawa grabs both of his shoulders and shakes him a little making sure they're looking eye to eye. "This is about more than just your identity being revealed. In this work as a hero we're already prepared for death so please don't feel worried or guilty. You want to protect your boyfriend and I want to protect you so in turn please just listen to me and do as I say. Even if I was to die I wouldn't regret it if it meant I knew you were safe."

Izuku shoves him off. "Don't say things like that! You're not gonna die, promise you won't die!" He looks down again. "If you promise me that I'll listen to you, I won't let anyone know I'm there.

For the first time that day Aizawa's stern expression morphs into a mellow smile. "Obviously I ain't dying kid. And no one else is either so you won't have to worry about that."

"You promise."

He nods. "Yeah, I promise."

They hug, a silent apology for yesterday's events.

USJ Attack

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Finding a way to slip into the USJ from a window Izuku hurries to find a hiding place. Seeing a few teachers as he goes he has to take a few detours to make sure he is completely out of sight before he settles for just hiding in some trees surrounding the plaza. They were high up and there was a lot meaning he was easily covered. Although he hates to say it but his hair camouflages really well in them.

Legs dangling from the tree Izuku looks around to find Aizawa. Thankfully he was high up enough to see quite a lot of the plaza and ruin area. He knew Aizawa was to be placed in the ruin area along with cementoss so he could make the most of his ability to sneak up on people. If he squinted, Izuku could just barely see Mic stationed by the entrance. In the Plaza is All Might in his buff form stretching for the events to come. He's alone which makes sense, if he's forced to go all out all the other teachers would just be a burden to him. There was also the fact that a lot of the teachers were still at the school so it didn't cause a panic and as an extra precaution incase the villians attacked the students.

Everything was set up so all that was left to do was wait. Waiting for what seemed like hours the cramp that develop in Izuku's leg just grew more painful by the second, but he no longer has the time to worry about a leg cramp as a purple mist appears in the center of the plaza. All Might seeing this clicks a button sending a signal to all the teachers to get in position. Villians spewed out of the mist left and right, every time Izuku thought it was over more and more just came out.

By the time the warpgate closed over 50 villians were huddling in the middle of the plaza and Izuku could clearly see about the same amount spread across the other zones, or maybe even more. Izuku isn't sure how many villians were here but one thing he was sure about was that the amount of teachers present was definitely not enough. He had a brief thought of going down to help but quickly shoved it away. Nothing has happened yet, everything can still go smoothly he tells himself but he finds himself doubting those words when he hears a familiar sinister voice coming from behind the villians.

"All Might! Your here, it's almost like you knew we were coming." He says a smile on his face before it suddenly drops to a snarl. "You knew we were coming didn't you. Where are the children? Who told you!" Shigiraki's voice increasingly grows in volume till he's shouting at the top of his lungs and scratching his neck furiously.

"Kurogiri!" He snaps. "Why do they know, this wasn't the plan this wasn't what was supposed to happen!" His itching grows in ferocity till blood can be seen clinging to his fingernails. Izuku winces as he decides to turn his attention to Kurogiri now materialising next to the agitated man.

"Calm down Tomura Shigiraki. It is true that they shouldn't know but it's just the beginning. It seems we beat them significantly in numbers, there's only eight teachers at best."

Hearing this Shigiraki slowly calms down. He removes his hands from his neck and a smile creeps back on his face. "You hear that All Might!" He shouts. "We significantly outnumber you."

The unexpected voice of All Might cause Izuku to flinch. "You may outnumber us but we have a home advantage. We'll take you villians down without a hitch." Just barely Izuku can see All Might continuesly pressing a button. Due to his slightly wavering smile however, Izuku can tell that whatever the button is meant to do it's certainly not doing it.

Seeming to misunderstand the hero's faltering smile, the villians vile smirk only increasingly grows as he signals something to the mist guy causing him to disappear with the wind just as he had come. A yell comes from the entrance which Izuku can easily tell was from Mic and there he sees Kurogiri blocking the entrance. The two start to fight but Izuku's sight is soon brought back to the number 1 hero rushing forward and taking out all the small time villians. Shigiraki just stands there, smile still etched onto his face as All Might slowly but gradually defeats the villians with ease.

Deciding that All Might is fully capable of taking them all down Izuku then turns to see if he can spot Aizawa. Looking into the ruines area he can't see much, just the occasional burst of cement rising from the ground. He can't see where Aizawa is but there's a trail of bodies on the floor which he's guessing is thanks to Aizawa. All in all there doesn't seem to be that many villians in that area and Izuku is guessing they'll soon be done then go and back up All Might.

He then looks over to Mic to see how he's doing. He had only met him for the first time yesterday, and their one sided conversation in the car was kind of awkward, but Izuku really liked him. He was loud and bold, a stark contrast to Aizawa but it was a good contrast. They complemented each other well, even that was clear to Izuku so he really hoped nothing happens to Mic.

On guard Shota hides near a collapsed building as he waits for a signal for when someone has spotted the villians. He waits for a while and starts to question why the villians have yet to arrive when he hears All Might's booming voice.

"You may outnumber us but we have a home advantage. We'll take you villians down without a hitch." He hears him say.

Shota is confused, if the villians are here why wasn't the signal given out. He reaches for his ear to see if he can contact Cementoss but all that comes out of the earpiece is static. Shota sighs, there must be a villian disrupting the signal, he thinks. If that's the case then the teachers are heavily outnumbered and there's no means to get more unless someone is to leave making the situation even riskier. As luck would have it he can see a few villians walking around.

Looking around Shota sees if he can find a bit of glass or anything remotely shiny. Unfortunately for him none of the windows have any glass because it's considered 'dangerous', as if a whole area filled with collapsed buildings wasn't dangerous either.

Cursing himself for that outburst in this serious situation he keeps on searching, he had his phone but he decided to use that as a last resort just incase it caught the attention of any villians.

Eventually giving up Shota takes out his phone, using the flashlight to try and get a message along to 13 in the control booth. Unfortunately, just like he feared before he can finish the message the flashlight catches the attention of a villian he sees sneaking around to the side of him. Getting straight into action he jumps out from his hiding place and wraps his scarf around the villian pulling them towards him. He knees the villian in the gut and lets him fall to the ground, more villians who probably noticed the flashing as well starts to gather and seeing one of them taken out, start to rush to attack Shota.

Using the few precious seconds it'll take for the villians to reach him, Shota expertly puts his eydrops in and puts on his googles before setting to work. Erasing all the quirks in his sight he rushes to the group approaching and starts to fight them one by one. He wasn't used to fighting such a large group, the whole reason he was put into the ruins zone was so he could make the most of his stealth skills but desperate times call for desperate measures. Hopefully 13 had understood the message, the other teachers have to know the situation they're in. He doesn't have time to worry about that right now though, focusing back on the fight infront of him Shota can see pillars of cement rising up from the corner of his eye. He concludes that all the teachers are in similar conditions to him or maybe even worse.

Trying his best to take care of all the villians Shota would be lying if he said he wasn't even a little bit overwhelmed, he can get through it though, these villians weren't too hard to handle. His onslaught continues as he slowly makes his way forward leaving a trail of bodies as he goes. He knows at best that there couldn't be more than 20 villians in his zone but specialising on one to one combat wasn't of much use to him when his fight wasn't one on one.

Taking out all the villians around him took time but eventually they were all wiped out and he makes his way to the central plaza. He trusted that cementoss could handle the villians around him if he hasn't already so he goes to see the situation with All Might and if anyone has gone to get back up. Rushing out the ruines area he makes his way to the plaza without being seen. Hiding behind a bush he watches as All Might fights a group of almost 50 villians all by himself. That was a considerably larger amount then he had to fight but he still hates to think what could have happened to the students if Deku hadn't told him about the attack.

Looking over to the entrance of the USJ, Shota could just barely see the figure of his husband, it looked as if he was fighting someone or something, he couldn't tell. Atleast now he knew that there was probably no chance of backup arriving since Mic was still here. Everyone who was still at the school was teaching and none of them were about to interupt their lessons to try and call anyone in the USJ to find out why they haven't gotten a signal yet, which means they had to deal with this situation with just the nine of the teachers that were there. Shota had two options, go and help All Might with the smaller villians so he could save his energy for the monster that's apparently as strong as him, or he could go help Mic so they can go and contact the school. Of course he could always go to one of the other areas to help the other teachers but he trusted that they were all probably fine, they were all put into areas that advantaged them anyway. It was the same with the villians but they weren't that hard to handle.

Deciding to go and assist Mic he's about to make his way there when he hears a voice calling his name.

"Aizawa I'm up here." Looking up he sees his green headed problem child perfectly blended in with the tree he's in.

"I thought I told you to stay out of sight." Shota whispers aggressively.

"No, you told me to make sure no one knows I'm here except you." He whispers back with just as much aggression. "But that doesn't matter right now, Mic is fine from what I can see so I think you should go assist All Might instead."

"Really, and what makes you say that."

"I don't know, maybe the fact that I can actually see him better than you can from down there."

"It doesn't matter we need to get to the school, if-"

"Forget about the school, I told you already they have a monster which is made to kill All Might. No one but All Might stands a chance against it. I checked the news this morning and the idiot used up quite a lot of his time even though he knew about the villian attack. Aizawa you have to go help him so he'll have atleast some chance of beating the monster."

"If I go back to the school there'll be more teachers to help him."

"You won't get there fast enough and like I said before, Mic is fine. Have a little trust in your husband he'll be able to get out soon, he's got the upper hand right now anyway."

Considering the problem childs words Shota looks over to his husband, or as much of him he can see which is not very much. He then looks over to All Might where about 20 villians still stand. He looks back to Deku before sighing and getting up.

"Stay out of sight, okay." And just like that he jumps down into the plaza assisting All Might.

Deku scoffs. "What does it look like I've been doing this whole time."

Dodging the black mist sent his way Hizashi turns a dial on his speakers sending a sound wave towards the villian. The villian doesn't have a drastic reaction but there was no doubt the attack had affected him. Sending another attack the villian attempts to dodge but doesn't make it in time, taking this as an opportunity Hizashi rushes towards the villian while sending a barrage of sound waves stopping it in it's tracks. Taking out the knife he always keeps in his costume he swipes towards the villian but as expected it has no effect. He swipes again anyway but this time the mist clears a bit revealing a metal neck brace. Dodging another attack Hizashi skids back.

The fact that the Villian has a neck brace means it's got a body somewhere under all that mist. Hizashi smirks as he continously dodges the villians attack, each warp gate being harder to dodge than the next. Slowly but gradually he inches closer to the villian once again, all he'd need to do is hit it hard enough to distract it long enough for him to escape.

Finally a few meters away from the villian he sprints forward directly towards it. The villian obviously not having expected such a straight forward attack opens a warpgate infront him, Mic's smirk widens. Using the warpgate as an opportunity to momentarily hide his movements in a split second he increases the volume of his speakers and switches the hand holding the knife so he can focus on hand to hand combat with his most dominant hand.

Just as the warpgate is going to suck him up he takes his chances and slides under it. Suprised, the villian hesitates giving Hizashi the opportunity to aim for the neck. Holding his hand out he continues running at full speed while screaming at the top of his lungs, by the time the villian has come back to his senses its already too late as Hizashi slams his hand down on the metal brace as hard as he can.

The villian crashes to the ground and not even sparring a second Hizashi gets straight up and rushes to the door. Unfortunately the villian gets up sooner than he had expected so Hizashi turns, knife in hand.

He throws the knife towards the neck brace with perfect aim. It was a last minute effort but it worked, it hits the villian right on target giving Hizashi enough time to run out the door.

Swooping into the central plaza Shota attacks a herd of villians from behind. He sends a kick to the back of one mans head before being forced to dodge by another man with a sword. Skidding across the floor All Might only just notices him but without anytime to talk they both exchange a nod before focusing back on their targets. Dodging some kind of missile thing Shota is forced into a dangerous position, now he's surrounded on all sides so has no choice but to charge straight into the group. Erasing the quirks of the villians infront of him he uses his scarf to protect him from behind while he attacks the villians infront, it takes a while and there's quite a large amount of them but Shota wipes out the villians one by one as does All Might.

As the amount of villians slowly dwindles the pale blue haired villian starts to get more and more excited. His sick smile only grows as time goes on and All Might gets more tired. A shout can be heard ringing across the building and having basically spent most of his life with that man, Shota can immediately tell that was Mic. Shota doesn't see everything that happens but out of nowhere the mist villian materialises next to Shigiraki. He can't hear their conversation properly from the distance he's at and the ringing in his ears caused by his husband but he clearly hears the mist villian say something about one of the hero's having escaped.

Shota dodges another attack while still watching the two villians, he sees Shigiraki say something but has no idea what it is, he doesn't even have time to start guessing as a warp gate appears and out comes a beast like nothing he's ever seen before.

Red scars littered its pitch black body and its arms hung loosely by its sides. What particular stood out was its exposed brain, and its hands. Those huge hands which looked as if they could easily crush a boulder with no effort at all.

So this was the terrifying monster deku was on about, the word terrifying didn't even begin to cover it. It easily took every blow All Might sent its way, not even falling to the ground once. When Deku had said it was on par with All Might he had really meant it, what if Shota hadn't listened to Deku what if he had gone to help Mic, All Might can barely defeat that thing now so what if he was even more tired than this.

Shaking his head Shota decides to stop dwelling on what could have happened and focus on right now. He looks around spotting the guy covered in hands watching everything play out with a huge grin on his face. From what Deku had told him his name was Shigiraki Tomura, he's the one leading this whole attack and apparently controlling whatever that monster is. Aizawa sighs preparing himself to go back into battle. He was going to make sure that by the end of this every single one of these sick villians are detained.

Izuku watches eyes wide in shock as Aizawa lays limp on the floor, his skull bashed into the ground. All Might struggles to get up, his time limit nearly run out. The Nomu toppling over Aizawa raises its fist ready to start the second round of it's brutal onslaught, Izuku's breath hitches, his body twitching as he trys to resist the urge to sprint over to Aizawa's side right now. He had made a promise and Aizawa would be upset if he didn't keep it, but would that really matter if Aizawa was dea-

Izuku shakes his head, he refuses to believe Aizawa will die, he promised he wouldn't. Izuku strengthens his grip on the tree, he believes in Aizawa, he wouldn't break his promise so Izuku is going to stay here. This doesn't stop the tears from rolling down his face though, as if getting attacked by Shigaraki wasn't enough he watches in complete silence as the Nomu repeatedly hits Aizawa into the ground, over and over again. Each time Izuku flinches, he doesn't want to look, he doesn't want to watch someone he loves get hurt right infront of him but he forces himself to watch every second of it anyway. Even through the blurriness created by his tears he can clearly see every grueling second, he can see the blood oozing out of him into a puddle from seemingly every place of his body. The exposed flesh on his left elbow was nothing compared to how his arm was bent back in an unnatural way.

It was a disgusting sight. If it wasn't for the fact he was so used to blood and gore like this he would have already thrown up. He prays hoping that All Might, or anyone would come and save Aizawa. Of course he didn't expect his prayers to get answered, time passed and the brutal onslaught continued. Izuku sighs trying to calm himself down, he knows Aizawa told him not to do anything but at this moment in time he doesn't think that can be helped. He didn't want to break his promise but then again he didn't want Aizawa to break his either, as long as he stays in the tree he should be fine he thinks.

Searching through his quirks he finds a wind quirk. Using it to pick up a rock from the ground he then aims it at the Nomu. It was a long distance and he only had one shot, he couldn't miss. He's never believed in God but right now he was praying to any God out there who would listen to a murderer like him, 'please save Aizawa'.

Releasing the rock Izuku accelerates it with the wind quirk, he's never practiced with this quirk before so the best he could do was accelerate the rock straight forward. Speeding through the air however Izuku can tell thats its probably not going to hit the Nomu, he keeps on accelerating the rock anyway. He didn't care as long as it could distract him enough to leave Aizawa alone.

Finally nearing the monster, at high speed the rock skimmed past it just barely grazing it. Much to Izuku's dismay the nomu didn't even flinch, just continued on without even realising something had gone past it. Izuku doesn't know if this was a good thing when Shigiraki raises his head and looks straight at him. Izuku gulps as he goes further back into the tree, there was no guarantee that Shigiraki had actually seen him, he blends in pretty well with the tree after all, it could just be that he pinpointed the location that the rock had come from.

"Nomu stand down." Shigiraki fully turns in Izuku's direction now, a manic expression on his face. At this rate Izuku was going to get discovered and he'd have to go back on his promise to Aizawa. "Nomu," he raises his hand, "go after whoever is in that tree."

Izuku gasps as the Nomu comes running full speed towards him but thankfully, even though it would have been appreciated much more earlier, All Might finally gets up and punches the Nomu before it can even reach anywhere near Izuku.

All Might continues to pummel the monster, spouting some words that Izuku couldn't hear over the beating of his chest. It takes over 20 seconds of repeatedly punching the Nomu until it's sent flying through the roof of the USJ. It was at this exact moment that the front door opened and gathered by it were probably all the teachers at the school.

Immediately Snipe shoots Shigiraki in the arm and leg without a seconds thought. A peircing scream comes from the villian and in no time warp gates appear all across the USJ taking Shigiraki and all the people who can still walk, which isn't many. The teachers walk inside inspecting the situation. Izuku rolls his eyes, they came just as it was all over. He curses them all in his head a few times before seeing Mic run over into the plaza and remembering why he was so desperate in the first place.

Aizawa lays bloodied on the floor while Mic makes a big deal and shouts out commands, you can tell he furious from the pure anger in his voice. All Might, also quite injured and no longer in his buff form walks up to Mic to try and calm him down, obviously it doesn't work as Mic whacks his hand away when he reaches out and continues barking orders. Soon enough ambulances and police cars arrive at the school and Izuku watches as Aizawa is taken away.

The police go around arresting all the villians which were left behind meaning there was no way for Izuku to leave without being seen. Naturally while waiting his thoughts wonder to Aizawa.

Aizawa? What was he too him? His friend, it would be wrong to say they had a teacher student relationship. Then was it like Toshi's relationship with Aizawa? Izuku sighs as he continues to watch the police and hero's do their job. He could always think of their relationship later, there are more pressing matters to focus on.

Chapter End Notes

It's kind of funny how I read through the last chapter, forgot that it was my own story and got disappointed that there wasn't a next chapter. I was invested despite the fact I already knew what was going to happen.

Aftermath

Rushing to the hospital Izuku forgets about the real reason he had come to UA, but talking to Principal Nezu didn't seem like a priority at the moment. He had to wait for the police and ambulances to leave so he wouldn't be spotted on campus. Like expected they stayed for quite a while and every second got Izuku jittering. Anything could have happened in that time he was waiting, Aizawa could be in critical condition or he could maybe even be-

Izuku doesn't finish that last thought. Aizawa had promised he wouldn't die so Izuku will trust him. He upheld his part of the promise so he hopes and wishes Aizawa will as well, he wouldn't be able to bear the feeling of losing someone he loves again.

Having texted Toshi earlier for Mic's number, Izuku calls him as he sits on the bus, restless and shaking. The phone rings and after every one it makes Izuku even more nervous, his emotions overflow as the phone seems to ring endlessly. Eventually he hears a click and soon enough he's hearing Mic's voice.

"Hello." Is all Mic says, usually Izuku can tell how someone is feeling, even through the phone but it's obvious Mic can hide his emotions well.

"It's Deku." Izuku says and Mic sucks in a breath.

"He was rushed off to the ER and I am yet to know his condition."

Izuku starts to shake more, annoyed glances are sent his way by the other people on the bus but he ignores them, only focusing on Mic's words and how far away he still is from the hospital.

"Have you told Toshi what happened?"

"Not yet, I'll tell him once I'm told what condition he's in." Izuku nods even though he knows Mic can't see him. He doesn't care, he's restless and needs to move.

"I'm on my way to the hospital now but I don't know how long it'll take."

"That's fine, hopefully by the time your here I'll have more information. I'll be expecting you alright." And just like that they exchange their farewells and are bothing hanging up the phone.

Izuku continues to shake, more so now since he's got no one to talk to to distract him. Being in this bus with no one he knows is the same as being alone with his feelings and those are way to chaotic for him to want to face. How much worse would these feelings be if everyone he loves left him. He hadn't felt this bad since the day he became Karma, he'd known her for about a day yet that Akira Taiyo had made him go through so much. What if next time it was Toshi, or even Kacchan. Izuku hated thinking about this but he couldn't stop, the more time he spent alone the more his thoughts would race.

He clutches his heart and looks down, trying his best not to let his tears spill in public. His heart ached, it felt as if it would break apart at any given second. Despite this Izuku tries his best to keep it together, Aizawa is still alive is what he tells himself and he continues to tell himself that as he gets to the hospital. The only problem was the tiny voice at the back of his head, it kept popping up, kept tormenting him he tried to push it away but it just kept coming back, constantly reminding him that he could have stopped all of this a long time ago. He was the reason Aizawa was in that area in the first place. He could have gone and healed him before this all spiralled out of control yet he sat there watching in horror.

Walking into the ER Izuku runs over to Mic as soon as he sees him. Mic seems just as glad as he is to have somebody familiar by his side, someone to ground his thoughts. Izuku asks for Aizawa's condition but nothing is known yet. They both sit there, silent but glad for each others company.

A doctor walks in to the waiting room and immediately Mic stands up, Izuku just watches from his seat. He watches as the two discuss something that he's unable to hear, Mic isn't helping him try to make out their conversation either as he keeps a straight face the entire time. Izuku starts to shake with nerves again as their conversation continues to stretch out, he doesn't know what they're talking about after some time he's determined that it's probably not good. Once the two's conversation is over Mic turns around, seeing the shaking child he runs over concerned and to tell him what the doctor said.

Sitting back next to him Mic grabs his hand which is only a terrible sign for Izuku. "The doctor said that he had many injuries so they had to bring him into surgery straight away." A slight noise resembling a wheeze escapes the boys mouth, clearly sensing his distress Mic rubs his thumb across his hand in an attempt to calm the boy down. "Sho is completely fine though so don't worry. The doctor said that a lot of the injuries were mostly minor. His arm though was dislocated badly but thankfully there where no breaks, there was the disintegrated elbow but they took care of that. The muscles near his elbow will take long to repair but the doctor said it will eventually, but on the bright side Sho's got a sick new scar now."

Izuku thinks that was an attempt to make him laugh so he smiles, it's half genuine but he's still worried since he hasn't heard everything yet. "What about his head?" Izuku asks.

"I'm getting to that little listener." Mic takes a deep breath. "His head was the most severely injured but thankfully he managed to avoid any severe Brain damage atleast that's what I'm guessing, the doctor used a lot of words that I couldn't understand." Izuku smiles again, this time a little wider than the last, smiling as well Mic continues. "There was some of it that I was able to understand though. The doctor said he hurt the part of your brain which helps you see, I'm not sure where that is but he said that it wasn't that severe."

"Occipital lobe." Izuku states and Mic looks at him in suprise.

"How come you know that when even I don't."

Izuku laughs, "I Googled it once to see how I could make someone blind by hitting their head."

A confused expression morphs onto Mic's face. "Why?" He asks completely baffled which sends Izuku into a giggling fit.

"I wanted to try it.", Is all Izuku says and he can see the slight fear in Mic's eyes. "But forget about that, Aizawa can still see right."

Mic nods. "Thankfully, but don't ever go near his head okay." Izuku giggles again causing Mic to smile once again. "The only drawback is that Sho won't be able to use his quirk for as long as before but he can get around that, he's going to make a full recovery and everything will be fine."

Izuku looks down a somber smile on his face. "That's good." He says, "Can I go and see him?"

Mic nods. "Ask the receptionist to direct you, I'm just going to call Hitoshi first."

Izuku nods as he makes his way to the receptionist. The kind lady sitting behind the desk directs him to Aizawa's room and he finds himself getting lost a couple of times but eventually he finds the room. Knocking on the door he hears a grouchy voice signaling for him to come in.

"Shouldn't you be asleep?" Izuku asks as he walks into the room seeing Aizawa sitting upright on his bed and looking pissed.

"I don't need to sleep, I'm fine."

"Really cause you look like a mummy." He's covered head to toe in bandages and his arm wrapped in a sling, other than that he just looked tired which suprised Izuku cause he thought Aizawa would take any opportunity to sleep.

"The doctor over exaggerated the injuries, I'm fine."

Izuku smiles. "I doubt that but I'm glad to hear it anyway." He walks up to the chair besides the bed and takes a seat. "I should have known you are way to stubborn to get yourself killed."

"Stubbornness has nothing to do with it, I made a promise so I kept it." Aizawa signals for Izuku to come closer before ruffling his hair with his good arm. "And I'm glad you kept your promise too."

Izuku pushes his hand away. "Do you know how worried and guilty I felt, and it was all cause of that stupid promise you made me make." Tears start to prickle his eyes. "Aizawa I was so convinced you'd died, I hated myself the whole journey here. I felt like everything was my fault."

"It wasn't your fault."

"Of course it was!" By this point Izuku is fully sobbing, letting out all his pent up feelings he's been holding in this whole time. "I was the one who told you to go help All Might, if it wasn't for me you wouldn't be injured right now."

"You don't know that." Aizawa says, his voice calm as he watches Izuku cry.

"That doesn't matter, if I hadn't made you help All Might there's a chance you wouldn't be lying in a hospital bed right now."

"Theres also a chance the villians could have succeeded."

Izuku stays silent as if thinking over Aizawa's words. Many seconds later his tears are still falling and he starts to talk once again. "I could have gone down, I could have gone down and helped you before you even got the chance to get injured."

"I told you not too."

"Exactly, you told me not to so I sat there and watched. I watched the whole time as Shigaraki disintegrated your elbow. I watched as that monster broke your arm, as it banged your head into the ground over and over and over again. I watched the whole time as you could have died infront of me, I had the power to help you, to prevent all this but I sat and watched. I sat and watched because you told me too." Izuku hiccups not noticing Mic who had walked into the room, he doesn't even try to be a little bit careful as he flings himself on top of Aizawa in a hug.

"Never make me do that again." He says as he cries into Aizawa's arms. Aizawa strokes his hair waiting for all his tears to finally dry up, he doesn't try to push him away even though he's in agony, he just sits and waits, embracing the young boy infront of him.

"You know hearing that really made me happy." He says as the green haired boy's tears finally stops and he gets up. "I'm glad you care so much."

"Why wouldn't I?"

"I don't know, that time we talked about your nightmares I was worried that you'd end up a heartless murderer driven by revenge."

"Huh?" The boy squeaks, clearly confused.

Aizawa chuckles. "Killing has never been a problem for you and that scared me. So I vowed to guide you and make sure you'd always stay by your morals. You're really scary sometimes so I don't think you can blame me for having these thoughts problem child."

"Aww, Sho really cares about you." Startled Izuku turns around not realising that Mic had been there the whole time. Mic laughs, "Did I scare you little listener, sorry I didn't mean too."

"No it's fine, but um, did you see everything."

Mic runs up to him hugging him from the side. "Come on little listener, I think we've known each other long enough for you to feel comfortable with me seeing you cry."

"We met each other for the first time yesterday."

"I said what I said."

They all sit and chat for a while, all the tension completely gone as Aizawa sits there completely fine and alive. Almost an hour passes before Izuku realises something.

"Oh yeah, didn't Nezu say I should meet him. I completely forgot."

Aizawa rolls his eyes, clearly displeased at the mention of the rat. "Nezu can wait, we'll see him once I'm discharged. I'm sure he'll understand."

Easily accepting Aizawa's words Izuku's meeting with Nezu is put to the back of his mind and he continues to enjoy his time with Aizawa and Mic, cherishing every second.

——

Currently in the middle of a game with Bakugo, Hitoshi hears his phone ring and puts his controller down.

"Who's that?" Bakugo asks, clearly pissed that their game was interrupted.

"It's Mic." Hitoshi answers, accepting the call.

"Finally, put it on speaker, he's got a lot of explaining to do."

Like Bakugo said Hitoshi puts the call on speaker. "Hello." He says.

"Heya Hitoshi, how ya doing." Says Mic from the other end of the phone and as soon as Bakugo hears his voice he snatches the phone away from its owner and starts shouting into it.

"Hey Cockatoo, your going to explain everything that's going on right now! Do you know how much my mum put me through cause I brought Brain freak home with me!"

"Sho wouldn't like you calling him that."

"Is he with you?"

"No."

"Then I don't fucking care!"

Mic sighs. "Well it's nice to hear from you too Bakugo, I'm doing fine thanks for asking." Bakugo rolls his eyes.

"Get to the point."

Snatching his phone back from the angry pomeranian, Hitoshi walks over to the other end of the room away from the fuming teen. "What's going on Mic? Why'd you make me go over to Bakugo's, and why were we let out from school early?"

"Sorry that I'm telling you all of this so late but I promise I'll explain everything now."

"You better!" Bakugo shouts from across the room.

Ignoring the angry teen Mic continues what he was saying. "I'm not exactly sure how much I'm allowed to tell you but quite a few of the teachers were on a mission today, that's why most of the classes were combined. Anyway, Sho got really hurt on this mission so I'm at the hospital right now. He got out of surgery a while ago and the doctor said he'll make a full recovery but he's quite injured."

Hitoshi waits and listens, not wanting to interupt Mic. Once the loud blond has finally finished speaking then he talks. "What hospital are you at?" He asks.

"And why'd it take so damn long for you to tell us this!" Bakugo complains.

"I'm sorry, I was planning on telling you once I made sure Sho was okay. I'll text you which hospital we're at... oh, and Deku is here as well."

At the mention of his boyfriend Bakugo goes full blast angry pomeranian mode. "Why the fuck is Deku there! Does this have something to do with that fucking stunt he pulled yesterday-"

Hitoshi covers his ears not wanting to deal with Bakugo's shouting right now, thankfully his mom yells at him to shut up and there's peace and quiet once more. Mic hangs up the phone and immediately Hitoshi gathers his stuff. "Are you coming Bakugo."

"One sec let me go tell the hag." Once he's back they both leave the house and set off to the hospital.

———

Just coming out of the warpgate the villian bangs his hand on the table, frustrated. At that moment the screen in the corner comes to life but Tomura is too upset to even notice.

"I presume things didn't go so well." The voice through the screen says and only then does Tomura turn around to face the screen.

He grits his teeth. "They already knew the whole plan. How the hell did he know the whole plan!" Shigaraki bangs his hand against the table once more, this time accidentally disintegrating it.

"Well that surely complicates things." The voice says in its usual fake concern but to say it was actually disappointed was an understatement. It never expected the attack to be successful, but then again the fact that they already knew the plan made it just as annoyed as Tomura.

"Everything will be okay Tomura, you'll always get another chance to kill All Might."

Tomura scowls. "I guess that's true, but how did he know."

"How did who know?"

"Karma."

"Karma knew the whole plan. That is impossible Tomura, you hardly told him anything."

"Exactly! So how the fuck did he know!" Not having anything to slam his hand against anymore, he stamps on the ground.

The voice through the screen sighs. "What makes you think Karma knew the whole plan?"

"I saw him."

"You saw him?"

"Yes I saw his stupid green hair up in the tree. It seemed like him and Eraserhead were close, the hero would keep looking up to that exact same tree, I didn't understand till I saw him."

"Interesting." Is all the voice says as it spirals into its own thoughts.

"Sensei."

"Yes Tomura."

"I hate him."

"Who Karma?"

"Yes Karma. That arrogant little idiot ruined my plan! How did he know, how did he know!" Tomura begins to stamp his foot on the floor again and again but Kurogiri comes over to try and calm him down. "Get off of me!" He screams before focusing back onto the screen.

"Sensei, how did he know. Was it his quirk is that how? Or did I say something that I wasn't supposed to when we met?"

"I don't know Tomura, it's just as much as a mystery to me as it is to you but don't be disheartened. What have I always told you to do with the things you don't like?"

"Kill them."

"Exactly." The screen switches off and Tomura is sat there with new feul for the fire set inside him. He was going to kill that vigilante no matter what.

"Yes, kill that son of mine which has always given me so much trouble."

(3 days later)

"Hey Aizawa, are you sure you should be out of bed?"

"I'm fine, I can't stand another day sitting there doing nothing."

"For someone who loves to sleep I thought you would love being bed ridden."

"Well you thought wrong. Now let's get this over with so we can talk with the rat for the most minimal time possible."

"You really don't like him, huh?"

"He creeps me out."

Walking towards UA the gates open before they're even near them as if someone was expecting them to be there, which he guess someone was waiting for them. It's Saturday and since things didn't exactly go to plan a few days ago Izuku's meeting with Principal Nezu was rescheduled for today. He isn't sure what he wants to talk about but getting the Principal of UA on his side would be helpful in the long run.

Walking through the gates they make their way to the principals office, Izuku ahead of Aizawa having remembered the way from when he pretended to be a transfer student. Aizawa just sighs as he nears the office and Izuku stands just outside it waving for him to hurry up. Once Aizawa gets there, similarly to the front gates, the door to the office opens on its own and the two walk inside. Once Nezu sees the two he proceeds to put his tea down and signal for them to take a seat.

Once they're both sat down he begins to talk. "Karma, it's lovely to finally meet you." He reaches out his paw to shake his hand.

Taking it Izuku smiles. "Likewise. You can just call me Deku if you want."

Nezu smiles. "Alright then Deku, I'm guessing you want me to get straight to the point."

"Yes that would be appreciated." Aizawa says in a sarcastic tone but is thoroughly ignored by the two in the room.

"If I was to keep it simple, there's only one real reasons why I called you here today."

"Oh yeah, and what would that be."

"I'd like to offer you a place in UA."

Aizawa chokes on air as Izuku just sits there stunned. "Why?" They both ask at the same time.

Principal Nezu chuckles. "Well as you know UA follows a set of laws independent of the country. If you were to join UA, ultimately speaking you'd be safe from the law if your identity was ever to be found out. However you'd have to abide by the schools rules meaning you are unable to kill or do your vigilante work without a hero licence."

"So I wouldn't get arrested even if I was caught."

"Precisely."

"But I also wouldn't be able to kill or do my vigilante work for quite a while. Not until I get a hero licence."

"Yes."

"You want me, a vigilante, to get a hero licence before I can do my vigilante-ing."

"I know its not the most beneficial situation but it's for your future, you're old enough to enroll in UA and you'll have full protection from the law."

"Who cares about the law, I've never worried about it before so why should I now!"

"That's just from a child's perspective, think in others pperspectives as well. Aizawa, don't you agree that this would be bbeneficial for him?"

Aizawa sits there thinking for a while before he turns to Izuku. "I agree that it would be helpful to take the extra precautions, and this way we'd never have to worry about you getting caught. But ultimately this is your decision and I have no say in it."

"I don't want to give up my vigilante work and the way I do things, not killing isn't that much of a problem but I don't need my work to be hindered. I just don't see how it will work, I'm a vigilante not a hero, there's a difference for a reason. I may join the school at a later date if you'll still allow me, but right now I'd like to kindly decline your offer."

Nezu smiles as if expecting this. "You're very mature for your age aren't you. UA would be happy to take you at anytime, my offer will always stand for as long as you could possibly enroll in this school."

"Thank you." Izuku says before turning to Aizawa. "Don't tell Kacchan about this okay."

"Why not?"

"Cause he'll get mad that I chose to keep myself in danger of being imprisoned rather than joining the school."

Aizawa nods seeming to understand. "Yeah it would be best not to tell him."

Preparation

The class gasps as they watch Aizawa walk into the room with a significant amount of bandages all over his body. Hitoshi had to admit that it was a significantly less amount then when he had first saw him, but it was a significant amount still. Aizawa walks up to the podium at the front of the class, the class eyeing him as he goes. Its obvious they have many questions but it's also just as obvious that Aizawa wasn't going to answer them.

He clears his throat as he addresses the class. "Yeah so it turns out the sports festival will be taking place in 2 weeks." He says disinterested. "This festival provides a huge chance for you to get noticed by other hero's, or whatever."

The bored tone of their teacher leaves the whole class confused whether to feel enthusiastic or upset about this situation. Silence floats around the room until Aizawa snaps, "Well say something!"

"What happened to you?" Kaminari asks, Aizawa just pinches the bridge of his nose, all energy sapped out of him.

"Stuff happened, but I'm fine."

"You've promoted yourself from a hobo to a mummy, I don't think that's fine." Bakugo comments and immediately the whole class gasps expecting instant death for their classmate. Obviously they have never heard the two's usual banter so they were suprised when Bakugo's words were let off with an intense glare.

"The UA sports festival is one of Japan's biggest events, just about replacing the Olympics. The country's top hero's will surely be watching you looking to scout future sidekicks, you only have one chance every year for only three years, your time is limited so make use of this opportunity that we're giving to you now and go Plus Ultra... or whatever." The class all stay silent not knowing what to say, Kaminari is obviously the one to break the silence.

"Why are we only being told this now, two weeks isn't enough for me to prepare, I'd probably still get my ass whooped."

Aizawa shrugs, that uninterested look still on his face. " Unfortunately there's no way for me to turn back time so you've got to deal with it. Now chat amongst yourselves and don't bother me." He goes to sit down and watch the class who still have no idea what to do, he rolls his eyes, "Don't just sit there with your mouths open, you look like a bunch of fish."

"School." Yaoyorozu corrects.

"What?"

"The proper wording is a school of fish, well that is if you're talking about the same species of fish. If it's a mixture then technically it's called a shoal." She says as Aizawa rolls his eyes again.

"School, shoal, who cares."

"I don't." Kaminari says.

"Neither do I." Mina follows.

Yaoyorozu rolls her eyes. "If you're going to say something atleast say it right."

"You're all forgetting the important issues here." Uraraka says, a determined expression on her face.

"What's that Uraraka?"

Uraraka bangs her hands on the table and stands up."Everyone-" She turns to the whole class who wait silently for what she wants to say. "Let's crush it at the festival!" With a raised fist a fresh wave of determination circulates the classroom as they all cheer.

———

"I've done a search on the name Shigaraki and his quirk but nothing was found. Either thats not his real name or he's not in the database, similarly with the warpgate villian Kurogiri. The fact that Karma is now involved in this case as well makes it all that more complicated."

"Do you think maybe Karma is siding with the villians?" All Might asks earning an intense glare from Shota.

"More importantly, if this gets out to the public what could happen to Karma's public image." Shota interrupts, clearly pissed.

"That's true, if he's seen associating with villians in anyway the government will have a right to name him as one as well." Mic says, backing up his husbands point.

"Isn't that the goal." One of the teachers ask

"Well its a stupid goal!"

Nemuri taps her fingers on the table. "Shota your unusually defensive today. Karma is a threat to society, you usually think logically in situations like this."

"I am thinking logically. Karma saved us if anything and my class who would have had to go through that attack if he hadn't told us about it. He saves the futures of many little children as well, why are we trying to get rid of him?"

"He also ends the futures of many adults, why are you trying to defend him?" Nemuri argues back.

Nezu, who was previously sipping on his tea holds up his hand silencing the adults in the room. "Thats enough, either way this can't be made public as it'll ruin UA's reputation. Karma should consider himself lucky this time around, otherwise life would have become increasingly difficult for him."

"Weren't you the one who brought Karma into the school in the first place Aizawa?" Cementoss states.

"You what?" Tsukauchi exclaims with a look of betrayal on his face.

"I did not make any decision to bring any exchange student into this school! I thought we already established this fact."

"Then who did!"

"Why are you asking me! And who said the exchange student was Karma, last time I checked Karma had green hair not black!"

"I thought I said that's enough! For all we know Karma could have sent that boy to give us the letter, we have no idea how he got here, he doesn't show up on any of the cameras so we shouldn't speculate. We have more important matters at hand to discuss."

"That is correct, although Aizawa I'm afraid I'll have to question you a little bit later regarding Karma. That isn't a problem is it?"

This is all that idiot, All Might's fault for opening his big mouth, Shota thinks as he grits his teeth. It would be hard to get out of this situation but he would manage, he could always just bend the truth a little. "I don't see why it would be a problem."

"Okay then back to other matters, the note was completely accurate. We rounded up about 93 villians, the rest having escaped, and just like Karma had said they were all small time villians. The note was suspiciously accurate and everything he wrote came to pass-"

"Hey Shota." Nemuri whispers from besides him.

"What?"

"Are you planning on having a child?"

"What!" Shota shouts causing everyone in the room to turn to him.

Seeing that everyone's attention was on them anyway, Nemuri decides to just talk normally. "I mean you've been going on about Karma and how he saves children, and then theres Hitoshi and Bakugo. I just assumed they had a good influence on you and you wanted a child of your own."

"Why would I want another child, I can barely handle those three problem children!"

"Aww, Sho you think of Bakugo as your child as well." Mic cooes.

"I can barely handle those two problem children." Shota corrects causing Nemuri and Mic to laugh.

Someone in the room sighs and he can tell how disruptive he's been today but he can't help it when his husband and idiot friend keep the conversation going.

"What about a girl, how much of a problem child could they be."

Shota glares at his husband. "I stand by my words. Imagine what would happen if we ended up with another Deku, absolute chaos. I teach at a school for God's sake, why would I want a child!"

"Like never?" Mic asks with a slight pout on his face.

"Never."

Vlad King sighs. "I think you should be having theses kind of private conversation at home and, you know, NOT IN A FUCKING MEETING!"

Half the teachers laugh while the others just look frustrated, Nemuri being the idiot that she is keeps on talking.

"Don't worry, to Sho children are like cats. If they've been abandoned there his now, finders keepers you know."

"I'm not adopting every abandoned kid I find." He mutters under his breath.

"Yeah but you will adopt every child with a sad backstory. I bet you'll have another one by the end of the year."

"Ya think?" Shota's stupid husband asks, enticing the conversation to continue. Thankfully it's at this time Nezu finally gets bored of the conversation and stops them all from talking.

"Although this is very entertaining, why don't you continue this discussion another time so we can get back to the matters at hand." They all shut up and finally listen to the meeting going on.

———

"Hey Uraraka why did you decide to be a hero." Hitoshi asks. They were all at lunch in there usual large group when the topic had come up."

She seems hesitant to answer at first but when she finally does her answer is unexpected. "For the money." She says.

"Wait really?" Kaminari sitting next to Hitoshi exclaims.

"Only for the money?" Mina asks.

"Guys come on." She whines. "I know it sounds lame, you all probably have some pure and respectable reason for becoming hero's."

"That is not true, it is totally justifiable to want to do something to live a more comfortable life. Sometimes you've got to put yourself first instead of others." Iida lectures.

" I guess I shouldn't really be telling you all this but my parents are flat out broke so I'm going to become a hero and earn lots of money to give my parents the easy life that they deserve."

Bakugo snorts. "Poor girl problems, can't relate." Hitoshi kicks him from underneath the table.

"What the fuck, bro relax it was a joke! I get money all the time yet I don't ever get to spend it on myself because that damn Deku doesn't know how to take care of himself." Bakugo crosses his arms. "So yeah, I've basically been broke my whole life. So in a way I can relate... unfortunately."

Mina laughs. "I need to get myself a guy who'll spend all his money on me."

Uraraka along with half of the others sat at the table stare at Bakugo, bewildered. "Bakugo I think we both have very different situations in life."

Flustered, Hitoshi tries to diffuse the misunderstanding. "If you're thinking that Izu is taking advantage of him I highly doubt it. Well half doubt it, but that's not the point. Izu really does love him."

"Aww, tell me more." Mina says.

Bakugo sighs. "I shouldn't have brought up Deku." Having finished his food he gets up. "I'll be in the classroom if you need me, I can't deal with this anymore."

"Come on Bakubro, don't leave." Ignoring Kirishima Katsuki goes to put his tray away and makes his way out the dinning hall.

Walking through the corridor, Bakugo embraces his momenteral peace before spotting All Might infront of him.

"Ah young Bakugo, there you are. I've been meaning to talk to you."

"It's fine I already know what you want to say." He says before the man can continue his sentence.

"You do?"

"Of course, winning the sports festival will be a breeze so you don't need to worry. I'll show the whole world that their future number 1 hero is right here." He points to himself, a confident smile on his lips.

Smiling as well All Might nods. "Show the world that you Bakugo Katsuki is here. I don't doubt for a second that you'll win the sports festival."

Katsuki stares at himself in the mirror, he was going to win this festival no matter what and show the world that he's the best. Of course it wasn't going to be easy, he knows just how hard everyone has been training for this one day, it would be a lie for him to say he hadn't trained just as hard. He's going to beat all the extras and come out on top. Now determined, he goes to gather his things before sneaking downstairs where he had hoped to avoid the hag but with no luck. No matter how quiet he tried to be, it was as if the woman could hear him from a mile away, she would always catch him somehow. Maybe that's why sneaking through the window has become such a common practice for him and Deku.

"Hey Katsuki! Aren't you going to eat?" She shouts as she walks up to him.

"I wasn't before but you caught me trying to leave so might as well."

"What, so you were trying to leave without me noticing?" She laughs, her laughter slowly evening out into a death glare.

Katsuki rolls his eyes before walking past her into the kitchen. Maybe if he had never met Deku again he would have been fazed by the hags glare, but unfortunately for her it didn't hold a candle compared to Deku's.

He goes over to the table where he sees that the hag has already made breakfast. He sits at the table and proceeds to eat but the whole time he can feel the hag staring at him as if she wants to say something.

"What do you want?"

She flinches, not expecting him to speak. "Oh it's nothing, just wanted to say do your best."

"That's why you were staring at me this whole time?" Katsuki sighs and gets up to stand next to his mother, now done with his food. "You know I would do my best even if you hadn't told me too, I'm going to win okay."

The hag nods. "I'll be watching from the TV okay, I'll push back going to work as much as I can so I can watch every last second."

"Why on earth would you want to watch every last second." Katsuki goes to gather his things and put on his shoes before settling besides the door. He opens it then hesitates, looking back he sighs as the hag seems to be waiting expectantly for something. "Goodbye... mum." He leaves the house but can feel the sheer happiness radiating from the hag a mile away.

He rolls his eyes, she could be so stupid sometimes. Yet that didn't stop the slight grin spreading on his face.

——

"You are to stay here unless you tell me where you are going and I allow you to leave. Do you understand?" Aizawa asks and Izuku just nods.

"Relax Sho, he's not a child."

"Are you kidding me? Look at him."

"Hey, what's that supposed to mean?"

"Whatever you want it to mean, now when Mic is broadcasting your going to stay quiet alright. Your the one who begged to be here so you better not make me regret doing this for you or else I'm never doing something like this again."

"Yeah yeah, whatever. We both know you love me too much for that...ow let go." Shota pinches his cheek while Izuku struggles to swat his hand away.

"Sho I'm afraid he speaks the truth so leave the poor boy alone."

Escaping Aizawa's grasp Izuku runs over to Mic's side. "Mic is my new favourite person now, sorry Aizawa your husband has replaced your place in my heart."

He sighs heavily. "How did I end up in this situation in the first place."

"Cause you looove me." Izuku says teasingly, prolonging the o.

"Come over here you little brat and see if you can still say that in the next 5 minutes."

"Sho we're in the broadcasting room, I know no one is by the machine right now but due to experience you probably shouldn't say things that you don't want thousands of people hearing."

Aizawa rolls his eyes taking a seat in his chair as he watches Izuku stick his tongue out at him. "If you love Mic so much than make him commit all your stupid scheme's."

"Wait what!" Mic exclaims.

"I'm afraid I can't do that, your the underground hero after all."

Too tired for this shit Shota just pinches his nose. "I give up, there's no point arguing with you. Go sit down."

"Before the festival starts can I go see Toshi and Kacchan?"

"No."

"What, why not?"

"I don't need you wondering around the stadium on your own."

He pouts and crosses his arms. "Fine, can I go to the toilet then."

"I'm not an idiot Deku. Sit your ass down."

"Come on I need to go to the toilet, I can't even do that on my own." He whines.

"We both know that's not where you're going."

"So you don't trust me."

Sighing Mic roll his eyes. "Izuku darling, just go."

"Wait what?"

"Yay Mic your the best. No wonder I love you better."

Aizawa grits his teeth as he watches Izuku rush out the door. "You're gonna regret letting him do what he wants eventually you know."

"Are you talking from experience?" Aizawa sighs, he would hate to admit it but unfortunately he was.

———

Izuku rushes down the staircase to get to where he believes Kacchan and Toshi should be. The festival hasn't started yet so they should all still be in their waiting rooms. Going down the stairs he doesn't realise that he's gone to far down until he gets to the bottom floor and has to endeavour his way back up the stairs. Arriving at the ground floor he makes his way down the hall, he isn't sure where he's going but he has a feeling he'll find his way eventually.

Blindly Turning the corner he falls to the floor as he realises that he had bumped into something. Looking up he sees a skinny man sprawled across the floor and he quickly rushes to go help him.

"All Might! I'm sorry, I didn't mean to." He pulls the man up to his feet.

"That's quite alright, next time look where you're going, okay."

Izuku nods and the two part ways before All Might realise that Izuku had called his hero name even though he's not in hero form. He rushes back to the boy panting once he's finally caught up. Izuku turns around confused, just waiting for the man to speak.

Out of breath All Might speaks. "You... h-how did you know."

Deku tilts his head. "Know what?" He asks

"Who I am."

"Oh, that your All Might?"

"Yes. How did you know!" All Might says, this time a little more insistent.

"Kacchan told me."

"Ka- who?"

"Kacchan, you know the guy with the explosion quirk."

"Who, Katsuki?"

"Yeah."

All Might just stands there for a while not knowing what to say. Just about when things start to get awkward a thought finally clicks in All Might's mind.

"Are you Deku?" Izuku nods and it's obvious All Might feels some slight satisfaction from getting that correct. "Ah, then what are you doing here, Are you looking for Bakugo." Deku nods.

All Might starts to point out directions to the waiting rooms and Izuku thanks him with a smile on his face. "You're welcome, although it's nearing the start of the festival so you'll have to be quick if you wanna see him and get back to your seat on time." Izuku nods and the hero smiles, "It was nice meeting you." All Might says as he walks away.

"Likewise." Izuku calls out as he makes his way back to the broadcasting booth. All Might's directions had been long and confusing and frankly, trying to find Kacchan and Toshi took too much effort, he could always just text them good luck, he thinks as he walks back gaining practically nothing from leaving the booth.

Walking back into the broadcasting booth Izuku sees Aizawa staring at him with his arms crossed. "It takes 20 minutes to go to the toilet, huh?"

"I got lost."

Aizawa rolls his eyes too tired to deal with this right now

"WELCOME ALL TO THIS YEARS FIRST YEAR SPORTS FESTIVAL!" An explosion of cheers burst out across the stadium as Hitoshi and his classmates stand in their wing waiting for their class to be called.

Each class gets their own introduction from Mic starting with the business classes before moving on to the support classes then gen ed. Finally he calls for the Hero classes which everyone has been waiting for, a round of applause, much greater than what the other classes received, rings out as first 1b then 1a walk out.

Walking out into the sunlight Hitoshi is overwhelmed by the sheer amount of people inhabiting the stadium, and the greatest thing was that they were all here to see them. It was amazing how he used to be an outcast in society but is now infront of the whole world on television, he takes a deep breath fully determined, everyone around him seems to do the same. They're all determined to win but in the end only one person can and Hitoshi was going to try his best to come out on top. With a huge smile on his face he faces the audience head on.

As the cheering dies down Mic begins to speak and from the corner of his eye Hitoshi can see Bakugo staring at the broadcasting box where he's guessing Izu is probably sitting with Aizawa. All the participants attention is pulled towards Midnight, the r-rated hero as she walks into the middle of the stadium she silences both crowd and participants alike before getting the sports festival underway.

"Now for the speech from this years representative, Katsuki Bakugo!"

"Wait Bakugo? Really?" Sero says.

"Can you stop having that reaction to everything related to me! I placed highest in the entrance exam dammit." Annoyed, he walks on to the podium. Turning to face the students a wide grin spreads across his face. "Everyone do your best." He says, "so it can be all the more fun for me to beat you all."

A chorus of boos and jeers can be heard from the students but Bakugo just ignores them walking of the podium and back to his class. Most of the class complain at that monstrosity he calls a speech but in all honesty, they were all expecting him to say something like that.

"Was it really necessary to make enemies out of all the other classes?" Kirishima asks causing Bakugo's smirk to widen.

"Of course, like I said, it makes it all the more fun to win."

"Okay then so moving on!" Everyone turns their attention back to Midnight. "On to the first round designed to assess your abilities and significantly whittle down your numbers issss theeee..."

She points to the screen as it rolls through several different activities until finally stopping on, "an obstacle race!"

A couple of glances are shared between the classes as they listen to Midnight speak. "It will be between all classes, like I said earlier it's to whittle down your numbers. The rules are simple, you can do whatever you please as long as you stay in the course."

A round of cheers can be heard from the audience and in no time the classes are making their way to the starting line. Hitoshi isn't sure when Kaminari walks towards him but when he turns he sees the blondes blinding smile and can't help being just a little startled.

Kaminari laughs a little. "Did I startle you?"

"Yeah a little bit."

"Ah, Sorry." He rubs the back of his head looking a little awkward. Hitoshi can see Kaminari meet Mina's eye and all of a sudden his awkwardness is overridden by confidence. "You haven't forgotten about our bet right?"

A competitive smile spreads across Hitoshi's face. "Of course I haven't." How could he when Kaminari had made such a big deal about asking him. He's got to admit though it was kind of cute.

———

"Just go and ask him idiot." Sitting in the waiting room Mina and the rest of the Bakusquad surround Kaminari.

"No that's stupid." He replies to Mina who just holds up a finger to his lips.

"Hush my child, this is the only way. You won't have the courage otherwise."

A bit irritated Kaminari pushes her finger away. "What's the point, I doubt I'll even win even if I ask."

"Of course you'll win since now you have a bigger motivation, you'll just have to try your utmost hardest. Don't let this opportunity go to waste."

The rest of the group all agree and cheer him on while Bakugo sits there smirking, just enjoying watching the scene unfold.

"Your an idiot so I know your going to mess something up." Bakugo remarks for no other reason than to make him doubt himself.

"Ignore Bakugo, just say what we told you to say and everything will be fine."

"Are you sure?"

"Yes I'm sure now go on now, shoo." Mina pushes Kaminari away who then walks up to Hitoshi.

Hitoshi looks up expectantly as Kaminari stands there gathering his words. There's a slight awkward silence as the whole class stare to watch whatever is going on. Definitely feeling the pressure now Kaminari opens his mouth but is interrupted by Todoroki getting up and walking over to Bakugo. Hitoshi's, as is everyone else's, gaze automatically moves over to the dual hair coloured boy as he stands confidently infront of Bakugo.

"Bakugo."

"What do you want asshole?"

"You and All Might seem close in some way but I'm not gonna pry, all I really wanted to say was I'm going to beat you today."

"Hah! You'll beat me? I'd love to see you try!"

The class watches as Bakugo stands up and shouts at Todoroki who just stands there unfazed. Soon enough the class go back to their own conversations once Bakugo's shouting gets too much.

Mina walks up to Kaminari who's still standing infront if Hitoshi like a fool and slaps him across the head. "That is how you make a declaration of war you hopeless idiot. Have to do everything myself don't I. Hey Shinso!"

"Yeah." Hitoshi turns towards them. "What's up?"

"Kaminari wants to propose an offer."

"An offer, what offer?"

Mina pushes Kaminari closer to Hitoshi. He takes quite a while to speak but eventually he gains the courage.

"A bet."

"A bet?"

"Yeah let's make a bet. Whoever gets further in today's festival wins."

Hitoshi stares at him a little confused but thinks it over anyway. "I mean I don't know why we're doing this but I wouldn't mind if you really want to."

"Wait really?" Kaminari asks clearly not expecting him to agree so quickly.

Mina nudges him in a playful manner. "See you did it. You took your time but you still did it." She grabs Kaminari's hand before bouncing over to take Hitoshi's hand. "And noooow, you handshake."

And like that Hitoshi officially agreed to a bet where the stakes were unknown.

"Yeah I haven't forgotten about our bet." He says, a warm smile on his face. He may not know what Kaminari is up to but he does now that his hesitation to ask was kinda cute.

"Cool, let's both try our best!" They exchange a smile before getting into their positions.

"All right then!" Midnight calls out. "On your marks! Get set! Go!"

In an instant students are rushing through the gate trying to avoid the inevitable blockade caused by the many, many students all trying to get through the gate at once. Unfortunately Hitoshi hadn't thought this through so he stands in the crowd, squished by everyone around him. Bakugo, who obviously had thought everything through, propels himself into the air with his explosions and reaches a hand out for Hitoshi. Without thinking Hitoshi grabs it, they both fly over the large crowd landing right infront of them.

"Thanks."

"This is the one time I'm helping you." Bakugo says. "We're both going to make it to the final round so you better do your best. Oh and be careful of your hand, you'll have to wash of my sweat later." With that Bakugo runs away trying to get ahead of Todoroki who's already far gone.

Hitoshi sighs then realises he's got no time to waste. He follows after Bakugo, he's going to do his best and make it to the final round just like Bakugo had said.

———

Crossing the finish line in tenth place Hitoshi walks up to Bakugo who's fuming in the background, he's glaring daggers Todoroki's way but Todoroki being the person that he is doesn't register it. Blocking Bakugo's sight of Todoroki, Hitoshi smiles.

"I made it through the first round."

Bakugo grunts as he aggressively pushes Hitoshi out the way. "I can see that, why are you telling me!"

"Well you seemed to be too preoccupied with your grudge on Todoroki to notice that I'd passed the finish line."

"No I mean why are you telling me like there was a chance of you not making it through."

Hitoshi pause, suprised to hear those words come from Bakugo's mouth. He opens his mouth to talk but at that moment the last person crosses the finish line and Midnight starts to talk.

"THE LAST PERSON HAS CROSSED THE FINISH LINE, SO IM AFRAID THE REST OF YOU ARE OUT. Now time for the next round, the..." like before the screen rolls through several different activities but this time stopping on the "Cavalry Battle!

The time limit is 15 minutes, each person will be assigned a number and the sum of all participants in your group will be that groups overall value. Whoever sits up top will wear the head band with your group's number, basically the aim is to steal the other groups' headbands. Even if your headband is taken you still remain in the game, quirks are obviously allowed, if the rider touches the ground at all in the time limit your out, attacking with any malicious intent to purposeful break up a team, out."

People start to mumble between themselves but Midnight not being done smiles wickedly. "Of courses this wouldn't be any fun without a plot twist." Instantly all the chatters stop and all eyes are back on the hero. "However placed 42nd is worth 5 points, whoever placed 41st is worth 10 points and it continues like that adding 5 points as your ranking increases. However the person who placed first is worth a whopping one million points!" At the mention of a million points half the participants send death glares Todoroki's way while the other half have already accepted their defeat. Obviously Bakugo is part of the first half, his glare rivaling everyone's there. Hitoshi sighs, this was going to be the longest 15 minutes of his life.

"You all have 15 minutes to pick your teams so chop chop."

———

As soon as Midnight sets the participants off a group of people swarm around both Bakugo and Todoroki in an attempt to get in their team.

"Hey Bakugo let me be in your team."

"No I'm going to be in his team."

Bakugo grunts. "Could you all shut up for a second I can't concentrate." They all shut up. "Okay, first of all, what's all of your quirks again."

"Come on, seriously Bakugo. We're in the same class."

"I've got better things to do then pay attention to all you idiots." He snaps. "Now tell me your quirks.

"Acid."

"Sugar rush."

"Hardening."

"Tape."

"Tape?" Bakugo repeats.

"Yeah tape." Sero says once again a little confused.

Bakugo huffs. "So we've got Brain fucker, pinky and shitty hair. Which means there's no more space for the rest of you."

Sato sighs. "I should have expected you wouldn't pick me." Defeated, him and the rest of the people who had hoped to be in Bakugo's group leave.

"Don't you think it would have been a good idea to ask Todoroki to be in our team?" Hitoshi says thinking out loud.

"Are you out of your mind! Why the fuck would I be in the same team as him!"

Not realising he'd said it out loud he explains anyway. "Well he's got one million points and you've got the second largest, you're both the strongest here so wouldn't it just make sense to work together. You'll be totally unbeatable."

"Hey Brain Freak."

"Yeah?"

"Go find a new group."

"Huh?" Hitoshi stares at Bakugo in bewilderment. "Are you really kicking me out of your team because I suggested we team up with Todoroki?"

"Precisely, now go away. Hey Tape Dispenser, your in my team now!"

"Wait your not joking?"

"Why would I be joking. Go find another team dammit! And you better not lose this round you hear, your not allowed to lose to anyone other than me!"

Dazed Hitoshi walks away from Bakugo and his group. He sighs, there's only ten minutes left to form a group and right now he'd have to either go join another group or form a whole new one. He looks around the arena before sighing again, how can that idiot just kick him out of the group then tell him not to lose, what sense does that make.

While wallowing in his own dispare Aoyama walks up to him. "Bonjour mon ami. I overheard what just happened and I just happen to be available and without a team right now."

Hitoshi stares at Aoyama who just smiles. After a while, once reality has finally caught up to him, he exclaims, "Wait really!" Aoyama nods. "Aoyama your an absolute star."

"I know."

"Now let's go look for more team mates." Hitoshi runs of as Aoyama trails after him. While running around they find Ojiro without a team so they adopt him into theirs.

"Now we need just one more person." Hitoshi comments. Seeing Uraraka infront of him he runs up to her. "Hey have you found a group yet?"

She nods. "I'm with Tokoyami and Hatsume from the support course. Iida had already joined another team so I had to go form my own, we still need one more person though."

"Yeah, us too. Bakugo kicked me out of his group for suggesting we team up with Todoroki so now I'm with Ojiro and Aoyama."

"Oh wow, he really kicked you out."

Hitoshi nods. "Unfortunately."

The two stop talking as they hear a commotion coming from next to them.

"Ah, we have to many people, two of you are going to have to find a different group."

A few members of class B stand huddled together as they try to figure out who to kick out of there group.

Hitoshi didn't know most of them but he did know the ginger girl, Itsuka Kendo.

"How are we meant to form another group, we barely have any time left." One of them complains.

Uraraka who was next to Hitoshi not that long ago somehow ends up with the group in a matter of seconds. "Um excuse me." She says and the 1-B group turn to face her. "We still need one more person so if you wouldn't mind one of you can join my group."

Hitoshi walks up to them. "My group needs one more person as well."

"Wait really? Thank you so much." Kendo exclaims. She turns to her classmates. "They're willing to allow some of us to be in their groups so Tetsutetsu, Ibara, you two don't mind right. Now you don't need to look around, unless if you both don't want to I could always join them."

"No, it's fine." Tetsutetsu grunts. "I'll go."

"As will I." Ibara walks over to Uraraka. "I highly appreciate your kind gesture, I promise I'll be of some use to you."

Uraraka just smiles. "Glad to have you."

"I'm Tetsutetsu Tetsutetsu." He walks up to Hitoshi hand stuck out infront of him and Hitoshi takes it.

"I'm Hitoshi Shinso, nice to meet you."

"Thank you again." Kendo bows, a huge smile plastered on her face.

"Don't worry about it." Hitoshi says returning her smile. "Your doing us as much of a favour as we're doing you."

The three teams break off from each other to get prepared. Once fifteen minutes are up everyone is ready and raring to go. A wide smile spreads across Hitoshi's face as he sits on top and his team get ready to start the game. Midnight starts the count down and all gazes are focused on one point. Good thing Hitoshi's team had decided to priorities getting other teams head bands other than Todoroki's one million cause there's no doubt they would have gotten smoked. The Cavalry battle ends with Todoroki's team keeping all his points and Bakugo once again fuming in the background.

Chapter End Notes

I skipped what actually happens in the obstacle race and the cavalry battle cuz I'm lazy but basically everyone who won the cavalry battle in the anime won here. The only difference is that there's no Deku and that Ojiro didn't quit. Just thought I should make this clear.

Sports festival. part 2

Furious, Katsuki marches out of the arena. This was supposed to be his overwhelming victory, this wasn't how this day was meant to go. At this rate Todoroki was going to win the tournament as well, Katsuki grits his teeth as he walks to who knows where. Eventually his wondering leads him to a dead end and he's forced to turn back where he then sees Deku who's been looking for him.

Not having seen him yet Katsuki walks up to his boyfriend. "What are you doing."

Startled, Deku turns around. "Oh, Kacchan its just you. You scared me you know."

"Should you really be wondering around like this."

Deku tilts his head. "Why not? I don't see a problem with it."

"We're in a stadium where there are hero's lurking at every corner, I don't know if your just overly confident in yourself to not get caught, or your stupid."

Deki pouts. "Come one Kacchan, I just wanted to see you, doesn't mean you have to call me stupid."

Katsuki replies with a, "Tch" as he crosses his arms and looks away.

Deku moves to take a better look at Katsuki's face. "Why are you so angry?" He asks and Katsuki rolls his eyes.

"I'm not angry." Is his the simple reply that leaves his mouth but his furrowed brow and posture says otherwise.

Deku just sighs as he wraps his arms around Katsuki, pulling him into a hug. Reluctantly Katsuki hugs back but he's got to admit it makes him feel a lot better. Feeling Katsuki relax in his grasp Deku grins.

"Yay your not angry anymore!"

"I wasn't angry in the first place idiot."

"We both know that's not true." Deku let's go, his smile still on his face. "Well I came down here to see if your okay but I should probably be getting back now before Aizawa gets mad."

"If he's not already mad he's probably given up on trying to control you."

Deku giggles. "That sounds about right. Anyway good luck, go and eat I'll see you after the festival once you've won."

"Sounds good."

Katsuki waves as his boyfriend walks away, a slight smile on his face. He turns to make his way to the lunch hall but stops when he hears Deku's voice and turns to see him rushing back over to him. He's met by a warm feeling against his lips and can't help but kiss back.

"Am I interrupting something." A voice says, coming out of nowhere.

Pushing away from each other the boys turn to see Todoroki standing there with his usual expressionless face. The three stand there for a while in awkward silence until Deku mumbles that he should go before hurriedly leaving.

Pissed, Katsuki growls. "What the hell do you want idiot."

"I wanted to talk to you after the cavalry battle but you ran off."

"Talk to me? I've got nothing to say to you bastard!"

Todoroki sighs before leaning back on the wall and making himself comfortable. "There's something going on with you and All Might, I don't know what it is and I'm not asking you to tell me but for that exact reason I'm going to beat you no matter what."

"You've already told me all this dumbass! What's your point!"

"As you know, Endeavour is my father. You seem strangely obsessed with winning, I admire your passion but you being connected to the no.1 hero means I need to beat you all the more. So I'm sorry to say Bakugo, but there's no way you're going to win this sprts festival, I'm going to beat you with my ice and nothing but my ice."

"Are you looking down on me idiot! You'll need a lot more than just your ice to beat me. If your not going to go full out then I see no point in fighting you!" Bakugo shouts at the sheer audacity the prick has.

"Unfortunately that isn't really for you to decide. I've told you what I wanted to tell you so I'll take my leave now."

Katsuki grabs him by the collar, snarling into his ear. "You can't just leave after wasting my time like that! Do you really think that I'm so weak that your ice is enough to beat me, you're disrespecting not just me but every single participant here. They're all working their ass off to win! And here you are spouting some bullshit, either fight me with all that you've got or don't fight me at all!"

Todoroki stares at Katsuki, a distant look in his eyes. He looks down not wanting to meet Katsuki's passionate gaze before pushing him off.

"Have you ever heard of quirk marriages?"

"What does that have to do with anything?" Katsuki snarls, not expecting this sudden twist in conversation.

Ignoring the question, Todoroki continues. "My father has been the no.2 hero for quite a while, he's never been able to get past All Might, the symbol of peace that the whole world looks up too. Endeavour would do anything to advance his position, to beat All Might, even marrying my mother for the sole purpose of raising a child who can rise above All Might."

Katsuki stands there speechless as he watches Todoroki take a deep breath to regulate his emotions. He hadn't expected icyhot to suddenly start telling him his life story but from what he's heard so far he knew it would only get worse.

"My mom, in all my memories of her she's always crying. She- she told me that my left side was ugly while dumping scolding hot water on me." He raises his hand to lightly brush his scar. He takes a deep breath, the distant look in his eyes gone then starts to speak again.

"I want to beat you to prove that I don't need Endeavour's Shitty quirk. I'll beat you and win this festival without it, I'll become no.1 with just my left side out of pure spite." He stands up straight and begins to walk away. "I'm sorry if you think I'm looking down on you, or whatever that's about but this is how things have to be. Sorry I took away some of your time."

Stunned, Katsuki watches as Todoroki walks away. His reasoning was stupid, everything about this situation was stupid. Katsuki clenches his fist as he tries to calm himself down and sorts through all the new information. "Hey Deku come out. I know your still here." He says turning around.

"Sorry."

"Why are you apologising?"

"I don't think I was supposed to hear that."

"Its not your fault, if anything it's his for believing you had left."

Deku sighs. "I feel kind of bad for him, shouldn't you have said something."

"What was I meant to say its non of my business. Either way I'll win no matter what he says."

Deku sighs again. "I believe in you Kacchan. Anyway is should probably actually leave now or Aizawa's gonna be really mad."

"Yeah okay. See you soon." They both exchange a nod and then soon enough are parting ways.

——

"Hey Sho where'd the little listener go, he's been gone for a while."

"Who knows, I've decided to stop caring about what he does."

"Is that wise?"

"You heard him, he loves you more now so he's your responsibility."

"What does his love for me have to do with me being responsible for him, he's your problem child."

"And your my husband meaning he's your problem child as well."

"Ooh what's this, are you having a lovers quarrel?" Nemuri walks up to the two taking the seat next to Shota.

"It's nothing like that."

"Really? Why do I not believe you-"

"Aizawa!" The door bursts open and Shota along with the rest of the staff in the room turn to see who it is. Walking in, Deku looks around before spotting Shota and running up to him.

Vlad King gets up. "Excuse me I don't think-"

Aizawa holds up his hand. "It's fine he's with me."

"Really? Since when did you have another child."

"Wait! Is this who I think it is?" Nemuri gasps as Shota sighs.

"This is Deku." Mic tells her and the whole room starts to buzz with chatter.

Nemuri squeals. "So your the one I've heard so much about. You seem to have made a really good impression on Shota."

Deku smiles. "Nice to meet you." He says.

Shota rolls his eyes. "Deku where have you been this whole time?"

"With Kacchan."

"You said you were going to the toilet."

"And you believed me?"

Shota sighs. "Nemuri can he stay with you, I don't want him anymore."

"Sho you can't just give him away."

"Watch me."

Half of the staff laugh but Mic knew better since there's a 99% chance his husband is completely serious.

Deku sits next to Mic so he can easily sneak food from his plate, if any of the adults had noticed this they certainly didn't comment on it, except for Nemuri's occasional 'cute'.

Eventually, once Deku is all done with taking food from Mic's plate he gets up and walks up to Shota.

"I think I'm going to leave," He says. "I feel uncomfortable with all these heroes around."

Shota huffs. "Fine, but be in the broadcasting booth before the next round starts!" Shota shouts out as Deku is already halfway across the room and making it out the door.

"Ok!" Izuku shouts back as he skips out of the room.

Walking through the hallway Izuku makes his way to the broadcasting booth, or atleast tries to as he ends up lost for the third time today. He sighs deciding to just go wherever his feet take him. Walking along a corridor he sees Hawks, the no.3 hero, coming for the corner and immediately does a 180 and walks away as fast as he can. He hears a noise as if something went flying in the air behind him and suddenly the hero is infront of him walking towards him.

"Hawks!" He exclaims as he tries to walk back but the hero makes his way to block the boy's path.

"So you really are here." He says, his face completely unreadable. "I could sense the feather that I gave you but it confused me since I don't see any reason for you to be here, especially since this place is filled to the brim with heroes. I'm suprised you actually keep my feather with you though, I thought you would have gotten rid of it by now."

Izuku stands there silent, not sure what to say. He could always try and make a dash for it and hope he finds Aizawa or Mic but he knew Hawks would catch up to him in no time.

"What? You don't have any snarky remarks to make? How surprising, last time we met you had a rather lot to say."

"Last time I was hungry and bored, I vividly remember stating that I would regret everything later and I sure as hell do."

Hawks laughs. "That's true, I guess hunger really does make you crazy.

Izuku fiddles with his fingers feeling the awkwardness as he refuses to meet the hero's eye. Hawks just continues to stand there waiting for Izuku to say something.

Eventually Izuku sighs. "If there's something you want to say, just say it. Are you going to report me, or arrest me or what?"

"No, I'm at the UA sports festival and I plan to enjoy my time here. No one else knows who you are so there's no reason for me to arrest you right now, plus who's going to believe a little shrimp like you is Karma, I'll need to catch you in the act before I can arrest you and anyone will believe me."

"So you're not going to arrest me?" Hawks shakes his head. "Then why are you standing here talking to me!"

"Aw, come on. I thought we'd bonded a little when I went to buy you food. You must have been really tired since you spilt like half of your life story."

"I did!?"

"What, you don't remember?"

Izuku shakes his head. "There was at no point in time that I mentioned my boyfriend or anyone else related to me right?"

Hawks smirks. "No not at all."

"Tell me the truth." Izuku whines. "Your lack of reaction when I said I have a boyfriend tells me you already know."

Hawks chuckles. "You just mentioned that you had a boyfriend, that's all. You didn't say any names or anything like that."

Izuku seems to relax a bit but not completely. "You can feel every sensation from your feathers right."

"Yeah, why?" Hawkz asks.

"If you're lying to me I'll make it my job to stab the feather you gave me until there's nothing left of it."

"Woah how scary. I guess you really are Karma. Although I must note that I can only feel the vibrations and pick up sound so that won't hurt me much."

"You can pick up sound?" Izuku asks, a hint of panic on his face.

Hawks just smirks at that as he pats his head. "Don't worry, I've got better things to do with my life then listen to your conversations." The intense glare sent his way gives Hawks the feeling that that doesn't make Izuku feel better at all. He chuckles as he starts to walk away. "Anyway the next round is starting so I should get going. If you ever need my help for whatever weird reason you've always got my feather." He waves and just like that he turns the corner and is gone.

The uneasiness that Izuku feels doesn't leave but he ignores it as he continues to try and navigate his way through this place.

"I HOPE YOU'VE ALL RESTED UP AND GOTA BITE TO EAT CAUSE NOW IT'S TIME FOR THE TOURNAMENT PORTION OF THIS YEARS SPORTS FESTIVAL!"

A roar of cheers erupts from the crowd as they prepare themselves for what's to come. In the center of the stadium all the remaining participants gather infront of Midnight who's holding a box filled with names.

"I will now determine who fights who by picking names out of this box. Is everyone alright with that." Everyone nods and Midnight proceeds to pick names. "Ok then so first up we have... Ojiro against Shinso."

Hitoshi scans the arena before making eye contact with Ojiro. The tailed boy sends him a little wave and Hitoshi waves in return. Midnight continues to call names until eventually all the match ups are done, consisting of:

Ojiro vs Shinso
Todoroki vs Sero
Shiozaki vs Kaminari
Iida vs Hatsume
Ashido vs Aoyama
Tokoyami vs Yaoyorozu
Tetsutetsu vs Kirishima
Uraraka vs Bakugo

The participants are sent off the arena to prepare for the tournament that'll start in 15 minutes. Bakugo wonders up to Hitoshi looking confused.

"Who's Uraraka?" He asks, and Hitoshi can't tell if he's serious or just an idiot.

"You seriously don't know who Uraraka is, she's literally in our class." Mina says as she bounces towards the two. "You've talked to her many times."

"Who?"

Hitoshi sighs and points towards Uraraka, Bakugo follows his finger and a look of realisation dawns across his face.

"Oh it's pink cheeks. Why didn't you just say that from the start."

"You actually didn't know?" Mina asks in clear disbelief. "Do you even know my name?" She says, pointing to herself.

"Of course I know your name, its Mina... something."

"He got my name completely wrong when we first met so you should be thankful that he even knows your first name. He must really see you as a friend."

"Hey what does names have to do with friends."

"Aw, Bakugo I didn't know you felt like that." Mina wraps Bakugo into a hug who immediately pushes her away. Despite this Mina lunges for another hug and Bakugo dodges, the cycle repeats until Mina has gotten Bakugo running away and the rest of the Bakusquad join in. Shinso chuckles from where he standing before going to chase after Bakugo as well.

Sports festival. part 3

Taking a deep breath Hitoshi walks out into the stadium and is welcomed by several cheers from the crowd. Ojiro walks in from the other side looking just as nervous as Hitoshi. They both meet in the middle and send each other an encouraging smile.

"The rules are simple, if your opponent is unable to move, outside of the ring or says 'I give up' then you win. You don't have to hold back, if anything bad happens then we always have recovery girl but of course don't go too overboard or Cementoss will be forced to stop the match. Start!"

"Good luck, I won't go easy on you so I hope your prepared." Ojiro smiles.

Unfortunately for Hitoshi Ojiro is in his class meaning he knows exactly how his quirk works. The tailed boy runs up to him, his mouth completely shut and Hitoshi is forced to take a fighting stance. This match was going to take longer then he had hoped for.

Ojiro dashes towards him sending a punch to his gut, Hitoshi barely has the time to slap the fist away before a kick is being aimed at his side. Thanks to Aizawa teaching him martial arts he's able to put up a bit of a fight against someone like Ojiro who's probably been learning martial arts his whole life. Not to mention he had a tail, it was a perfect defence for his back making it all that more difficult to deal with.

Cheers emanate from the crowd as Hitoshi and Ojiro continue to duke it out, Hitoshi asking stupid questions the whole way through, just on the off chance he answered any of them. Hitoshi didn't want this fight to drag out, his opponent obviously had way more stamina than him, even if he could keep up for the moment but at this point he didn't have much of a chance unless he started down right insulting him.

Hitoshi sighs as he points to Ojiro's shoes and says, "Your shoelace is untied." Having resolved to dirty tricks now as soon as Ojiro looks down he sends an uppercut that he's pretty sure connects with his nose.

Ojiro goes staggering back gripping his nose in pain and Hitoshi stops, afraid that he might have actually hurt him. Ojiro looks up and to Hitoshi's relief is fine until a trickle of blood comes running down his nose.

Shinso stares blankly at Ojiro for a second before saying, "Ah, your nose is bleeding are you okay?"

Ojiro raises his hand to just above his nose to check, when he realises it is actually bleeding he makes a sort of whimpering noise. Unfortunately for him that was enough to put him under Hitoshi's control, he might not have physically answered Hitoshi's question but that response was stimulated by the question, no matter how tiny it was.

Hitoshi felt kind of bad about taking advantage of this situation but if he didn't take this opportunity now then there definitely wouldn't be another one later. Hitoshi orders Ojiro to turn and walk out of the ring and Ojiro does exactly that, the crowd cheers as they know the match is coming to an end. Hitoshi can feel his opponent desperately trying to break free but he grips onto his mind with all he has and finally Ojiro takes a step out of the ring.

"AND IT LOOKS LIKE HITOSHI SHINSO IS THE FIRST WINNER OF THE THIRD PORTION OF TODAY'S FESTIVAL!" The crowd screams in cheers and praise as Mic continues to hype them up.

Hitoshi releases his control over Ojiro and goes to see if he's okay, thankfully there were no hard feelings. "Well done." Is all Ojiro says before he goes looking for Recovery girl for his nose.

Meanwhile, up in the broadcasting booth Izuku smiles. "Hey Aizawa can I go-"

"Are you going to ask to go to the toilet again?" Izuku nods. Sighing heavily Aizawa slumps in his chair. "Just go."

"Thanks, love you." Aizawa just grumbles in reply, too tired for this shit.

——

Getting up Shoto heads down to the arena for his match. Walking through the corridor he can already sense that his father is near so makes it his goal to thoroughly ignore him. He walks straight by him not even sparing him a second glance which obviously pissed the guy off.

"Shoto!"

"What do you want." He says turning around to face the man infront of him. "I'm pretty sure only the participants are allowed to be here so can you please leave."

"I'll leave soon, I wanted to see you."

"You've seen me so leave."

"Your attitude has been nothing but disgraceful, hurry up and get over this rebellious phase or whatever and accept my power. You were born for greatness so stop holding yourself back." Shoto clenches his fist, born for greatness, what a load of crap. He was born purely to achieve Endeavour's goals.

He hated that look on Endeavour's face, that look as if he has every right to dictate every part of his life. Shoto hated how he looked down on him as if inspecting some kind of art peice. Shoto is not his masterpiece, he will not do as he says.

"If that's all you had to say I'll be going now. You should already know that no matter what I will earn my victories using mums quirk only, I will never, ever use your damn quirk."

"You're going to reach the limit eventually you know, and then you'll have no choice but to do as I say."

Shoto walks away from the bastard known as his father, he walks to the center of the arena his blood boiling. He was going to prove that he didn't need his shitty quirk.

——

Making sure Endeavour has left Izuku peeks round the corner. Somehow he ended up eavesdropping on Todoroki for the second time today. He sighs as he walks down the same path as Todoroki, looking for Toshi.

He finds Todoroki in the wings, waiting to be called out. He walks up to him not knowing what to say so just stands there next to him. Todoroki being blinded by rage doesn't even realise Izuku is there.

Soon enough a loud cheer is heard by the crowd and both Toshi and his friend walk of stage. Getting closer Toshi tilts his head as he sees Izuku standing next to an angry Todoroki, he walks straight up to Izuku avoiding Todoroki who doesn't even notice him.

"Hey Izu what's going on?" Izuku just shrugs and signals for Toshi to be quite as they both watch Todoroki walk on to stage, Mic giving him a more flamboyant entrance than everyone else.

Sero walks in from opposite him not all that confident. As soon as Mic gives the starting signal, without wasting any time he aims to completely wrap Todoroki up in his tape but much to his dismay Todoroki sends a huge glacier of ice his way and he's completely engulfed. Sero, as does the audience take a moment before they realise what just happened and the crowd starts to cheer.

Sero wiggles in a little discomfort but stops when the ice starts to tear at his skin. Todoroki walks up to the glacier not saying a word as the flame of his left side starts to melt it.

"Damn, that was a bit much." Toshi says watching in dismay but Izuku just continues to stare at Todoroki as he unmelts the ice. "Hey Izu are you just going to stay here or what, you haven't even said anything this whole time."

Finishing with the ice Todoroki walks out of the stage and into the corridor walking straight past the two boys. "You know what Toshi, I'll see you in a few minutes there's something I've gotta do real quick. You can go back up to the stands if you want." With that Izuku quickly runs off to go catch up with Todoroki, leaving a perplexed Toshi behind.

"Aghh, where's Shinso? He's going to miss Kaminari's match. Does he not care about this bet or what." Mina complains as both Kaminari and Shiozaki walk to the center of the stage.

Relax, I'm pretty sure I saw him in the wings with some green haired kid, he's probably watching from there." Sero says as he walks into the stands, taking a seat next to Kirishima.

"Green haired kid? Was he short and looked very young?" Katsuki asks.

"I don't know, I didn't pay much attention to him, but thinking about it now he did look pretty young. Younger than us at least."

Katsuki just sighs not asking anymore questions on the topic, instead he focuses back on what's infront of him. "Pikachu better win this match cause I'm never helping those two idiots get together again. Shinso is too dense and what's the point if Pikachu doesn't even have the balls to ask him out."

"Come on Bakubro, don't be like that. It's for those exact reasons that we need to help them get together no matter what." Kirishima says.

"Does Shinso even like Pikachu, watch all of this end up for nothing."

"Hey Bakugo don't jinx it!" Mina exclaims. "If Shinso doesn't like Kaminari we'll find a way to make him like Kaminari."

"No, you'll find a way, you all, not me. I said I'm never helping those two idiots get together, I'm done."

"Oh come on Bakubro, look over there he's doing so well."

Kaminari sends a wave of electricity at full power which is then easily blocked by Shiozaki's vines. Having used his full power he frys his brain going into yay mode. Taking the opportunity Shiozaki tangles him up in her vines then proceeds to throw him out the ring.

"Is that what you call doing well." Says Katsuki looking thoroughly unimpressed.

"He's an idiot." Mina responds. "All the more reason that we have to help him."

Katsuki sighs. "I guess I have no choice."

"What, you'll continue helping?"

"No I'm going to lock them both in a closet. Whatever happens then is none of my business."

"Omg why hadn't I thought of that before." Mina says, kind if dejected. "To think that Bakugo is better than me in setting two people together."

"I mean he's the only one of us with actual experience."

"Whatever, I'm going to go look for Shinso."

"It must be nice for Shinso to actually be called by name by Bakugo. I mean pinky is fine but you also forgot half my name so..."

"I only bother to remember the names of the people I respect. Give me a reason to respect you then maybe if I feel like it I'll call you by name." Without hesitation Katsuki gets up and walks out the stand not even looking back once.

——

"Hey Todoroki wait up!" Running after Todoroki Izuku finally catches up.

Hearing his name being called Todoroki stops walking and turns around. "Your that boy who saved me and Iida on the first day aren't you, I'm really grateful for that day, thank you for saving us." Todoroki bows as Izuku waves his arms around in a panic.

"That was nothing, you both needed help so I saved you." He says flustered, a slight blush creeping up his face. "But anyway that's not what I wanted to talk to you about."

"You wanted to talk to me? What could you possibly want to talk to me about? "

"Ah well," Izuku rubs the back of his neck contemplating how he wanted to say this. "You see, when you and Kacch- I mean Katsuki were talking, I was kinda, you know-"

"Eavesdropping." Todoroki finishes for him.

Izuku looks away too embarrassed to meet his gaze. "Yeah, sorry. I didn't mean to."

Todoroki sighs. "If you're here to talk to me about Endeavour or try to play family therapist then if you wouldn't mind I would like to leave."

Izuku shakes his head frantically. "No that's not what I'm trying to do, actually I couldn't care less about Endeavour."

"Then why are you here?" Todoroki asks looking confused.

"Your quirk."

"My quirk?" Todoroki repeats.

"Yeah, your left side. It's because of Endeavour that you refuse to use it right."

Todoroki sighs. "Okay I get what's going on here, you didn't come here to play family therapist, you came to play quirk counsellor right. Well I'll tell you now to stay out of my business. Thank you again about last time." Todoroki bows once again and starts to walk away.

"Hey wait!" Izuku calls out but Todoroki being as stubborn as he is keeps walking.

Izuku sighs as he goes after him. "Quirks are just tools." He says but Todoroki continues walking and doesn't even look back. "They're just another on of our physical functions, they're intertwined with out whole body's composition." Still not waiting Izuku is forced to run and block Todoroki's way. "In this day and age the idea of having a quirk is as simple as the idea of breathing, imagine how bad things can get for a person who doesn't have a quirk, who doesn't have something so normal as breathing."

"What's your point." Todoroki growls, getting angry now as he tries and fails to push past Izuku.

"My point is you have two, two whole quirks perfectly intertwined together to combat your weaknesses. While some people don't have a quirk at all, they don't have something so simple which can be compared to breathing."

"Well I'm sorry for being born with two quirks, as you should know since you were eavesdropping that isn't really my fault. I would happily give any quirkless person my fire quirk if that was possible but it's not so can I leave now."

Izuku sighs once again. "You'd happily give away your quirk right?"

"That's what I said."

"Then why don't I take it off your hands. Since you claim you can live without your quirk."

"What are you-"

"Since you don't want it I'll take the burden of it away from you, but just realise that that quirk is an aspect of what makes you Shoto Todoroki, if you're fine with getting rid of it so easily then be prepared for the consequences."

At this point Todoroki is just angry and is about to start shouting at the boy for the pure audacity he has to start spouting all this shit when he suddenly feels as if a part of his soul just got pulled out of him. He clenches his chest trying to fill the emptiness he feels in his heart, something was wrong, he could feel something missing he just didn't know what, it was almost the same feeling he got from Aizawa's quirk.

"What did you do?" He snarls grabbing Izuku by the front of his shirt but Izuku just stares at him blankly. "Fucking answer me!" Todoroki shouts but Izuku continues to look nonchalant, pissing the boy off.

"What do you mean. All I did was what you wanted."

"Hey Brain Freak where's Deku!" Finding Shinso in one of the hallways, Katsuki runs up to him.

"Oh, hey. I don't know where he is, he was just standing in the wings staring at Todoroki and wouldn't say a single thing to me, then when Todoroki had won and left the stage he went to go after him."

"So he's together with half 'n half?"

"Most likely."

Katsuki grabs Shinso by the arm as he drags him through the hallway. "Come on, your going to show me which way Todoroki went."

"Wha-, I don't know where they are."

"Then we're going to go look for them together."

They both wonder through the hallways looking for his dumbass boyfriend until eventually they hear some kind of commotion coming from one of the hallways. Going to see what's going on Katsuki finds Todoroki pinning Deku to the wall and immediately goes to confront him.

"What the fuck are you doing!" He screams and once Todoroki sees him he instantly lets go. Katsuki keeps on marching towards him despite that and grabs him by his shirt. "What the fuck were you doing to Deku." He snarls and realisation seems to cross Todoroki's face.

"Makes sense that he's your boyfriend." He scoffs before pushing the blonds hand away.

"What the fuck is that meant to mean." Katsuki snarls once again.

"Hey Kacchan calm down, it's alright."

Not convinced Katsuki grabs hold of Half 'n half once again. "What do you mean it's alright, he looked as if he was seconds away from punching you."

"That's cause I was." Is Todoroki's blank reply as Katsuki gets ready to punch him himself.

"Kacchan I said that it's alright, leave him be."

Shinso walks up to Deku. "Hey Izu, what did you do."

"Its fine, don't worry about it." Is all he says before going over to pry Katsuki's hands off of Todoroki.

"Come on Kacchan let's go." He says before turning to Todoroki. "Your so cold," He says. "I don't think that's healthy maybe you should get it checked out, cause the last time I checked the left part of your body is supposed to functions at a high temperature." Deku smirks as he goes to walk away, Katsuki and Shinso following besides him, Katsuki more reluctantly.

Once out of sight Katsuki snarls. "What the fuck did you do."

Izuku stares at him as if he was asking the most stupidest question in the world. "What did I do?" He repeats. "I took his quirk."

"You what!" Shinso shrieks. "Are you stupid why would you do that, Izu what were you thinking."

"Relax." Izuku tells them. "I'll return it after his next match, he should be able to hold out throughout it. I just want to prove a point."

Katsuki pinches the bridge of his nose regretting grabbing Todoroki. "Don't do something you'll regret Izuku."

He smiles. "Of course not, don't you trust me." Katsuki stares blankly at him.

"Not one bit."

Sports festival. part 4

"Hey guys, what did I miss."

"What did you miss!?" Mina huffs, crossing her arms. "Kaminari's match for starters you stupid idiot! Absolute morons, the both of you."

"Oh right." Hitoshi says, having forgotten about their bet after all that has happened. "How did it go."

"No, you don't deserve to know cause you weren't there." Mina whines as Sero rolls his eyes.

"It wasn't my fault, I was kind of preoccupied."

Sero sighs. "Kaminari was completely crushed, it looks like you won the bet bro."

"Oh...okay." Hitoshi takes a seat.

"Okay? Thats all you have to say. It's like you don't want this ship to sail!" Mina shouts getting a little carried away.

Sero puts his hand on her shoulder, trying to calm her down. "Hey Mina calm down would ya. We're not done yet, we'll succeed in our goal somehow."

"Wait what? What goal." Hitoshi asks completely confused about what's going on here.

"Don't worry about it bro." Sero waves it off while Hitoshi just stares at the two, confused but accepts it anyway.

"Ah, It looks like Kirishima's match is coming to an end. They're both looking pretty tired." Sero says bringing everyone's attention back to the match.

"How funny would it be if it was a tie." Jiro comments as she starts to laugh. "Similar quirks, similar strength you know."

Just as she said that both Tetsutetsu and Kirishima deal the finishing blow and are both knocked out by each others punches.

Midnight walks up to the two. "They are both down so it's a draw, in this situation once they are both fully recovered they'll settle this with a simple arm wrestle." The crowd starts to buzz as they admire the two's passion.

"Looks like Bakugo is next." Jiro comments again after having laughed her head off when Kirishima's match did end up as a tie.

"Yeah it looks like it, do you think Uraraka is going to be okay." Yaomomo asks having returned from her match. "She left quite a while ago didn't she, even before my match had started."

"She'll be fine." Hitoshi answers. "It's just Bakugo." All the people in their section of the audience turn to look at him as if he just said one of the most absurd things they've ever heard. "What?" He asks confused.

Mina grits her teeth, clearly done with Hitoshi. "I don't know what possessed you to make you think, 'just Bakugo' would reassure us."

"What? What's wrong with Bakugo, he's a nice person... deep down anyway."

"We're not denying that but he also doesn't know how to hold back." Says Yaomomo.

"Ah, is that the problem? Of course Bakugo knows how to hold back, he just won't unless he sees a reason to. Everything will be fine."

"Are we speaking different languages! What are you not understanding!" Mina complains to herself as Sero and the rest of their classmates laugh.

"Shinso I think you should stop talking before one of her veins pops out of her head." Sero says good naturedly but Hitoshi decides to take the advice anyway, at this rate he wouldn't be suprised if a vein really did pop out of her head.

——

"Heya Aizawa, Mic." Izuku says skipping into the broadcasting booth.

As soon as he sees him walk in, Aizawa glares Izuku's way. "You've been gone for basically six whole matches."

"I was with Toshi." Is his simple reply which gets Aizawa annoyed.

"You can't ask to go to the toilet then leave for 6 matches, you-" Aizawa pauses as he looks at the blank expression on the boys face then sighs. "Why do I even try."

"I ask myself that everyday." Izuku tells him, taking a seat in between the two adults. "Anyway, Kacchan's match is next right. Who's he against."

"Uraraka." Replies Mic, Aizawa sending him a disdainful look saying 'don't be so nice to him'.

"Oh that girl? She was really nice, I hope she doesn't get too upset after the match." Izuku says, genuine concern on his face.

"I know he's your boyfriend but you can't just assume he'll win." Mic tells him.

"It's because he's my boyfriend that I can say with 100% certainty that he'll win."

Aizawa snorts as he looks at the confused look on his husbands face. "If it wasn't for the fact that I'm Bakugo's homeroom teacher I would agree with him."

"See Aizawa gets it."

Mic grunts. "How can you two go from pissing each other off to sticking together so easily."

"Hizashi just introduce the match." His husband sighs.

Mic rolls his eyes but starts to broadcast anyway. "FINALLY WE'VE ARRIVED AT THE LAST MATCH OF THIS ROUND." A chorus of cheers ring around the arena as the participants waiting in the wings get ready to come out.

"ON THE LEFT, THE BOY WHO SWORE HE'LL COME OUT ON TOP YET HAS BEEN STUCK IN SECOND PLACE, WILL HE MAKE AN EXPLOSIVE TURN AROUND AND WIN? IT'S KATSUKI BAKUGO OF THE HERO DEPARTMENT."

Izuku glares at Mic. "You didn't have to say it like that."

"What you can't take the truth?" Aizawa comments. Izuku just huffs as he leans back in his chair.

"AND TO THE RIGHT, IT'S OUR ZERO GRAVITY QUEEN. FROM THE HERO DEPARTMENT, OCHAKO URARAKA." Uraraka walks onto stage, her anxiety visibly through the roof and the crowd cheers again to encourage her.

Kacchan says something but Izuku is too far away to even start to hear what he's saying but knowing him it was probably something like 'withdraw while you still have the chance'.

"START!" Mic signals and in an instant Uraraka is running towards Bakugo, palms out. She says something but as expected Izuku can't hear it.

As Uraraka gets closer, Kacchan just stands there waiting for her to get in range while the audience wait for a reaction, confused. As soon as she gets close to him Kacchan swings his arm and an explosion not big enough to kill her sends Uraraka flying back. Several gasps and comments of disaprovement float throughout the crowds as this vicious cycle of running forward and getting pushed back continues.

Running forward once more Uraraka passes her jacket and makes it float towards Kacchan as a decoy. Falling for it Kacchan blows it away but seeing his mistake instantly turns around and finds Uraraka, blasting her before she can touch him.

"URARAKA USES HER JACKET AS A DECOY, WITH HER QUICK THINKING SHE CONTINUES TO PUSH FORWARD NOT LETTING HER OPPONENTS BRUTAL APPROACH STOP HER!" Mic announces.

Once again Izuku stares at Mic. "Brutal?"

"What?" He defends. "Isn't that totally brutal right there."

Izuku just sighs as he focuses back on the match and sees Kacchan release a bigger explosion than intended. Somehow Uraraka still gets up and charges for him again and again. The audience watch silently in disapproval clearly not liking what they're seeing.

Izuku growls, hating the sheer hypocrisy of every hero in the audience. So they like to watch matches where you pit students against each other but can't handle this. He clenches his fist as he continues to watch on, getting a little frustrated. Aizawa notices but doesn't say anything.

Once again Uraraka stands up and gets blown away, stands up and gets blown away. The cycle doesn't end and one of the heroes clearly seeing that stands up to say he's had enough.

"I can't stand to watch this anymore!" He shouts. "How do you expect to become a hero with a conduct like that! If you're so much stronger than her then just hurry up and blow her out of bounds, how dare you mess with a girl like that!" Several people in the crowd stand up to agree with this statement as a chorus of boos and jeers are sent down.

Izuku clenches his fist even tighter as his nails start to cause blood to draw from his palms. He so desperately wanted to say something but knew he couldn't, he hated how they're all talking about Kacchan and he could tell that Kacchan probably hated it too. The jeers just continue and Izuku is forced to take deep breaths just to subdue his anger.

Blinded by rage he doesn't realise that Aizawa had taken Mic's microphone until he hears his voice reverberating throughout the stadium.

"Which one of you just said he's messing with her!" Aizawa yelled and Izuku is snapped out of his fit of rage. "If you know you were in the right mind when you said that then you might as well leave, and consider a career change while your at it!"

"Aizawa, what are you-"

"He clearly recognises the strength of an opponent that's been able to get this far in the tournament and is on guard because of it. It is because he is doing everything in his power to win that he won't let down his guard for a single second."

As Aizawa says that all of a sudden the audiences attention is brought onto the amount of debris occupying the sky. Uraraka stands to the side, a triumphant look on her face as she releases the debris from their position in the sky and they come hurdling towards Kacchan. A look of distraught crosses Kacchan's face for a split second before he calms himself and gets into position. He probably realised that without using One for All the strain put on his body would be to much so he activates the quirk, the percentage unknown to Izuku. Orange lightning marks spread across his body and in a second the rubble above his head is obliterated. A huge smokescreen covers the stadium and everyone is momentarily blinded. Eventually the smoke screen clears and the audience gazes upon the two teenagers still standing in the ring. To the suprise of both the audience and Kacchan, Uraraka, still fully motivated runs forward despite her plan having failed. Kacchan gets into a fighting position once more getting ready to blast her but immediately runs after her to catch her as she starts to falls.

Midnight goes to confirm that Uraraka is unable to continue before raising her flag and announcing that Kacchan wins. With Uraraka still in his arms, Kacchan snatches the Mic from Midnight, much to her annoyance.

Looking over to the hero who had accused him of messing with her, Kacchan snarls. "Ochako Uraraka is not some weak fragile little girl, she can take care of herself and doesn't need your protection, but clearly you're all too stupid to see that. We both agreed at the start to go full out so don't stick your nose into things you don't fully understand."

A wide smile spreads across Izuku's face as he watches on from his seat. "Looks like Kacchan acknowledges her strength. Lucky her."

Walking into the room Inko turns to see her husband too preoccupied with whatever is happening on his computer to acknowledge her presence. With a slight frown on her face, she walks up to him.

"What are you doing?" She asks and her husband doesn't even take the time of day to even say a word to her just moves out of the way slightly to let her see. She huffs slightly before talking again. "Oh, you're watching the sports festival, I forgot that was today. Is there someone who's peaked your interest?"

Finally talking AFO smiles. "Surprisingly, there is someone who's peaked my interest. A certain Katsuki Bakugo." He points to the boy as he brutaly fights a girl who looks as if she can barely keep up.

"Oh Katsuki got into UA?"

"You know him?"

Inko nods. "He's Mitsuki's son. Him and Izuku used to be friends but I'm pretty sure Katsuki started bullying him once he found out he was quirkless."

"Really?" He tilts his head as if thinking something over. "Has this Katsuki always been so strong?"

Inko nods again. "He's always had a lot of potential, ever since he was little. It's no suprise that he's super strong now." Inko pauses. "Although that's new."

"Huh-" AFO turns to look at what Inko is pointing at on the screen. It shows Katsuki looking up to see an ample amount of rocks and rubble littered across the sky. The rocks fall and getting into a good position, lightning marks spread across the boys arms and face as he lets out a massive explosion which turns the rocks into Ash in mere seconds.

Despite his lack of a face Inko can clearly imagine a vile smile finding it's way onto AFO lips and a menacing glow shining in his eyes. She didn't know what he was thinking, she doubt she wanted to know, she just hoped that she hadn't just put Katsuki in danger. She's already failed her own son and she knew he would hate her ten times more if any harm was to befall others cause of her.

———

With a smirk on his face Hitoshi turns to Mina. "Looks like Bakugo has acknowledged Uraraka before he's acknowledged you, I doubt we'll be hearing anymore pink cheeks from now on." He says teasingly. Mina just huffs as she turns to face away from him, a pout forming on her face. A slight laugh escapes Hitoshi's lips and he gets up to go down and prepare for his own match. "See you all soon."

A chorus of, "good luck!" Rings from his classmates as he makes his way down to the waiting rooms. On his way he sees a TV propped onto the wall, he watches as Kirishima and Tetsutetsu walk onto the ring and decides to stay and watch their tiebreaker.

Hitoshi watches as Kirishima and Tetsutetsu duke it out in an arm wrestle, Tetsutetsu puts up a good fight but unfortunately loses due to iron deficiency. It was a shame, Tetsutetsu had been a big help during the cavalry battle but there wasn't really anything he could do about it now. Hitoshi walks away from the TV to prepare himself for his next match, he's going up against Todoroki, whether he had his ice quirk or not, he knew he was going to be hard to beat.

Sports festival. part 5

Walking up to one of the waiting rooms Hitoshi knocks on the door. After Kirishima and Tetsutetsu's arm wrestle Hitoshi had decided to check on Uraraka after her loss against Bakugo. He knocks on the door and hears a couple of sniffs but soon enough there's a reply to come in.

Walking into the room, Hitoshi returns Uraraka's smile once she sees him. He walks towards her and sits in the chair opposite her.

"You okay?" He asks, and her already bright smile grows brighter although looking kind of forced.

"I'm mostly fine, still have quite a couple of bruises since my stamina was too low for recovery girl to fully heal me." She replies. "How about you, how are you feeling."

Hitoshi could tell she was trying to redirect the attention to him to avoid talking about herself, even so he smiles and answers anyway. "Well I'm about to go against Todoroki which seems pretty scary, but I'm going to try my best to win since I'm sure Bakugo will give me hell if I lose to him."

At the mention of Bakugo Uraraka's smile dims a bit. "I'm sure you'll do great." She says now fidgeting with something on the table.

Desperate to change the subject Hitoshi keeps talking. "Thanks." He says. "I'll try my hardest... Oh yeah, I won the bet between me and Kaminari... although I still don't know the conditions of winning, we hadn't discussed that." Uraraka's smile dims even more leaving Hitoshi confused on what he did wrong.

Uraraka had overheard the Bakusquad talking about getting Shinso and Kaminari together back when she was watching the matches from the stands. She had to admit it made her a little upset although she didn't know why. She looks over at Hitoshi who's looking a little upset from the lack of help he's been to cheer her up, she sighs before banging her hand on the table, startling Hitoshi.

She gets up and moves over to his chair to slide it back and push him out if it. "Get up, you can't sit here forever. You've got a match remember!" She says a bright smile on her face.

Picking himself of the floor Hitoshi smiles back. "Yeah I guess I do. I'll get going now then." At that moment Mic's voice can be heard announcing that the match will start soon. "See you later." Hitoshi says waving to Uraraka and she waves back as he leaves the room. If Hitoshi had heard Uraraka completely break down in tears right after that he didn't question it.

Walking down the corridor Hitoshi passes someone he hadn't expected to see.

"You're his next match up huh. Shouldn't be too hard." Endeavour says glaring daggers into Hitoshi's soul.

Just standing next to him Hitoshi could feel the huge presence he emitted. A little frightened Hitoshi looks up to him. "Pardon." Is all he says yet a displeased look crosses Endeavour's face.

"I was just passing by but I heard you're that Eraserhead's son so came to see how much of a match you could possibly be for my Shoto. Full of tricks that Eraserhead is but looking at you I highly doubt he's taught you any of them."

"Uh, so I'm not so sure what you're talking about, technically I'm not Aizawa's actual son, not legally anyway. I haven't actually known him for all that long, less than a year I think."

Endeavour rolls his eyes. "I'm aware you're not his actual son, he's still dating that loudmouth right. Two men can't have a child."

Hitoshi squints his eyes clearly displeased. "First of all, Aizawa and Mic are married, I'm pretty sure they have been for quite a while."

Endeavour scoffs. "Two men are allowed to get married now. What has the world come too."

Hitoshi clenches his teeth, Endeavour having now crossed the line. "Second of all," He says very passive aggressively trying to not go out of control but failing. "If you really must know it is possible for two men to have a child, just like they have the right to marry and love each other just like everyone else has the right to marry and love each other, but I doubt you could ever understand the concept of love with that thick muscle brain of yours! The world is evolving and changing for the better, if you can't accept that maybe you're not suited to be number 2 hero and should step down and let Hawks take that title, the people like him much more than you anyway and he doesn't have such traditional views! Talking of traditional, this isn't back in the day where you owned your children, Todoroki is his own person so don't describe him as 'my Shoto'! Do you understand the words coming out of my mouth, or does the youth speaking out of turn not match up to your stupid views either?!"

The flames on Endeavour's face burn dangerously as he fills up with pure rage. "Who do you think you're talking to you insolent brat!" He yells and in that moment Hitoshi does something he knows he'll probably regret later. He puts Endeavour under the control of his quirk and the hero's eyes go blank as his flames go out.

"A word of advice," Hitoshi snarls despite the brutal fight Endeavour is putting against his quirk. "Maybe if you tried looking out for the people instead of your damn rank you'd be just an inch as great as All Might is, even then I highly doubt it. Get out of my way and look up how to be a better person or something, or just stay out of my sight."

Hitoshi knew those orders where pointless, and he also knew if he didn't leave now Endeavour would give him hell to pay, so he scurries past him and makes sure he's far enough from the hero before releasing him from his quirk. Despite being out of Endeavour's sight Hitoshi could still hear the angry burning from miles away, but that didn't matter right now. He has a match to win.

After getting introduced both boys walk onto the ring. Todoroki looks more miserable than usual and Hitoshi has no doubt it's due to Izu's stupid little prank.

"Are you okay?" Hitoshi asks but when Todoroki refuses to talk to him he sighs.

As Mic tells them to start Hitoshi positions himself into a fighting stance, having no idea how he was going to counter Todoroki's ice. He knew he didn't have his fire at the moment but Todoroki's ice alone was a force to be reckoned with. It was at times like these that he cursed having a mental quirk, there was no way Todoroki was going to fall victim to his quirk since he already knows how it works. Aizawa had told him that he was allowed to have a capture scarf but Hitoshi had refused, he wanted to only use his strength and not be unfair to the other players, plus he still couldn't use it that well in combat. Not to mention a capture scarf would be totally useless in this fight against Todoroki.

No matter how Hitoshi thought about it there was no way for him to win this match unless Todoroki slips up somehow and replies to one of his questions. That was highly unlikely and there was no guarantee Hitoshi would even make it through the match long enough for an opportunity like that to come. Unless if not having his fire affected Todoroki more than he was expecting than Hitoshi sees no way of winning this match. Well everything was fun while it lasted, atleast he got this far, and for this exact reason he's going to make sure he tries his absolute best even if Todoroki is missing a quirk.

As soon as Todoroki gets into position Hitoshi is expecting him to send out a huge glacier of ice to trap him like he did with Sero but much to his suprise Todoroki sends lots of little icicles his way. Hitoshi is barely able to dodge the barrage of ice as scars now litter his body and he looks over to Todoroki. Hitoshi gulps as he looks at the completely focused look on Todoroki's face as if he was going to take his time to completely destroy him, which might actually be the case. Either way Hitoshi knew that Todoroki was super angry only making his chances of winning(and surviving) smaller.

Todoroki continues to shoot out ice towards him having no intention of making this a quick fight. A whole lot of barrages of ice later Hitoshi is out of breath and slightly annoyed at his inability to do anything but dodge. It was obvious that Todoroki knew this and was just playing with him at this point, there was no doubt that this probably had to do with Izu and his quirk taken away so he grits his teeth preparing for the next attack knowing that he has no way out of this.

Hitoshi braces himself but Todoroki just stands there shivering but trying to hide it, now that Hitoshi had the chance to look closer the layer of ice now covering Todoroki was a lot and he was staring to turn blue. He's at a very dangerous temperature and it's obvious that Todoroki knows he's hit his limit without his fire quirk as he sends everything he's got to encase Hitoshi with ice making him immobile.

As soon as Midnight declares the match Todoroki's victory he stamps his way out of the arena looking more pissed than Hitoshi has ever seen him before. Hitoshi feels a slight pang of guilt as he stays stuck in the ice a while longer due to Todoroki being unable to unfreeze him.

Up in the broadcasting booth Izuku looks at Aizawa with an expectant smile on his face. Aizawa just sighs, rolling his eyes he tells him to just go. He's given up trying to get his problem child under control, plus he was worried about Hitoshi.

Hitoshi sighs as he lays in a medical bed, freshly littered in scars but most of his injuries gone thanks to recover girls efforts. He felt really sleepy and didn't know when he fell asleep till he was woken up by someone shaking him awake.

Looking up he sees Izu, a soft smile on his face. Rubbing his eyes a little, Hitoshi smiles back. "Will you finally talk to me now?" Hitoshi asks. "Or are you going to run on over to Todoroki again."

A little huff of laughter escapes Izu's lips as he gives Hitoshi a little side hug, being cautious of his injuries. "Sorry about before, I was trying to sort some stuff out."

"It's fine." Hitoshi tells him. "I understand you were just trying to help Todoroki in your own twisted little way, even if I have no idea why. Have you given him back his quirk yet?"

Izu shakes his head. "I will, soon."

Hitoshi gazes at him questioningly. "Izu are you sure. You have to give it back to him alright, no excuses."

"I said I will, relax."

Hitoshi huffs as he leans back in his bed, getting rid of the topic. He isn't sure what Izu was up to but he trusted him. "Anyways putting that aside, where's Recovery girl?" He asks.

"I'm not sure, she wasn't here when I got here so I don't know where she went." At that moment Recovery girl comes waddling through the door making a fuss and cursing under her breath.

She looks up not having noticed the two staring at her. "Oh you're awake. That Todoroki really did a number on you." She walks up to a cabinet where she grabs a few gummys before walking over to Hitoshi and handing them over. "Who's this, your friend?" She asks as she sends a glance Izu's way.

"Yeah." Hitoshi replies and Recovery girl just nods.

"Well then you can leave now, that's as much as I'm able to do for you."

"Thank you." Hitoshi says as he gets up and bows, Izu doing a quick bow as well besides him. They walk out the room and into the corridor. They stand out there for a while, Izu silent and daydreaming while Hitoshi expects him to go look for Todoroki.

"So what now?" Just as he asks that he gets a notification from his phone and checks it to see that Bakugo has texted him to come meet him somewhere on the first floor. Hitoshi shows Izu the text and he just shrugs.

"Lets go see what he wants." Is all he says before they're walking through the hallways looking for his boyfriend.

——

"Bakugo are you sure about this?"

"Of course I'm sure. I've texted brain freak and he's on his way." Pikachu nods as he chews on his nails.

"What if it doesn't work?" He asks. "What if he doesn't even like me?"

Katsuki groans as he leans against the wall. "Well it better work or else I'm done trying to get you two together. What's the point of helping when all you ever do is complain and mess everything up, grow some balls Pikachu."

Pikachu sighs his anxiety only growing, as soon as Shinso comes into view turning the corner he tenses up.

"Hey Bakugo, Kaminari." Brain freak says. "So why did you want me to meet you?"

With a smirk on his face Katsuki pulls Pikachu over to Shinso and Shinso immediately knows that he made a mistake coming here. Katsuki pulls them both over to a janitors closet and pushes them both in there. "You're going to stay in there, and you're not going to come out until you've sorted shit out."

——

"So why did you lock them both in there?" Deku says coming out of nowhere.

"Where the fuck did you come from?" Katsuki asks but to be honest he was already used to this by now.

"I was with Toshi when you texted him, I just lagged behind a bit since I thought you'd still be annoyed about the whole Todoroki thing."

"I don't care about that idiot!"

Deku just lets out a laugh, sounding a little more like a scoff as he leans on his boyfriend. "So are you going to tell me why you locked them in there or not."

"Because they're both morons who can't express their feelings."

"Sounds a little bit like a certain explosive blond I know, maybe I should lock you in a closet as well." Katsuki glares at him and he laughs. "Anyway I'll get going back to the broadcasting booth to tell Aizawa that Toshi is fine. You should probably start getting prepared for your match, Iida's one has just finished."

"Alright, I'll see you later."

"Yeah, cya."

Deku waves and is about to leave when Katsuki calls out, "Aren't you going to give it back to him."

"I will." Is all he calls out before he's turning the corner and gone.

Hitoshi looks up at the ceiling trying ignore the fact that he's in a closet filled with cleaning supplies and practicaly pushed up right against Kaminari. Turns out that was much easier said than done, he could barely see his face but could feel the warmth emitting from his body. That was definitely why he was sweating and his cheeks were super hot, because of their body heat, definitely not because he was embarrassed.

Kaminari shifts and the heat in Hitoshi's cheeks only increases. He could hear every breath he took, feel the rapid pace of his heart beat, or it could be his own, Hitoshi wasn't sure at this point. All he knew was that in this tight and dark room he could feel every little sensation coming from Kaminari making it one hundred percent impossible for him to ignore this situation.

Why did Bakugo have to lock him in here with Kaminari? Not saying that he wouldn't want to be here with Kaminari, infact he's glad that it's Kaminari if anyone, he just doesn't understand why he was put into this situation. An unintentional sigh escapes Hitoshi's lips and he immediately feels Kaminari tense up.

"Ah, I'm sorry." He says and feels Kaminari only tense up even more.

"It's fine. Kaminari replies. "It's kind of cramped in here isn't it. I bet you feel uncomfortable right now."

"Yeah, a little." Hitoshi replies and he feels Kaminari sag a little in disappointment. "Oh I didn't mean being in here with you, it's just that this place is really small and there's a spray bottle just poking me in the back. I'm kinda glad you're here though except for the fact that that gives me even less space."

Kaminari speaks, a tone of disappointment in his voice. "I'm sorry, if you want I could try to move a little into the corner."

"Ah no, it's fine. I don't really think it would make any difference, it would just make you more uncomfortable with all the supplies and stuff in here, you know." Hitoshi says getting a feeling he's been doing something wrong.

"Right." Is all Kaminari says, the disappointment even more evident in his voice, before he just stops speaking all together and the two are once more in silence.

Time passes on and minutes feels like hours as he only gets more uncomfortable and starts to develop a cramp. After a few minutes Hitoshi suddenly feels Kaminari's unsteady breath and doesn't know if he's suffocating until one of his tears catches the light and Hitoshi realises he's crying.

"What's wrong?" he asks and looks at Kaminari, his eyes better adjusted in the darkness that he could see him now.

"S-sorry." Is the wobbly reply that comes out and Hitoshi sucks in a breath as he feels this fleeting pain in his chest as he sees Kaminari cry.

"Why are you apologising?" He asks, "There's nothing to apologise for. Are you in pain, should I try moving a bit?" Kaminari shakes his head causing Hitoshi to sigh. "Then what's wrong?" He asks and Kaminari continues to remain silent.

Another sigh escapes him as Hitoshi wriggles a little to try and free his arms and wrap them around Kaminari. Kaminari tenses up once again as Hitoshi's arm wrap around his back but leans into the hug when he's brought closer to Hitoshi's chest. Hitoshi starts to stroke his hair as he crys silently into his arms.

"I'm sorry." Is all Kaminari says over and over again as they stay close, waiting for his tears to dry up.

Hitoshi strokes Kaminari's back as he waits for his tears to subside. Eventually he does stop crying but Hitoshi keeps his arms wrapped around him, partly because it was too much of a hassle to try and remove them in this cramped space and partly because it was nice being in this position.

Once Hitoshi is sure Kaminari won't burst out crying again he asks, "Will you tell me why you were crying now." Kaminari sniffs as he leans into Hitoshi's embrace, all he says is sorry once again and just like before the two fall into silence.

Minutes pass but it isn't that bad as the two stay wrapped around each other. Hitoshi doesn't try to push Kaminari into telling him what's wrong if he doesn't want to say, so he just waits patiently for him to say something, anything. Eventually Kaminari does break the silence as he looks up to face Hitoshi.

"I-im sorry." He says once again. "I must be getting on your nerves at this point.

Hitoshi shakes his head. "It's fine, your not." Its faint and he can barely see it but Hitoshi thinks a smile crosses Kaminari's face.

"I'm sorry for getting you into this situation, I shouldn't have let Bakugo talk me into this."

"Huh? Why did he lock us in here anyway?"

"I guess he did this for me and he'll probably get pissed if nothing comes out of this so..."

"What are you talking about?"

"Hey Shinso, could you just listen for a bit." Hitoshi nods, just glad that he's about to get some answers.

"Okay, go ahead." He tells him and Kaminari nods.

"There's been many times in my life where I've developed the absolute most stupidest crushes. I've been described as a hopeless romantic by so many different people, although I think Mina and Bakugo just see me as hopeless at this point." He smiles a little before continuing. "I'm always the type of person to gain fleeting crushes on people, most of the time it was a little more than a crush, it doesn't matter though, it would always usually end in rejection, but that was fine. I'm the kind of person who falls in love way too easily and I hate that about myself, I'm always putting myself through unnecessary stress and emotions even though I knew I would just get rejected anyway." Hitoshi stares at Kaminari not sure where he's going with this, he continues to listen though feeling like this is important.

"I always got over rejection quickly, thats probably why my classmates in middle school never took my crushes seriously. They knew I was just going to get rejected, get over it and fall in love with someone else... Shinso," He looks up at him, tears forming in his eyes. "I've never gotten so upset at the thought of rejection before, I never realised I could actually love someone for real and not as some fleeting emotion. Shinso, rejection has never hurt me enough for me to cry, I've always just expected it but now," He grasps tightly onto Hitoshi's top. "It really hurts."

"What hurts?" Hitoshi asks starting to get an idea of where this is going.

"Just the thought of rejection, the thought of you hating me and our relationship never being able to go back to how it was before. Shinso I like you, I really like you and for some reason this time its not a fleeting crush. I never realised how deep my feelings for you actually went I assumed it would be the same as always, that's why I played along with Mina's shenanigans, but once I realised how I truly felt it was so hard to tell you." Hitoshi stays silent as Kaminari starts to sniff, tears welling up in his eyes again.

"I'm sorry." He says for who knows what time today. He leans in closer to Hitoshi. "I'm sorry if I'm making you uncomfortable, I just thought I should let it all out, I know you probably don't feel the same way but could you please just not say anything. I don't think I'll be able to handle rejection this time." He squeezes his eyes shut as if to prepare for words of rejection anyway.

Hitoshi stays silent, not cause he had intended to reject him, as Kaminari was probably thinking, he just didn't know what to say. Before coming to UA people barely talked to him, they avoided him at all cost, yet here Kaminari was now confessing his love for him. Raising his arm Hitoshi starts to stroke Kaminari's hair, he looked like a sad puppy which sent a pang through his chest.

"Kaminari," Hitoshi says, lifting his head so they're face to face. "You don't make me feel uncomfortable, I'm glad that you told me how you feel and I'm sorry that I had no idea before this. Now that I think about it you had made it kind of obvious, I just couldn't come to terms with anyone wanting to be friends with me talkless of liking me."

"Why wouldn't anyone want to be friends with you, your an amazing person."

Hitoshi smiles. "That's not true, I disregarded your feelings and made you cry so I guess I can't be all that amazing."

"Thats not true, you didn't know because I refused to tell you, you didn't make me cry I was just being insecure and overthinking."

"Either way, you're crying your eyes out right now and it's partly my fault."

"Stop being so modest, I'm crying my eyes out because I don't know how to control my feelings."

Hitoshi sighs. "Are we really going to argue about this?"

"If you accept that you really are an amazing person we might be able to avoid it."

Hitoshi sighs again, this time to cover up the huge smile threatening to take over his face. "I'll accept the fact that I'm an amazing person if you accept the fact that it is partially my fault."

"I don't know how me accepting that will make you feel better about yourself but if it does then it can be fully your fault if you insist." Kaminari rolls his eyes as Hitoshi seemingly gives a nod of approval.

The two continue to talk about the most stupidest things, the atmosphere no longer so awkward. Their conversation topics switch almost every second yet the conversation flows until they somehow bring up Mina reminding Hitoshi that Kaminari basically confessed his heart out.

A solemn smile crosses Hitoshi's lips causing Kaminari to ask what's wrong. "Kaminari," Hitoshi says as he nods. Hitoshi pauses a little before continuing, looking for the right words. "I'm really sorry but I need time to sort out my feelings and get over my personal struggles." He says and the mood immediately sourness but this had to be said. "I have no intention of rejecting you I'm just saying we should take things slower so I can sort things out. I really don't want to hurt you, that's why for now let's stay as friends and see how we develop."

Hitoshi had expected Kaminari to be upset but instead he's smiling, looking like the happiest he's ever been in a while. "Well it's not a rejection." He says. "So if that will make you feel better, we can take it slow." Hitoshi smiles as the two decide to stop talking now and just take in the others embrace as their arms are still wrapped around each other.

In the middle of the silence Kaminari suddenly speaks up. "Hey Shinso?"

"Yeah."

"Could you do me a favour?"

"What is it?"

"Can I call you by your first name from now on?"

A smile spreads across Hitoshi's lips as he says, "Of course, but can you also do me a favour?"

"Sure, what is it?"

"Can I also call you by your first name?" A wide smile similarly spreads across Kaminari's face as he nods. Hitoshi hadn't realised Kami- Denki's feelings before, but now that he does he can't help but feel elated at just the thought of him so happy.

"Hey Hitoshi?"

"Yeah."

"Promise me that even if you realise you don't actually like me we'll still stay friends."

"Yeah, sure. We'll stay friends no matter what." Hitoshi gives Denki a little squeeze, his arms still wrapped around him as they both relax, glad that they've talked things out.

———

"Hey Todoroki! I've finally found you!" Izuku runs up to a shivering Todoroki who immediately whips around when he hears his voice.

Despite his obvious discomfort, Todoroki comes marching up to Izuku. "Give it back!" He demands, a wretched snarl on his lips.

"That's what I came here to do, I don't need your fire quirk but by the looks of it you obviously do." Todoroki's right side is completely covered in a thin sheet of ice while his left side is starting to turn blue, Izuku isn't sure why he hadn't just gone to recovery girl straight away, that's why he was there in the first place.

Todoroki snarls as he watches Izuku stand there completely calm. "Then what are you waiting for?" He snaps.

"Have you learnt your lesson?"

"My what?"

"The whole reason I took your quirk is because you thought you could survive without it, you were willing to give it away but now that it's gone your upset. What are you so angry about, didn't I do exactly as you wanted?"

Pissed, Todoroki gets dangerously close, "Just give me back my quirk."

"Not until you learn to cherish it. Your quirks don't define you and neither does your dad, you should feel free to use both your quirks."

"I don't need your stupid preaching just give me my quirk. I know you're trying to help but I never asked you to in the first place you nosy bastard. Stop trying to get involved I don't see how me not using my quirk could possibly affect you."

"It might not affect me or anyone now but later in time your ice is going to reach it's limits real quick and without your fire quirk there's no way you can hope to make it high in society. Like I said, your lucky to be born with two quirks when some people have none, your even luckier to have a quirk that combats your weakness so stop taking that for granted."

"How the fuck does that concern you!"

"It concerns me when lives are involved!" Todoroki opens his mouth to say something but Izuku stops him. "Todoroki your trying to be a fucking hero, hero's saves lives, why are you trying to half ass something as important as saving a life! Forget this stupid tournament and your father, you have a goal and you will never reach that goal if you continue to disrespect the lives around you!"

"I'm not disrespecting anyone."

"Then is this a game to you?"

"Wha-"

"-If you're not disrespecting them then you must see this as a game, you must think people's lives are a joke? So you have a little trauma because of your fire quirk, so fucking what. A life is more important than your stupid fight with your dad and even stupider morals to never use your fire." Izuku walks up to Todoroki grazing his forehead slightly to give his quirk back as he can tell his shivering is getting worse.

A soon as he feels that familiar warmth of his fire coursing through his body he lights up his left side at a steady pace just barely enough to unfreeze his right side and get his temperature back under control. After a while, once his shivering has significantly subsided Todoroki makes an attempt to leave having gotten what he wanted but of course Izuku goes to stop him.

"You still don't understand do you. Do you really take life for granted like that, is a life not more important than your grudge."

Todoroki growls having had enough of this. "If it is ever needed for me to use my fire quirk to save a life then I will, I don't see why your here spouting all this bullshit."

"So you'll only use your fire if someone's life is on the line without it? Who do you think you could possibly save with that untrained left side?"

"I can save enough." Todoroki growls only getting Izuku more angry.

"Well enough isn't good enough!" Izuku shouts clearly pissed off now. "In this line of work when you are responsible for the lives of people, saving enough is nowhere near good enough, not for the people or for you either. You might not understand now but when the time comes and you realise that you are responsible for the lives around you, that you are the reason that someone is no longer this world, that you could have done something, the guilt is going to eat you alive and leave nothing left. Train your fire Todoroki, don't let the guilt consume you later on, cause when it does and when the nightmares start there's no turning back."

Todoroki looks at Izuku solemnly laced in with a little pity. "Why does is sound like you're talking from experience." He ask and a sad smile crosses Izuku's face.

"Cause I am."

An awkward silence spreads as the two just stand there until Todoroki groans, finally giving in. "Fine." He says. "I'll train my fire quirk, but that doesn't mean I accept it or will use it other than when I really need to."

Izuku sighs. "Well that's a start I guess. But can I say one more thing?"

"I highly doubt I could stop you from speaking your mind, all my attempts have failed so far anyway."

Izuku chuckles a little, a small smile on his face. "You shouldn't let your father hold you back from your true potential. It's your quirk and your quirk alone and your stupid father can't change that or try to own it because at the end of the day it's your quirk and you decide what to do with it."

"Are you done?" Todoroki asks ruining the mood.

Izuku scoffs. "Atleast say OK or something."

"Ok." Todoroki replies nonchalantly. "Now are you done?"

Rolling his eyes Izuku says, "Yes Todoroki I'm done now."

"Are you really Bakugo's boyfriend?" Todoroki asks once again. "you really are a walking red flag."

"Kacchan said I'm a walking Red flag?"

"No he said your manipulative as fuck."

"And he gets upset at me for oversharing." Izuku scoffs.

"Can I leave now?" Todoroki asks. "I still have a couple of matches left."

Izuku sighs stepping out his way. "Good luck." Is all he has time to say before Todoroki is striding through the corridor thankful that he's gotten away.

———

Katsuki walks out onto the stage and Kirishima does the same. Kirishima smiles giving Katsuki a thumbs up as Mic introduces them both but he just rolls his eyes.

"Let's do our best." Is all Katsuki says before Mic tells them to start. The match ends with Katsuki as the victor and no hard feelings between the two.

Chapter End Notes

I only just realised how long this fic is going to be😞. 30 chapters in and we're still in the sports festival, Imma pick up the pace of the story. (I say that but knowing myself there's a big possibility that won't happen)

Sports festival. part 7

"You've been gone for quite a while, how's Hitoshi doing?" Aizawa asks as Izuku walks back into the broadcasting booth.

"He was out for a while but woke up before Mina and Aoyama's match started."

"Then why are you only back now, the semi finals has already begun. The final match will begin 15 minutes after Bakugo's match against Tokoyami. You even missed his match against Kirishima which was unexpected."

"It's fine I already knew Kacchan would win."

"Yes in the most ruthless way." Mic says earning a glare from Izuku.

"You're exaggerating, Kacchan and the red haired guy are friends."

"Doesn't stop him from pummelling him."

"He did not 'pummel' him."

"You weren't there so how do you know."

"Why do you-"

"Both of you shut up about Katsuki and Deku tell me where Hitoshi is?"

"Toshi? Well he got a text from Kacchan to meet him so we went and Kacchan was with that lightning guy, what's his name...Ka-"

"-Kaminari?"

"Yeah Kaminari." Izuku continues. "So basically I was hanging back cause I assumed Kacchan was angry at me-"

"Why would he be angry at you." Mic interupts.

Izuku pauses for a second before eventually deciding to just ignore Mic's question. "Like I was saying I was hanging back then all of a sudden I just see Kacchan lock Toshi and Kaminari into a room together-"

"He what!"

"Locked them in a room together, I just said that."

"And why did he do that!?"

"When I asked he said its cause they're morons who can't express their feelings, basically he's trying to set them up I think."

"What!"

"I think the Bakusquad have been trying to set them up for quite a while now." Mic chuckles having quickly recovered from Izuku flat out ignoring him before.

"How on earth do you know that?" Aizawa looks between the two but this time its his turn to be ignored.

"Aww, is that what they call themselves, I'll have to tease Kacchan later for this."

Mic laughs, "I don't think he likes it very much though."

"Hello!" Aizawa waves his hand infront of his husband's face. "Hizashi answer my question."

Sighing Mic looks over to his husband, "If you must know it was pretty obvious but I guess you are just as oblivious as Hitoshi."

"Or he's just refusing to believe the obvious." Izuku joins in.

With a look of clear dissatisfaction Aizawa walks over to Izuku, grabs him by the back of his collar and drags him out the door.

"Hey! Where are we going!"

"To drag Hitoshi out of there."

"Who says you need to."

"I still haven't got the chance to give him a lecture about the pros and cons of dating a loud blond."

"Am I going to get that lecture?"

"I was planning on it but I doubt you would break up with that aggressive teen any time soon."

"I'm not planning to break up with that aggressive teen at all."

Aizawa just rolls his eyes as he continues to drag Izuku through the hallways. "You never know how life will treat you in the future, things aren't always going to stay this way."

At this point Hitoshi's muscles were getting sore, he still has his hands around Kami- Denki, neither of them having backed away despite the awkward silence. In the first place it wasn't as if there was any space to back away, the closet was still dark and small and at this point Hitoshi was starting to get claustrophobic.

He wondered how long it would take Bakugo to come get them, considering how long they've been in there Bakugo's match had either started or was about to start meaning all the more time they had to spend in this cramped place. Hitoshi dreaded just the thought of it but almost in an instant the door is being pulled opened as light starts to seep through. Hitoshi had to squint to adjust to the brightness due to being in the dark for so long, he looks up to his saviour, glad to be free from this hell hole but all feelings of joy are instantly sapped out of him as he sees none other than Aizawa staring at him in distraught.

Immediately Hitoshi removes his arms from around Denki and scurries out of the closet, keeping his head down the whole time to avoid Aizawa's piercing gaze. Kaminari having realised who was there shortly after that also made his way out the closet and went to go stand next to Hitoshi who looked like he was regretting all his life choices. As soon as the two boys are out of the closet Aizawa signals for Hitoshi to follow him and he has no choice but to follow his command, he waves good bye to Denki who is looking confused but unfortunately there isn't enough time for him to explain.

He'd have to properly explain everything to him later.

——

"Okay Aizawa before you say anything, just know that there's more pressing matters to think about." Hitoshi says, straying behind the pro hero slightly.

"Oh yeah, and what would that be?"

"I may or may not have put Endeavour under my quirk and told him that he'll never be an inch as great as All Might even if he started looking out for the people and not his rank."

At that Izu bursts out laughing completely contrasting the horrified look on Aizawa face. "And why on earth would you do that?" He asks mortified.

"I had my reasons, he was being a real prick and even went as far as to bring you and Mic into this so I lost control and got angry."

"Yeah cause that's a good enough reason for putting the number 2 under your quirk and insulting him!" Aizawa grunts, clear sarcasm resonating in his voice.

"He started it, he said all types of things about me and even you and Mic."

"I don't know what happened but I know he probably deserved it, good job Toshi." Izu says, sending him a thumbs up.

"Deku shut your mouth." Aizawa turns back to Hitoshi. "We're going to have a serious talk about this later so don't think your off the hook."

An awkward silence falls upon the three as they continue to walk. Looking over to Izu, Hitoshi whispers but Aizawa being the person he is hears anyway. "Hey Izu are you going to tell him?"

"Oh for fuck's sake what now!"

"Tell him what?"

"You know..." He shakes his head causing Hitoshi to sigh. "About Todoroki."

"What did you do to my student Deku? Can you both stop messing with the Todoroki family, are you trying to become their enemies!"

Izu lets out a slight chuckle. "Relax Aizawa, I couldn't care less if I became enemies with Endeavour, I don't like him and it's obvious his son doesn't either so I think I'm safe."

Aizawa pinches the bridge of his nose clearly frustrated, he turns to Hitoshi hoping to get some words of sense out of him. "Hitoshi what did he do to Todoroki."

"I think you should ask him that yourself."

"I did and he's giving me stupid answers! So Hitoshi what did he do to Todoroki."

"Come on Aizawa it's not that big of a deal, Toshi had nothing to do with it."

"With what? What on earth did you do? knowing you this is going to end terribly so please tell me now before things get out of control!"

"I mean I highly doubt it will get out of-"

"HetookTodorokisquirk!" Hitoshi shouts out, his words barely understandable and jumbled as he talked too fast, that wasn't a problem for Aizawa though since he clearly understood.

"Explain." Is all he says as he turns back to Izu.

"Hey Aizawa if this pointless lecture goes on for any longer we're going to miss the finals."

"Deku shut up!" Aizawa shouts more upset than Hitoshi has ever seen him before. "You think this lecture is pointless? You take one of my students quirks which you knew was essential for his saftey, right before he had to battle at that!" He turns to Hitoshi. "And you, you battled him knowing all this and didn't think to tell anyone, the boy was looking as blue as the sky yet you still didn't tell anyone."

"If he was looking as blue as the sky, why wasn't the match stopped." Izu retorts.

"In my defence," Hitoshi starts. "who am I going tell? What do I do, walk up to Midnight in the middle of the fight and tell her Todoroki got his fire quirk stolen. Todoroki might not have known that his ice would affect him more without his fire quirk but he dragged out that fight on purpose even though I was completely helpess, so whatever happens that's his fault."

Aizawa pinches the bridge of his nose as he takes several deep breaths. "I should have figured things would end up like this." He says leaving the two boys confused. "Deku is a bad influence on you."

"A what?!" Izu instantly shouts out getting annoyed. "How am I a bad influence!"

"Hitoshi just said it was a person's own fault for getting injured, do you think that is something he should be saying."

"Aizawa, Toshi is a big boy, he can speak and think for himself!"

"Deku can you not listen to yourself?

"Aizawa you can't just blame him, I-"

Aizawa glares at Hitoshi instantly shutting him up. "Wait your turn." He says before turning back to Izu.

"Aizawa why are you getting so angry, Your making things seem worse then they actually are."

"Worse then they actually are!? Do you know how terribly things could have turned out? With how blue Todoroki was looking I'm suprised he didn't immediately collapse due to frostbite. Deku what if he had died or been critically injured! Why don't you ever think about the consequences before doing things, I get that you're a vigilante and I allow you to do as you wish, but can you keep your stupid ideals and dangerous thoughts to yourself!"

Izu grits his teeth. "Why are you getting so annoyed, I was just trying to help."

"There's other way to fucking help you moron! Taking away a person's quirk and putting their health at risk should not be one of them! You're going to have to find a way to apologise to Todoroki."

Izu grunts before letting out a "whatever," and Aizawa seemingly given up with yelling and getting him to listen turns to Hitoshi.

"Now back to you. I don't know what transpired between you and Endeavour and personally I don't think I want to know. You shouldn't have put him under your quirk, and if he was an even more shameless person than he already is, he could totally send you to court on the charges of illegal quirk use, and he would win."

"Okay but like I said before, he didn't just insult me but you and Mic as well."

"That doesn't matter right now!"

"What did he say?"

"Deku shut up."

"No offence Aizawa, your the one who needs to stop yelling before you lose your voice." He turns back to Hitoshi and repeats once again, "What did he say?"

"Well it started with him using Aizawa to insult me and emphasise the fact that I am not on the same level as his son."

Deku scoffs. "He so self centered. What about after that?"

"It ended with him being a homophobic little prick and criticising the fact that two men are allowed to get married. Overall he was just a real ass and I got angry.

Aizawa sighs, unable to find a counter argument to what Hitoshi just said. Instead he turns on his heel and starts marching down the corridor making his way back to the broadcasting booth.

——

"I don't know what happen but looking at Sho's face I'm guessing he yelled at you both quite a bit, but compared to your faces I'm guessing he gave up on trying to get you both to listen."

Izu laughs. "How did you know?"

"Are you seriously still taking this as a joke?" Aizawa grunts, at this point completely done with his shit.

"Ooo-kay, so I don't know what happened but I say we just forget about it and focus on happy things instead. I know today has been really hard for everyone but on the bright side you've done really well up till now Hitoshi." Mic turns to Hitoshi who gives him a little smile.

"Still got crushed pretty badly by Todoroki though."

"And he got his quirk taken away in return." Aizawa mumbles to himself but glaring at Izu as he does it.

"Mic your husband is glaring at me."

Mic sighs. "Sho, stop glaring at the kids." Aizawa rolls his eyes as he turns to look over the arena instead. "That reminds me-" Mic says as he looks through a drawer and takes out an envelope. "-Hitoshi this is for you."

"For me?" Hitoshi repeats as he trys to go take the envelope but it's snatched by Aizawa first.

"Sho, I know you're upset but stop being petty." Mic scolds.

"I'm not being petty."

"You look very petty to me right now." Izu intervenes.

"Deku, shut up."

"You've been telling me that a lot lately."

"OMG, Sho just give Hitoshi the envelope."

"Fine." Aizawa grunts begrudgingly handing Hitoshi an envelope. "Take these."

"What is it?"

"See for yourself." Mic pipes up getting kind of excited.

Opening the Envelope all Hitoshi sees is a bunch of papers, taking them out he skims the text, one word drawing his full attention.

"Adoption?"

An excited grin spreads across Mic's face. "It's been months with you living with us and we can finally adopt you, sign those papers and we'll become a family."

"That's only if you want to-" Aizawa tells him but is unable to finish his sentence when he's caught in an unexpected hug with Hitoshi, Mic and Izu joining as well for no reason other than they can.

"Of course I want too!" Hitoshi exclaims, pulling away from the hug as he can't help but read over the word adoption over and over again and the two signatures inscribed at the bottom of the page. "Give me a pen."

In no time another signature is accompanying the bottom two, putting a smile on everybody's faces. "Hey Toshi." Izu calls out. "Does this mean you're going to start calling them dad or something?"

Hitoshi pauses. "I haven't thought about that."

"It's fine take your time, you can call us whatever you want. The most that's really changed is that we're a legal family, doesn't mean we weren't before, nothing else has to change."

Hitoshi's smile spreads back across his face as he's about to say something but is interrupted by Mic shushing them all. Mic then starts to announce that the final match will begin soon, hearing that Izu immediately goes to sit down not caring about anything else right now other than his boyfriend. Following suit Hitoshi also goes to look for a place to sit down but still radiated with joy as he looked down upon the arena.

He was now officially Aizawa and Mic's son. Without a doubt he was most definitely the happiest person in the arena today.

Todoroki vs Katsuki

Katsuki wipes the sweat of his face as he walks over to Bird Brain and holds a hand out. To the side of him mini bird Brain is sulking and shys away from Katsuki as soon as he sees him nearing, Katsuki just rolls his eyes focusing on the user instead of the quirk. Bird Brain takes his hand, thanking him before they both walk off back into the wings. Now Katsuki has 15 minutes to prepare himself so walking over to to the waiting rooms he kicks the door open seeing none other than icyhot who he has to face in the finals.

"What the fuck are you doing here?" Katsuki asks as Icyhot looks up from the table with a blank and distant look. He huffs, "This is waiting room... well shit, this is waiting room two."

Icyhot looks back at the table as if Katsuki was never there to interupt whatever he was doing in the first place. Annoyed at being so thoroughly ignored Katsuki walks up to him, his footsteps heavy.

"I accept this is my fault for getting the room wrong but that doesn't mean you have to ignore me." Katsuki growls as Icyhot continues to ignore him. Getting a little worried now that this has something to do with Deku and his quirk Katsuki sends an explosion to the table looking for some kind of reaction. "Hey Icyhot, I'm talking to you!"

Almost as if snapping out of a trance Icyhot starts to speak. "That guy...Deku, he's your boyfriend right."

Katsuki grunts knowing things would have ended up like this. "Yeah so what, what's it to you."

Todoroki looks up at him. "Has he always been like that, nosy and intrusive."

Katsuki snorts. "Always." Todoroki just sighs and looks back to the table once again, Katsuki kicks away the table to get his attention. "I know he stole your quirk and that was stupid of him, and no matter how much the idiot offends you and crosses your boundaries he is just trying to help. I don't think it is his place to help but once he's set on something I can't stop him so whatever it is he's trying to make you do just hurry up and give in." The blank expression stays on Icyhot's face and Katsuki grits his teeth. "Now if your done contemplating life, you better give it your all during the finals, and I mean with both your fire and your ice! You better not look down on me bastard!"

At that Katsuki stomps out the changing room not giving Todoroki another glance. He was going to win no matter what and truly deserve it, he doesn't need his opponent half assing everything.

Instantly their fight kicks off with Todoroki sending out an explosion of ice to counter Katsuki's own explosions. Ice shards and sparks fly through the air as the two stare each other down. It was clear to Katsuki that Icyhot has no intention of dragging this fight out and neither did he have an intention of using his fire so Katsuki was going to force him into a situation where he had no choice.

Blocking another release of ice Katsuki uses one of the big ice shards to spring off and grab Todoroki from the air flipping him over his head. Using the momentum Katsuki flings him across his head. Todoroki almost exits the ring if it wasn't for the fact that he had quickly used his ice to catch himself. Without a second to even process a thought, Katsuki immediately runs over to Icyhot, explosions popping in his hands. Aiming right for Todoroki's face he purposefully misses as to allow him to grab his arm. With Katsuki's arm bound by Todoroki's right hand he's in a perfect position to use his fire and win but of course he doesn't pissing Katsuki of.

With his other arm clenched into a fist Katsuki punches Todoroki in the gut with all the power he could possibly muster in the position he's in. Todoroki stops for a second, wrenching in pain. With a deadly glare on his face Katsuki leans in close enough to whisper in Todoroki's ear. "I'm going to use my full power from now on." He says, Todoroki still trying to get over the pain from the punch. "There is no chance in hell you could possibly beat me if I use my full power with only your stupid ice, so stop underestimating me already and fight me seriously you stupid idiot!" The last part he screams out as he tries to aim another explosion at Todoroki but is pushed away by a fleet of ice.

Using this moment as a breather the boys just stare each other down for a second before orange lightning marks are spreading all over Katsuki's body, suddenly appearing as if they've always been hiding under his skin. A fleeting moment of panic crosses Todoroki's face but he instantly gets back in position.

"Are you done fooling around?" Katsuki snarls. "If you don't give it your all I could quite possibly kill you so stop stalling!" Katsuki runs over to him once more his speed boosted as he runs on 2% power instead of 7, which he's now capable of, so he doesn't actually end up killing the guy. Todoroki clearly not expecting the speed boost doesn't have time to expect the power boost either as he's sent crashing to the ground by the impact of Katsuki's explosion, having felt the full brunt of it despite using his ice as cover. Todoroki stands up, adrenaline pumping round his body. It was now that he finally realised how serious Katsuki was and he believed that he quite frankly could possibly end up dead.

Katsuki attacks again not giving Todoroki a second to breathe. Todoroki does nothing but dodge as Katsuki continues to attack. What else could he possibly do? Katsuki's attacks were way to powerful at the moment and Todoroki's movements were starting to get sluggish as he over uses his ice, he always had the option of his fire but that would be giving Katsuki what he wants and he still wasn't in the right mindset to use it.

Katsuki realising that Todoroki was only going to continue dodging instead of fighting back stops attacking for a moment, his anger growing. "Is my power still not enough for you to use it!? I can increase it if you want?" Katsuki eventualy sighs as he tries and fails to regulate his anger. "There's no point in me fighting you if your not going to try your best! There's no point in me winning if it means I beat you cause your half-assing the fight! How can I possibly prove myself, prove anything if you refuse to use your full power! If you don't want to fight then leave you fucking bastard, give it your fucking all or leave!"

Todoroki grits his teeth feeling conflicted, he wants to fight, he wants to give it his all but there's something holding him back, something that he doesn't know how to overcome. He looks up at Katsuki a look of pure determination on his face, maybe if he forgot about his father, forgot about his family and the annoying boy who took his quirk, perhaps if he forgot about everything and thought about this match and this match only he could overcome this ordeal and fight to his fullest.

Seeing Todoroki's look of determination Katsuki powers up to 5% and starts going in for his final attack, jumping in the air and adding a little spin to it Katsuki can see a tiny spark of fire emitting from Todoroki's left side. A wide grin spreads across his face as he thinks that Todoroki is finally about to give it his all, but alas trauma can not be overcome so quickly just as you can't release your inner demons so easily. Katsuki hits Todoroki with his explosions, the explosion colliding with ice. But that's all Katsuki could see. Ice.
There wasn't even a hint of fire as Katsuki grounds himself from the recoil and looks up waiting for the storm of dust and ice to pass.

He finds Todoroki lying collapsed on his ice, barely conscious. With nothing but anger and malice he trudges up to him a snarl etched on his lips. His mouth quivers ever so slightly as he grabs Todoroki's defenseless body by his shirt. "Get up." he snarls, more pissed then he's ever been in his life. "Get up!" He says once again. "You can't, it can't..." Katsuki is unable to finish that sentence as he feels an overwhelming wave of exhaustion sweep over him, he had no idea when the world turns black.

Fuming a little Izuku looks up to Aizawa. "I'll be back." He says but Aizawa grabs ahold of him before he can do something he'll regret.

"Wait," He says. "I'll come with you." Izuku just nods not caring what he does as long as he can get to his boyfriend.

"Let's go then." Izuku urges impatiently but is disrupted by the trace of pity and concern laced into Mic's voice.

"Before you go, Sho tell Nemuri that Iida won't be able to participate in the awards ceremony."

"Why not?" Aizawa asks getting Izuku just a bit annoyed.

"Tensei was attacked by the hero killer, apparently he's fatally wounded. We'll have to go visit him after this."

"Who's that?" Hitoshi asks but instantly shuts up when he sees the annoyed glare Izuku sends his way.

Izuku didn't know who Tensei was either but it was obvious that both Aizawa and Mic knew him and he could tell Aizawa was starting to feel responsible. He had tried to catch the Hero Killer but due to the fact that he hadn't attacked any hero's in a while both him and Izuku were a little lax about his capture. Izuku felt bad for both Iida and Aizawa but he was still worried about Kacchan and that mattered to him more right now.

"Aizawa let's go." He says and the man ushers him out as he realises he's got something to do so he puts all worries of Tensei and the Hero killer to the back of his mind.

Marching through the corridors Aizawa leads them to the waiting rooms where Todoroki who'd just come back from recovery girl, and the shadow guy - Tokoyami he thinks his name is - sat in one and Kacchan in the other. Seeing midnight waiting outside the room where Kacchan is Izuku tries his best not to get angry but it's kind of hard not to be. It looks like she's on the phone to someone and is just about finished with the call when she sees the two.

Seeing Izuku's expression Midnight moves out of the way of the door without a fuss but tells him. "I'll give you a chance to calm him down but the awards ceremony has got to start soon, we'll be heading over to the podium in a few minutes and he has to be there. If you fail I'll have to find other measures to get him there and I can't promise they won't be extreme."

Izuku just scoffs as he walks right past her into the waiting room and Midnight immediately knows that she's pissed him off. Izuku sees Aizawa go up to talk to her but he doesn't know what they're saying and quite frankly, he doesn't care.

Walking into the room Kacchan lays rather uncomfortably on two tables pushed together to make a makeshift bed. If that didn't piss Izuku of then the fact that his boyfriend was still asleep really did, how was he supposed to calm him down if he's still under her quirk. What was she expecting, for him to wake up in the middle of the award ceremony.

Thankfully Izuku's quirk was able to wake him up, the situation still pissed him off though. Kacchan shoots awake feeling agitated and angry, he looks around looking for Todoroki but instead finds Izuku sitting calmly besides him.

"What happened." He asks, his voice raspy.

"You won the match but grabbed Todoroki despite him being unconscious so Midnight put you to sleep."

Kacchan grits his teeth, only just remembering everything that had previously transpired. He lowers his head looking at the table he's currently still laying on and can't help but slam it with an explosion.

"Kacchan calm down."

"Calm down?" He snarls. "The fucking asshole didn't use it, not even once. I told him use your fire or leave and he fools me making me think he actually had any intention of using it."

"Kacchan you never know, maybe he did."

"How can you say that after taking his quirk away. If anything you've only made things worse, who tries to help others by stealing their quirk."

"The award ceremony will begin in 5 minutes." Mics voice reverberates through the speaker in the waiting room causing Izuku to sigh.

"Kacchan-" Izuku reaches for his shoulder in an aim to make him look at him.

"What." He snarls.

"Kacchan there will be other sports festivals-"

"So."

"And there will be other chances for you to fight Todoroki, he might not have used his fire in this one match but in the future maybe he will."

"Deku the keyword there was maybe. I don't care about some uncertain future, I care about now and how I just won a match because the idiot was half assing the whole thing. Am I really that worthless to him that he doesn't even think he has to use full power against me."

Izuku sighs, not knowing what to say. He knew that Kacchan was going to go on about this for days and quite frankly he didn't want that, plus he needed to calm him down for the award ceremony and he's only gotten him more heated."

"Kacchan lets-" A knock is heard from the door following Midnight's voice that they have to get going to the podium now.

Sighing Izuku gets up and has to pull Kacchan up from the tables and to the door, he hated having to deal with his little tantrums.

"Kacchan you have to go."

"Why should I, I haven't won shit."

"Come on Kacchan just stand there, thats all you have to do. You don't have to take the medal if you don't want to."

"I don't want to stand there for the world to see either."

Finally able to get him to the door Izuku opens it and pushes him out. Both Aizawa and Midnight watch as he struggles to get him through the door, Todoroki uninterested in their antics right now and still a little bitter about his quirk being taken away. Tokoyami just stands there, not even batting an eye at the two.

"Bakugo, you have to go to the award ceremony no matter what." Midnight warns.

"Why do I, glasses isn't here right now!"

"He has some personal issues meaning he can't be here right now." Aizawa tells him, a guilty frown creeping upon his face.

"So fucking what!" He yells. "Fine then in that case I'm also having some personal issues so just leave me be."

"Kacchan!" Deku yells, finally having enough. "Just go to the award ceremony, its not that hard."

"I don't want to." Kacchan yells back but isn't prepared for the terrifying glare Izuku sends his way. Kacchan closes his mouth and doesn't say anything for the rest of the trip to the podiums.

The award ceremony ended with Todoroki and Tokoyami receiving their medals and Kacchan attempting to explode his multiple times but that shit was indestructible. In the end Kacchan stopped trying but did flip off the number one who just laughed it off, already used to his behaviour.

Izuku sighs as he watches from the wings, this had been a long sports festival which took 8 chapters to write😭, he was glad it was finally over even if he still had one more goal for the day.

Post Festival

Staring up at the ceiling he takes a breath, he takes another, then another but he can't get rid of that stifling feeling. It was always the same at home, even when his poor excuse of a father was on patrol that phantom heat, the overwhelming humidity would always linger. All the events of the day certainly didn't help either.

Thoughts swimming through his head, and breathing finally getting too difficult, Shoto decides to get some fresh air for a while. Sitting on the little porch outside he looks beyond him in thought, eyes not particularly focused on one thing his field of vision brushes past a familiar emerald green which looked out of place despite being surrounded by plants and greenery.

Getting up to go inspect it, Shoto walks over to the gate. Getting there he sees none other than Bakugo's boyfriend who had taken his quirk earlier that the day.

"What on earth are you doing here?" Shoto hisses aggressively.

"Endeavour isn't home right?"

"No, but that doesn't mean you can just barge into my house. How'd you even find out where I live anyway."

"First of all," The boy says. "I'm outside your house so I'm in no way trespassing or doing anything illegal. Second of all, I have my sources."

"Please leave, I don't want to hear anymore of your quirk preaching."

"I didn't come here for that, I came to apologise."

"Apologise?" The boy nods as he takes a seat on the floor, making himself comfortable.

"I'm sorry for taking your quirk." He says, getting straight to the point. "That was irresponsible of me and even if I was trying to prove a point there were better ways, and don't worry I got a really long lecture because of this."

Shoto also takes a seat on the ground having a feeling that the boy wasn't going to leave all that easily. "By who?"

"Aizawa." Shoto just nods having remembered him mention that he knew Aizawa back on the first day of school when he rescued him. "Oh and Todoroki, I'm sorry for being super pushy and annoying, and eavesdropping as well I shouldn't have done that but it was kind of an accident."

Shoto nods. "I accept your apology. And I'm sorry for being kind of aggressive, could you apologise to Shinso for me too... and Bakugo while your at it."

"You had every right to be angry, I shouldn't have done what I did. Kacchan though, he's not going to forgive so easily."

Shoto sighs. "He's gonna be mad at me for days isn't he."

"Maybe even weeks."

Shoto groans. "I hate it when he's in his pissy mood."

"Yeah, that can be kind of annoying can't it." The boy chuckles. "But maybe if you apologise yourself he'll appreciate it more."

"Will he? I think he'd be annoyed either way."

"Kacchan is a very interesting and complicated person."

"So?"

"So... I have no idea if he'll actually forgive you or just get more mad. I wouldn't be suprised if he grew even angrier just cause you apologised."

"Wow that makes me feel ten times better." Shoto says as he rolls his eyes.

"Wow, I never realised you were capable of sarcasm." A fond smile grows on the greenettes face.

"Why wouldn't I be?" Shoto question and the boy just shrugs his shoulders. There's an awkward silence for a while till Shoto changes the subject.

"So anyway. Thanks to you I've finally been able to try to sort my life out, atleast a bit anyway. I've decided to finally go visit my mum at the hospital tomorrow morning. I don't know how things will go, I might even end up backing out, but the fact that I even considered seeing her when I usually avoid just the thought of my mum. I'm making progress right?" Shoto looks up at the green haired boy who gives him a soft smile, he didn't know why he was discussing all this with him but he finally had someone other than his siblings who could listen and he wasn't about to throw away this opportunity.

As if reading his mind the boy stars speaking. "If you back out there's always next week, and if you back out again there's always the week after that. You still have time to sort out your feelings and get your life under control, I would offer to help but after everything that's happened I doubt you'd want it." He looks up at the sky as if thinking for a while, completely relaxed despite sitting on a dirty concrete floor. "You really are making excellent progress though. I'm sorry for the terrible things I did but I don't regret it for a minute if it means I've made this much of a difference in your life."

Shoto looks down avoiding the boys gaze. "You may have really pissed me off but if it wasn't for you I wouldn't be here right now, understanding my own feelings more than I have ever before. Without your help I wouldn't even be making an active effort to become at peace with myself so despite how you annoyed me, despite your terrible methods I would gladly accept your offer to help. Maybe it's your meddling that can give me the final push to turn things around for the better."

A soft smile spreads across the boys face. "If I promise to never try and take your quirk again, or be as pushy as I was today, do you think it would be alright if I visit you like this from now on. When Endeavour's not home anyways, he scares me."

Shoto laughs. "If you promise to never take my quirk again or be overly pushy then I have no reason to stop you."

"Does that make us friends now. No hard feelings right?"

Shoto pauses, dwelling if he had misheard or not. "Friends? You want to be friends with me?"

"Why wouldn't I."

Shoto shakes his head in response to the pure confusion on the boys face. "Nevermind it's nothing, I'd happily be friends with you, but won't Bakugo be mad."

"That's only if he knows."

Shoto laughs once again. "Are you sure that's a good idea, what if he finds out."

"If he finds out what's he going to do, attack us?"

"He could."

"Nah, he wouldn't... I don't think he would anyway."

"This is seriously concerning, you know that right."

The boy chuckles as he rubs the back of his neck. "Like I said Kacchan is a very confusing person."

Shoto smiles. "You call him Kacchan?"

"Ah, yeah. It's what I used to call him when we were younger and it just felt weird to stop calling him that later on."

"You can call me Shoto."

"Huh?" The boy looks up in confusion.

"I said you can call me Shoto. Since we're friends now."

"Oh, then just call me Deku."

Shoto smiles. "In that case, Deku what's your quirk?"

"My quirk?" Deku rubs the back of his neck as he looks off into the distance."

"Its complicated."

———

"I'll be back soon!" Shoto shouts out from the entrance and Fuyumi comes rushing to the door.

"Shoto where are you going?"

"The hospital." He says bluntly and the pure suprise that crosses his sister's face might have made him laugh if it wasn't for the fact that his anxiety overrid that humour.

With everything that he needs and his shoes on he starts to take his leave. "Why now?" Fuyumi calls out, confusion and slight panic laced into her voice. "Why after all this time did you decide to visit her now?"

Shoto stops, taking a second to look back at his sister. Some would assume he would already know the answer but he stops and considers what actually brought along this change. Just yesterday he had hated even the thought of using his left side, he hated the thought of embracing his past and then all of a sudden his life is turned upside down in the span of a few hours. A tiny smile spreads across his face, the most emotion Fuyumi has seen in months. "Thanks to a certain idiot I've had a change of heart." And I've made a friend, he doesn't say out loud before leaving.

Waiting outside the hospital a huge smile spreads across Izuku's face as he sees a certain duel haired boy walking up to him. After everything that had happened the day before he hadn't expected to be here all friendly with Shoto like this (neither did I to be honest I wrote most of this on a whim) but here he was as moral support for something that could quite possibly be the first big step of Shoto accepting himself and his past. Key word possibly, the guy was kind of unpredictable and dense, Izuku wouldn't be suprised if this somehow ended up having an opposite effect than expected.

Shoto walks up to him, a look of nonchalance on his face. He waves a little and without a word they're now walking side by side. The atmosphere is awkward but before Izuku can try to lighten the mood he pauses.

He can't help but stop and get into a fighting stance as he sense a murderous intent coming from the right of him, and imagine his suprise when he turns to see that it is not a villian about to go on a rampage or someone with a grudge against him, it's none other than Iida. Class 1-A's class president and beloved little brother of Ingenium. With that revelation things started to make sense, all the pieces of the puzzle fit together so nicely that there wasn't much for Izuku to peice together, except there was just one thing that he hadn't expected.

"Isn't that Iida." Shoto asks.

Who knew he was capable of such killing intent.

———

Rushing into the hospital Tenya looks for his mother. As soon as he sees her tear stained face he thinks of the worst, he didn't want to but he couldn't help it.

"Where is he." He asks, desperation obvious in his face. His mother barely able to say a word just weakly points over to the door opposite them. It sounds like his mother did end up saying something but Tenya rushes into the room before he could even process the words coming out of her mouth.

He sees his beloved brother lying still in the hospital bed, despite all this a smile rests on his face. Iida holds in a sob as he goes over to his brothers side, the pure state of him sparking hate for the man who caused this. Tensei weakly lifts up his arm until his hand is resting on Tenya's face, smile unwavering. That pissed Tenya off.

Why was he smiling? What was there to smile about? Despite how much he loved his brother and always wished for him to be by his side he still couldn't always understand him. What part of becoming paralysed and having to give up your hero career could possibly induce a smile on anyone's face?

"I'm alive." Tensei rasps seeming to understand the questions whirling through his little brothers mind. His smile grows wider, nothing but pure joy in his voice. "I'm alive and able to see and talk to you again. What more could I possibly want?"

Your life back, Tenya thinks. Why wouldn't you want your legs? Why wouldn't you want your name back, your career as a hero?

Why wouldn't he want his life back?

"I'm sorry." He says, the smile finally twisting into one of sorrow. His brother finally showing his true emotions, the most logical emotion anyone would feel in this moment, the most human. "I'm sorry for not being the kind of hero you wanted me to be. I-"

"That's-" Tenya clenches his fist trying to hold back his overwhelming emotions. "That's not what you're meant to say. Why? Why aren't you angry, why aren't you upset why are you only thinking about me and not yourself?" Tenya doesn't even know that tears started streaming down his face until his brothers frail hand goes to wipe them away.

Smile still strong on his face he says, "Because you're my priority. I'm not dead yet and neither is Ingenium, so Tenya, I ask you to inherit this name and keep the hero alive in my place."

Silent tears continue to fall down Tenya's face as he looks to the ground. Without so much as word incase he accidentally lets more of his anger out Tenya waves goodbye to his brother before walking out. His mother is nowhere in sight when he walks out but he knows she wouldn't have gone far. Needing some fresh air Tenya first goes to wash his face before standing outside waiting for all these conflicting emotions to simmer down.

———

"Don't do it."

A glare settles on Iida's face as he looks at Izuku who to him probably seemed to have appeared out of nowhere.

"Hey Shoto, you go ahead!" To Iida's suprise, the green haired boy shouts out to none other than Todoroki, his cold and friendless classmate. Just the fact that they're together left a lot of questions.

"Why are you two together?" He asks in shock, the suprise just barely able to subdue his anger.

"We came to go see someone but more importantly let go of all the anger in your heart."

"What?"

"I couldn't possibly understand what you're going through right now, and I apologise since I am slightly to blame but please whatever you are planning to do forget about it, your brother is alive so be grateful."

"Grateful? I should be grateful!" Iida stutters at the mere insanity coming out of his mouth. "Stop acting like you know anything about me, I don't even know who you are. And your slightly to blame? Do you see this as some joke, is my plight so funny to you. Stop acting delusional and stay out of my way, you know nothing about me and my circumstances so I don't know who you think you are to interfere!"

"People really hate it when I interfere in their lives don't they." Izuku sighs to himself which only seems to make the boy infront of him angrier.

Anger finally bubbling over, through gritted teeth Iida says, "Please leave."

Izuku makes an attempt to continue talking but before he can even get a word out the boy has already marched away, practically fuming.

Shoto walks up at him, not having listened to him when he had told him to leave. Having heard nothing but having already settled on a conclusion Shoto sighs. "Your way to meddlesome you know that right." Izuku sighs as they continue to walk.

"I'm aware."

———

"Sho, I thought we were going to visit Tensei today, are you still doing your research or whatever it is?"

"We'll go visit Tensei but this is important. Come over here." Shota waves his husband over who proceeds to look at the screen.

"What is it?"

"I figured something out about the problem child's quirk, I don't think this is a good thing though. Deku could be more dangerous than we thought."

"What? Why do you say that, you care for Deku a lot so what could possibly make you say that?"

"During the sports festival when I went to get Hitoshi I found out that Deku had taken Todoroki's quirk."

"He took Todoroki's quirk? How does that work?"

"I was suprised and too angry to question him, I just assumed that Hitoshi had meant he blocked off his quirk or something. It turns out that Hitoshi might have actually meant that Deku took the quirk."

"What makes you think that?"

"It doesn't make sense, the fact that Deku has more than one quirk. At the entrance exam All Might had said that his quirk was some kind of memory reading quirk but I've seen Deku use a nail base quirk."

"Okay, so what are you getting at?"

"Back then you told me it was highly likely that he does have a memory reading quirk due to the detail in which he tells us about events and according to All Might, Tsukauchi was there when Bakugo had told them about the quirk. I've seen Deku use his nail base quirk before, it's possible for him to have those two quirks but it's weird considering it doesn't relate to his parents quirks at all and he was originally quirkless. What makes it even more weird is that he took away Todoroki's quirk, it could be due to his nail based quirk since I don't know the details of it but if it's not then Deku has multiple quirks."

"Is that... even possible."

"There's a few likely conclusions that I've come to and most of them I don't like. I'd have to ask Hitoshi what he meant by taking Todoroki's quirk though."

"Then go ask him?"

"I'd rather not. I don't want to have to go in complete detail about the whole situation to Hitoshi and just us talking about all of this now means that Deku will know if he ever uses his memory quirk on us. It would be better if there wasn't one more person that knew about this."

Mic sighs, starting to feel the gravity of the situation through his husbands tone. "Okay, I understand." He says. "So what are the possibilities you came up with."

"First of all like I said before, Deku could actually somehow have those two quirks and him 'taking Todoroki's quirk' could actually just mean he blocked of his quirk using his nail based one. Like I said that is unlikely, and it's hard to believe that Deku has so much precision that he can block off one of Todoroki's quirks but not the other, but this is the best possibility and I really hope it's true."

Mic stands up straighter. "What are the other ones"

"Secondly, and I really hope I'm wrong. Deku is actually quirkless but had been given various quirks."

"You don't mean..."

"Yes I do. He could have some kind of relation to All for One. If this is the case he may not be just some vigilante and could actually be a real threat to society. With the rest of these possibilities there's a high chance that Deku is a tool for AFO. If this is true he could be trying to infiltrate UA and Katsuki could even be in danger."

"What does this have to do with Katsuki."

"I'm not sure if I should tell you this but Hitoshi knows as well. All Might was originally quirkless and was given One for All, a stockpiling quirk which can be passed on from user to user, AFO has been after that quirk for a long time now. A few months ago All Might gave that quirk to Katsuki meaning if AFO is really alive and was to ever find out he would be in a lot of danger."

"How on earth did you know this, and even Hitoshi but not me." Hizashi gasps, not sure whether to feel offended or shocked.

"All Might had told me when they were asking me about Deku and Katsuki was the one to tell Hitoshi. I guess no one saw a reason to tell you."

"Whats that meant to mean."

"It means that this is a secret for a reason, the less people that know, the better." Shota kind of snaps but Mic doesn't take offence, he could tell his husband was stressed.

Mic huffs and turns back to the screen. "So if Deku is really working for AFO and he is alive then Katsuki is already in danger and things just got worse because of the sports festival."

"Yes and no. It's not like Deku could have possibly planned on All Might giving Katsuki OFA meaning that he's with him because they actually love each other. Also Deku definitely didn't plan on meeting me meaning that he possibly wasn't trying to infiltrate UA either."

"So your saying that Deku's actions are authentic but he could also possibly be taking advantage of the fact that he knows you and the fact that Katsuki has OFA." Shota nods. "So basically if this is all true we've also given Deku access to Nezu's office."

"Well shit I forgot about that."

"Sho this isn't looking good."

"Theres still another possibility. Deku's actual quirk could be like AFO's meaning he's basically got the same abilities. This could mean he's directly related to AFO in some way or he actually has nothing to do with AFO in the first place. If he is related to AFO then we're all fucked."

"Well things just got complicated."

"Well it gets even more complicated."

"There's more?"

"Yes there's more, there's also the possibility that he works for the league."

"The league?"

Shota nods. "The hideous Nomu thing that bashed my head in had multiple quirks and I think Nezu might suspect that AFO had something to do with it. Then theres also the fact that the league has come up to Deku. It's true that he was the one who warned us of the league but he could have ulterior motives. All in all I shouldn't have trusted Deku so easily and I've potentially put a lot of people in danger."

"Its okay Sho, we won't know till we ask him."

"And what makes you so sure he'll tell the truth. Zashi, I'm afraid that I've made the mistake of trusting him so easily. I'm even more afraid of the possibility that he could be a great threat, I've grown too close to him and now I'm afraid of the outcomes."

The pain resonates through his husband voice and Hizashi can't help but embrace him, feeling just as anxious as he is.

———

Looking out of the window with his phone placed against his ear Hitoshi sighs. "I'm sorry about yesterday, I didn't have time to explain anything since Aizawa came so suddenly."

The voice on the other side laughs, bright and cheerful as always. "I get it, sensei did scare me a bit. He looked kind of upset."

Hitoshi snorts. "Things only got worse after that."

"Why what happened?"

Hitoshi pauses not sure how much he can say. "Well let's just say its a long story."

"I have time."

"A long story that I don't think can be shared."

"Ah, okay. In that case tell me a story which can be shared."

Hitoshi chuckles to himself, Denki obviously hearing at the other end. "I have a really funny story about the sports festival actually but I'm not sure if that can be shared either."

"You have a lot of secrets don't you?"

"Not necessarily, it's just that... things are complicated. You know what, give me a second let me ask if I can tell you."

"Ok?" Denki replies, his confusion evident in his voice and not knowing what else to say.

"Hey Aizawa!" Hitoshi shouts as he makes his way to the living room but stops when he hears his and Mic's hushed voices.

"I shouldn't have trusted Deku so easily." Hitoshi hears him say and immediately decides to listen, he didn't know what was going on but he had a feeling it had something to do with yesterday's events.

"Hey Hitoshi, you still there?"

Hitoshi lifts the phone up to his ear. "Hey, Denki, something came up. I'll call you back later." Is what he says before hanging up the phone.

He leans in closer to hear, Hitoshi can clearly tell that Aizawa is in a lot of distress so decides to ask him about Denki at a later date. Feeling kind of guilty now for eavesdropping Hitoshi makes an attempt to leave but of course ends up dropping his phone which alerts the two heroes to his presence.

"Hitoshi come out." Aizawa orders, no real command to it. Rubbing the back of his head guilty Hitoshi goes to stand infront of the two, an awkward smile on his face. Not wasting any time Aizawa just sighs. "How much of that did you hear."

"The fact that you think Izu is dangerous and a threat."

Aizawa sighs again as he rubs his eyes. "Sho I think we might as well just ask him." Mic says and Aizawa seems to give in.

"Is this about what happened with Todoroki? Are you still mad?"

"It's not as much as I am mad, it's more concern. Hitoshi, when you told me he took Todoroki's quirk what exactly did you mean?"

"What did I mean?" Hitoshi repeats. "I don't know, that he took his quirk I guess. I was just using the same words as Bakugo, I'm not sure how Izu's quirk works."

Aizawa sighs once again pinching the bridge of his nose, this was becoming complicated. "Hitoshi everything we discussed here today you must keep a secret from Deku, and make sure he doesn't suspect that you are hiding something or he will find out what it is straight away."

"Okay but should I be concerned."

"It's fine." Mic tells him. "I say for now we all act around Deku how we usually have just be careful of the things that you tell him, don't share secrets so easily."

Hitoshi nods still feeling rather uneasy about all this. He trusted Izu but was trust really enough?

———

"We are about to create the very essence of a hero, what you will now on be known as. Today we're going to be creating your hero names." Aizawa grunts, he was not prepared for the overwhelming cheer that was let out by the class.

He hears someone say, 'finaly, something worth waking up for' and rolls his eyes. This was definitely not something worth waking up for, he sighs. He just wants to sleep.

Don't let loud blonds pick your hero name

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Walking into the classroom early as usual Hitoshi sees that Iida isn't in his seat like he would be normally. A sullen expression crosses his face having heard about what happened with his brother, he goes to his seat along with Bakugo who walks in behind him.

In no time the class starts to fill up with students, in turn filling up with gossip and how 'we're finally getting recognised as heroes and as people' ~ Denki. The whole class share their experiences of how random strangers came and congratulated them. Hitoshi being the person he is had locked himself away in his room all weekend, his only communication to the outside world being Izu and Denki. He had then been driven to school this morning along with Bakugo, so had nothing to tell, instead he sat their quietly just listening.

In the midst of the chaos, coming in just 5 minutes before the bell would ring, unexpectedly, was Iida. Bolting out of her chair as soon as she saw him, Uraraka immediately went to ask him how he was feeling and the whole classes attention was now directed at him.

Making it clear that he was alright, and even apologising for creating unnecessary concern, Iida takes his seat and sits there, a strained smile on his face as he starts to talk with Uraraka. Hitoshi frowns a little, he would go and talk to him but based on the way he was acting, he knew that he wasn't fine and that he probably didn't want to talk about his brother right now. In all honesty he was worried, just as expected the rest of the class are as well but there's no point dwelling on that right now.

Sensing a familiar presence Hitoshi stiffens as does Bakugo infront of him who then sits up straight. The class had known by now that the two of them had a way of sensing Aizawa so immediately they knew that their teacher was coming and went completely silent.

Walking into the class, Aizawa glares at them all, clearly tired. "Morning." He huffs as he walks up to the little podium at the front of the class, basically dragging his feet as he goes.

"I'm glad you're bandages were able to be removed." Tsu tells him and the rest of the class nods in agreement.

"My injury was never that bad in the first place, Recovery girl went overboard." Aizawa says before addressing the whole class. "Forget about that, let me first explain to you about the nominations you've all received from pro heroes for your excellent work in the sports festival." The class fall silent and begin to pay full attention.

"This year is more for you all to gain experience, the nominations you get in your later years are what really matter. If you catch the eye of a good hero it could set you up well for the start of your hero career. It's highly likely that pros who nominated you this year could end up losing interest by your third year so continue to try your best to improve and catch the eye of a good hero."

Aizawa clicks a button and the screen up front changes to reveal a list of names with numbers next to them.

"Usually things would be a little more evenly spread out but it's not, so take that as you will."

Hitoshi is overcome by happiness as he sees that he's got 5 nominations by his name. Despite all the names above him having way more than him he was just happy that anyone had taken an interest in him. Although he was content he couldn't help but waver at the thousands of nominations that Todoroki and Bakugo had, he wasn't jealous, more or less just sorry for them but the rest of this class were more amazed. It creates an uproar and Aizawa roles his eyes before shushing the class.

"Regardless of having nominations or not you will all get the opportunity to decide on a workplace. The ones without nominations will be given a list of 40 agencies which have agreed to take any student. I will give you your lists before the lesson is over. You need to submit the agencies you have decided to work with by the end of the week... along with your hero names." Aizawa flinches as the class cheers, he had expected this but it doesn't mean he liked it. "Today you will be creating your hero names, but as I couldn't care less about the next hour the rest of the lesson will be led by-"

"-Moi!(me in French for those who don't know, and for those who pronounced it completely wrong cause I definitely did while reading this)" Midnight barges into the class and Aizawa grits his teeth, Shinso smiles knowing Midnight sensei was good friends with both Mic and Aizawa. The class cheer once again as Midnight basks in the attention. "The names you choose now could quite possibly stick with you for the rest of your hero career so I advice you to choose carefully."

"Did your teacher not tell you this when you were in school Aizawa Sensei?" Katsuki asks and the glare sent his way basically shows how Aizawa isn't even suprised at this point. They were always like this and even if the class didn't understand their relationship it sure was entertaining.

"I made the mistake of letting Mic choose my name, so here's a warning to you all. Don't let an idiotic loud blond choose you're hero name for you." This is directed at Bakugo, and it's obvious this is directed at Bakugo as mentioned student and teacher stare each other down, but Hitoshi can't help but notice that Denki does not make this connection and takes offence. It was cute.

"Ignore Shota he can be rather childish at times. But I agree please don't let your friend pic your name it could end badly. Either way I will be judging your names so there should be no problem. I'll give you all fifteen minutes now to decide."

"Cool, don't wake me up when you're done." Aizawa crawls into his obnoxious yellow sleeping bag and easily gets comfortable on the floor he lays. Stepping over him Midnight takes his place at the podium completely ignoring the yellow caterpillars presence.

Whiteboards are distributed as the classroom fills up with life. Way too much life in Hitoshi's opinion, it was starting to give him a headache, he kind of wanted an obnoxious yellow sleeping bag to curl up into now as well. He sits there dwelling on his name and in the corner of his eye he sees Bakugo furiously writing something down. Out of interest he leans over to see what he wrote and can't help but let out a laugh.

"What's so funny?" Bakugo asks glaring daggers at Hitoshi.

"Nothing." He replies, nothing except the fact that the name was exactly what Izu had predicted. Hitoshi had laughed non stop back then and he still felt like laughing now but held it all in. There was no way that name would get accepted but Izu had asked him for a favour for when this day was to come.

Hitoshi taps his pen on the table as he continues to think, Bakugo turns around to face him and with his own pen writes something down and of course it was non other than 'Brain Fucker'.

Hitoshi wipes it off and looks up to face the blond. "Did you not here Aizawa warning us not to let loud blonds decide our hero names."

"Oh fuck off." Bakugo retorts and goes to write something else down
It read 'brain washer' with a little doodle of a washing machine next to it.

"Are you done?"

Bakugo smirks. "Not even close."

He continues to write down stupid names like 'mind destroyer' and 'control freak', even having the audacity to write down 'megamind'. Hitoshi sighs as he wonders if Aizawa had to go through this same situation with Mic. As he considers why he's friends with this guy he doesn't notice a certain someone coming up behind him to write something on his whiteboard as well.

Looking up it's none other than Denki with a goofy grin on his face and a little blush creeping up his cheeks. Bakugo sits there a self satisfied smirk plastered on his face and Hitoshi kind of wishes he could slap it off. He looks onto his board to see what denki had wrote and saw that it read 'Imperio' with a little heart next to it. The heart was unnecessary and Hitoshi knew that but a blush grow on his face either way. At this point most of the class must be looking at them, the same exact smirk on all their faces.

"I hate the fact that this is a result of Bakugo's idea instead of mine." Hitoshi hears Mina say.

"How would someone with no dating experience even know where to begin." Bakugo retorts earning himself a very over dramatic gasp from Mina. Midnight stands off to the side just enjoying the scene unfolding.

Denki getting flustered now he refuses to meet Hitoshi's gaze. Pointing to the words on the whiteboard all he says is, "It's Latin for control."

"You know Latin?" Hitoshi asks in suprise, and he must have said it to suddenly as Denki starts to splutter over his words and producing a string of incomprehensible words, much to the classes entertainment. Eventually though he does manage to say, "I learnt Latin when I was younger." And that sure as hell shut the whole class up.

"You can learn a unused old language but you can't learn simple math formulas?" Bakugo - very rudely if I may add - points out.

"I said I learnt, not that I'm fluent. Latin actually sounded interesting unlike helping math find it's ex."

"Fair enough." Kirishima says to the side and a whole conversation is started. Hitoshi doesn't listen though as he carefully rubs out all of Bakugo's stupid idea's making sure not to touch Denki's, especially not the heart. Unknown to Hitoshi though Denki notices and a fond smile grows even larger on his face as he goes back to sit in his seat.

Amidst the chaos Midnight claps her hands and miraculously the whole class stops talking, it was impressive and be aware that Aizawa was 100% jealous. No matter how much he tries to sleep during class he never actually did in fear of his class somehow burning the school down. It is not a stupid fear in the least, we are all very aware of what these children are capable of and personally I don't think it would be a good idea to fall asleep in the midst of 1a either.

The class start to present there names one by one, quite a few being rejected by midnight yet somehow Aoyama got to keep 'I can't stop twinkling'. It wasn't a very surprising name for him but it was surprising that midnight allowed it, insulting according to Mina who couldn't keep 'Alien Queen'. The entire time Aizawa kept silent and unmoving until Bakugo came up and he sprung to life to make fun of his stupid name, 'King explosion murder' and how he's proof of why you shouldn't let loud blonds pick your names. That sure as hell pissed Bakugo off but much to the whole classes amusement so it was worth it.

Todoroki being who he is just went with his name and Bakugo being the person who he is somehow thought 'Lord explosion murder' was a better alternative to his original idea-he was once again unsurprisingly rejected. When it got to Hitoshi's turn he stood up infront of the class as he refused to meet any of their gazes, the shit eating grins were back and he very much did not appreciate that.

"What happened to no loud blonds picking your name?" Bakugo says aloud and Aizawa comes back to life once again just to piss him off.

"Kaminari has a black streak in his hair, he doesn't count. My comment was completely targeted at you... and a little at Aoyama but atleast his name was better than yours." The two glare each other down before Aizawa gets tired of it and goes back to sleep.

"Bakugo why don't you worry about your own name before worrying about others." Midnight says and Bakugo scowls before getting up to walk to the front of class once again.

He shows the class once again another one of the terrible ideas he came up with and Hitoshi not even bothering to look incase he bursts into uncontrollable laughter rubs it out and replaces is with 'DynaMight'. Izu had picked that name and asked Hitoshi to convince Bakugo to use it instead of what ever stupid idea he predicted he would come up with.

Before Bakugo can argue Midnight says, "Perfect. That's your hero name so go sit down."

"What!" Bakugo screeches but Midnight holds up a finger to his lips to silence him.

"No arguments its been decided."

Bakugo growls before furiously writing something on his bored then saying fine. "Great Explosion Murder God DynaMight!"

"You have serious issues." Aizawa comments from the floor. "Do you still go to therapy or do I need to book you some extra counselling sessions because I am seriously concerned." A string of curses much to terrible for you innocent readers to see leaves Bakugo's mouth as he goes to sit back down. Aizawa's expression borders on unimpressed and exhausted as he once again falls back asleep.

Iida being the last person yet to present his name stands up. If the class were to tell you they didn't notice his unsettled expression as he held up his whiteboard they would all be lying.

"Are you sure you just want to go with your name as well?" Midnight asks and Iida just nods as he walks back to his seat. Midnight sighs as she kicks Aizawa a little who stands up immediately to continue giving information on their work placements.

Feeling his phone vibrate Bakugo checks it to see a text from All Might asking to see him after class. He fires a quick, 'ok' before focusing back on the Hobo's words.

With a sigh Katsuki walks through the hallway, his hands in his pockets. He had spoken to All Might during the weekend and the hero had expressed his pride towards the boys victory, and thankfully seemed to harbour no hard feelings towards the boys behaviour during the award ceremony. Katsuki wasn't sure why the number 1 wanted to see him but he'd rather be having lunch right now and looking over his hundreds of proposals from hero's.

Arriving at the room he was told to go Katsuki knocks on the door. Barely a second later the door is swinging open and All Might in his buff form is basically vibrating with anxiety. Concern but mostly slight annoyance passes over Katsuki as he enters the room.

"Young Bakugo it's nice to see you again." All might greets barely able to give him a wobbly smile.

"Get to the point, why do you look like today is your last day to live."

All might lets out an awkward laugh as he signals for them to take a seat. "Well it feels like it might be." All Might chuckles, probably an attempt at a joke but Katsuki looked thoroughly unimpressed.

"Are you going to elaborate?"

"Ah yes." The hero says as he wipes the sweat off his hands. "Well you see, back when I was at UA there was this one hero named Gran Torino, he only taught for a year but he was my homeroom teacher... He was terrifying." All might shudders a little as Katsuki crosses his arms.

"Your homeroom teacher? What exactly does that have to do with me."

"Ah, he's aware about OFA and he put in a nomination for you."

"Oh so you told him that you gave me your quirk?"

"Ah I think he kind of just figured it out. After the sports festival he had called me to ask about OFA. He caught me off guard and I ended up getting scolded and I still don't really know why." All might kind of just wilts in his chair, it was almost comical considering he's the symbol of peace and an inspiration to all. "Anyway, I know you have a lot of nominations and I'm not forcing you to do anything I did tell him that you most likely wouldn't go, I got scolded even more for that, something about kids these days being disrespectful. I still don't know if he meant me or you but forget that, just do what you want."

"I'll consider it." Katsuki says stretching a little in his chair. "I still have to look through all my nominations though so I'm not sure."

"That's fine if you refuse he's just going to chew my ear off again over the phone, no big deal." A smile is plastered on All Might's face but it's obvious to tell he very much was not fine. Katsuki couldn't really care less though if he got chewed out by his previous homeroom teacher. He gets chewed out by Aizawa all the time yet he lives.

But for how much longer... (insert suspenseful music)
I'm kidding no one is dying, or maybe I might just kill every character off on a whim, it's possible.
It's also highly unlikely since I'm attached to all the characters now. So no death I guess, unfortunately.😒
Actually some death, not a lot of death but I should probably stop now before I spoil my own story.

Just like it always is, that's how it was meant to be. Instead Izuku was dragging himself over to Aizawa's. Instead of a smile on his face a deep frown holding much more secrets than it seems replaced it. He couldn't get the image out of his head, the image of that poor child, the child he could of saved, the child that died because of him.

A person dying infront of him has always been normal, he's even seen a few children die, it broke his heart still but it was never compared to this. Never in his 16 years of life had he allowed a child to die while he was out stopping trafficking. Never in his 16 years of life had any kidnappers been willing to sacrifice their so called merchandise. So why now?

He knew the answer. It was obvious, what made it even worse was when he found the child's file. The croocked smile of the little girl so much reminded him of himself. Back when no one took him seriously, when he was always pitied, when he was seen as bellow even dirt. Back when his hopes of being a hero were smashed into a million tiny pieces.

Back when he found out he was quirkless.

He guessed it was the same for every quirkless child out there, the dreams manifested in them at birth ending up as nothing more than something to be used against them in the war zone known as the playground. But atleast then they were still alive, fighting against the injustice known as quirks.

But of course at the end of the day it was the quirkless who always got the short end of the stick. Of course it was the quirkless which were the first to be sacrificed. Of course they could never even get the proper death that they deserved, because they're quirkless. The quirkless aren't treated fairly, the quirkless have life difficult for no reason other than the fact that they have no quirk.

Izuku doesn't even realise when tears start falling down his face as he takes the spare key hidden in a secret compartment by the front door and walks inside the house. He goes to collapse on the couch, closing his eyes and listening to the silence trying to forget about everything and anything. But it was hard, he just couldn't get the image of the terrified child out of his head as her eyes went lifeless and her face went pale. A girl once filled with so much emotion slumped to the ground as a bullet passed straight through her heart. All to get to Izuku.

He stares up at the ceiling, just barely able to reach his phone to check the time. He had five hours left till Aizawa and the others came home, that was five hours for him to forget and move on with his life. But was moving on really right, was ignoring all the lives ended at his hands okay. A final tear runs down his face.

This had to be Karma.

All sitting comfortably in Aizawa's living room, Aizawa's problem children are left to their own devices as he does who knows what wherever he is - probably doing schoolwork somewhere while drinking way too much coffee and grumbling about children (specifically his three problem children but they ignore that factor).

With both Toshi and Kacchan doing homework Izuku is left sitting on the couch scrolling through his phone but unknown to the two of them he's actually quite distracted. He was worried about Iida, that moment had stuck with him and he couldn't get it out of his head. He knew someone needed to watch him closely cause there was no doubt he's planning on avenging his brother. Obviously the best person to watch him was one of his classmates, or just anyone but him so he wouldn't get shouted at by the teen again for interfering into his business. Personally Izuku thinks he gave him good advice and that he should be thankful but to each there own you know.

"Have either of you decided your placements yet?" Izuku asks, a smile laced with curiosity and deception on his face. Of course not obvious deception, then they would both get suspicious and think he's up to something, which he is but them knowing that would defy the whole point.

Toshi is the first to look up and answer. "Well it's not like I got many votes and then two were from Mic and Aizawa which might be favouritism but I'm not complaining."

Kacchan snorts. "Definitely favouritism." He states looking amused.

"Kacchan I'm pretty sure I saw their agencies also listed in your many offers, so either that's also favouritism which I highly doubt so forget that." He turns to Toshi. "So have you decided, you also get another list of people that wouldn't mind having you right? I saw that there's one in Hosu."

Izuku smiles, it's a mischievous smile that hides his real goal which was to get information and somehow get one of them to agree to do a placement in Hosu. He didn't expect a positive outcome but it was better to atleast try if anything.

"I decided to go with Aizawa." Toshi says and immediately all hope of getting one of them to work in Hosu went down the drain. Not completely down the drain but may as well be completely, the tub was now barely filled and there isn't even enough water for a goldfish. That is how little Izuku had expected anything from his boyfriend, infact he was just being nice when saying he wanted to try and convince one of them, in reality it was just Toshi. But Toshi had already decided, and so quickly at that so now how was Izuku meant to convince his friend that his own father's agency is a terrible place to be and to instead work in a no good agency in Hosu.

Thats right, he wasn't. His hopes are already so shattered that they can never be salvaged, the fragments may as well have been grinded into dust leaving a pile of residue to symbolise his hope in Kacchan. Useless.
And he may be being way to dramatic right now but that is because me the author is getting carried away with whatever this is instead of getting to the point, the point which is unclear to even me as I'm making this up as I go.

Anyways, returning from his decent above the fourth wall Izuku plasters a smile back onto his face hiding the pile of dust which now lies wherever you keep your hopes and dreams and so on. "You want to go with Aizawa, but don't you always train with him? It'll be the same as always."

"Not essentially." Toshi replies, tapping his pen against his lip. "I'll also be with Mic for half the time as well. Aizawa is meant to show me how underground heroes work while Mic shows me about heroes in the spotlight." (This has totally nothing to do with anything but why did I only now realise that Aizawa is getting called by his actual name while Mic is just Mic, I mean Yamada just sounds so wrong to me, present Mic will always be Mic to me lol)

Izuku sighs not knowing what to say to that so he decides to atleast try and put together at this point what is practically dust, back together and put some hope into his boyfriend.

"Kacchan what about you?"

"I've got thousands of nominations how on earth would I have already gone through them."

"So you haven't decided yet?" Izuku perks up and then is crushed by his dreams once again when his boyfriend says, "I have decided, I just haven't gone through the whole list." Izuku scowls at the ground, at this point he didn't really care but he asks anyway, "Where did you decide on?"

"Best Jeanist's agency." There was never any hope of Kacchan agreeing in the first place, Izuku thinks. "But then there's also this other retired hero who apparently used to be All Might's homeroom teacher who sent me a request but I think I'll stick with the number 4."

"All Might's homeroom teacher?" Toshi asks looking up from the work he wasn't even actually doing, just looking at it as if it personally insulted him.

"Gran Torino was his name but I've never heard of him before."

"So you can remember his name but not mine?"

"Are we really fucking going back to this!"

Izuku decides to tune the two out as he'd rather think of a solution to his Iida problem. He sighs, the two dumbasses next to him were making it really hard to concentrate though.

"What did you do at school today." Izuku asks, he just said anything that would stop the arguing, it's giving him a headache.

"What are you, my mum?" Kacchan retorts and Izuku regrets asking them anything instead of just getting up and leaving.

"Do you actually really care about what we did?" Toshi asks and Izuku has never loved him more than he has in this moment.

"I really don't." He admits and for some reason Toshi takes that as a sign to proceed with explaining his entire day to him. Izuku takes back his love.

Izuku tunes Toshi out, he never realised he could talk so much. He was in a surprisingly good mood, and maybe if Izuku was in a good mood he would have listened but he isn't so he doesn't. Kacchan joined in here and there, probably just to piss Izuku off. Unfortunately tuning people out is surprisingly hard so he ends up somehow listening to Toshi's never ending story.

"It was kind of funny actually." Is the first thing Izuku hears and he has no idea what's even going on. "Todoroki walked up to Bakugo and Bakugo being the person that he is thought he was trying to start a fight." So he was talking about Todoroki, Izuku thinks and decides it might actually be worth listening.

Kacchan growls. "He walked up to me with his usual stupid look on his face why wouldn't I think he would be looking for a fight."

Toshi just scoffs as he crosses his arms. "I don't know maybe because everyone isn't a carbon copy of you."

Despite Izuku's mood a laugh somehow escapes from him. "Imagine a world where everyone was Kacchan. It would be pure chaos." Just the thought of it made Izuku completely burst out into laughter, he would have preferred it if he could have been left alone with the funny image in his head but then Kacchan had to go and shout,

"That's not funny idiot!" And then Toshi just had to go and say,

"It really isn't, that would be a nightmare. Seeing that obnoxious, blond haired, murder loving freak every where you go." Toshi shivers, "The world would be blown up in an instant."

"Fuck you asshole, I'm not a murder loving freak!"

"Yeah sure you aren't, yet you scream DIE every chance you get." Izuku sighs, he didn't mean to start another stupid argument but it always ended up like that with these two.

"Ok idiots, back to Todoroki."

"Oh yeah." Turning to face Izuku, Toshi holds up his hand to shush Kacchan, and no joke Kacchan looked completely ready to rip Toshi's hand straight off. "Basically Todoroki walked up to Bakugo and then Bakugo was all like-" He clears his throat preparing to imitate Kacchan as best as he can, "-what do you want asshole, want a rematch, huh?"

Izuku had to admit it was a very good impression, Kacchan obviously didn't think so though. "And then Todoroki looked him dead in the eye and said, 'I'm good'. Then Bakugo went absolutely ballistic, it wasn't much of a suprise it seemed like Todoroki had expected that to happen. He completely ignored Bakugo and came up to me and apologised for the whole sports festival thing, he apologised to Sero too but since Bakugo was still shouting like he usually does he walked up to him, I thought he was going to apologise to him too but instead he told him to be quite. Obviously that got Bakugo pissed, what got him even more pissed was the little flames Todoroki let of then he said, I've decided to start using my fire, and then walked off."

In all honesty Izuku lost Toshi a long time ago, all he heard was apologised, Bakugo and fire. Those three words could mean anything but since he at no time heard the word death or anything of the sort he decides to let it go.

And of course another argument was started between Toshi and Kacchan, nothing out of the ordinary. Izuku sighs and says, "fuck this I'm going to sleep." He infact does not go to sleep, instead he imagines a suitable way to end this chapter cuz my brain ain't braining as seen by the monstrosity of dialogue I wrote above which after rereading does not seem that bad but I was completely out of it while writing it. The end.

Chapter End Notes

I have this weird habit of just typing/writing out my thoughts in the middle of something, and it's weird but I decided to leave them in here anyway. So yh, quite a lot of breaking the fourth wall, I should learn to stop voicing out my thoughts though, especially when writing essays at school.

Anyway thank you all for reading 💜 💙

Chapter 36

No wearing your hero costumes in public unless instructed too. If you loose them, then may God help you find a shit ton of money lying on the pavement on your way back to school. Mind your manners, you're representing the school, if any hero's talk bad about you or you cause them trouble expect detentions for a week when you're back. If something bad happens I gave you an emergency number if it's not an emergency don't call it. I'd rather not hear any of your voices when it's not necessary. If you all understand then go on to wherever you need to go." Once Aizawa is done talking the class doesn't even hesitate before they're making their way to their respective platforms and bidding their fairwells.

Grunting in reply to the extras that say goodbye to him Katsuki waits for them all to be out of sight, making sure the dumbasses are all going to their correct platforms before he even makes an attempt to move (he out of all people should know that they are complete idiots so this was very much necessary.) Once they're all gone Katsuki looks to see Shinso who's looking dejected just lingering around Aizawa. With plenty of time until his train arrives he goes over to the freak to ask what's wrong - not because he cares mind you, he couldn't give a single fuck when it came to others problems. That's what he tells himself anyway yet he's now playing therapist listening to Brain fuckers concerns about glasses.

See when it came to glasses he really did not care in the slightest about what he does but everyone else cared, they all cared a little too much. Katsuki did feel bad for glasses and the whole stain incident, he could tell the class prez was going through things but that was not his business or concern. People might see him as the bad guy for thinking that but a person can't help what they feel, and right now he felt nothing. Even if he felt something he knew it would be better to feel nothing because only someone who felt nothing could speak some sense into his idiotic, righteous head - not that Katsuki was going to do that. Like he said he felt nothing and he told the brain freak just as much. Glasses' actions are his own and the class should let him get over whatever he's going through on his own.

Shinso did not look satisfied with this answer but like has been said, Katsuki couldn't give a single fuck. Maybe he would have cared a lot more if anyone could have predicted what was to come in the near future. Please note that this moment will come to haunt Katsuki for quite a while when he realises he had the power to change what will end up happening but instead didn't give a fuck.

Aizawa waiting to the side looking displeased (the only reason he had even waited for their conversation to end in the first place being 1) Shinso was his son, and 2) despite how much he denys it he also has a soft spot for Katsuki) sends a glare Katsuki's way basically telling him to fuck off and get on his train.

Katsuki somehow understanding the message waves brain fucker goodbye and with a grunt and his hero costume in hand makes his way to the platform leading straight to Tokyo.

Izuku hums as he looks out the train window, on his way to Hosu. He had hoped that either Toshi or Kacchan would have accepted his suggestion to find a placement in Hosu - he placed his hope more in Toshi than Kacchan, he knew his boyfriend would just do what he wants, and going to Hosu isn't something that he would want. Anyway since that plan had failed he had decided to just go himself, he was still worried about Iida even though he knew it wasn't his business but he couldn't help it. Protecting people is what he does and he didn't want one of his boyfriend's classmates/ Toshi's friend to get himself in trouble.

He was planning on just shadowing him for the week, maybe investigating into any child trafficking near by. The cases have decreased but the situations are only getting worse, everything about that day haunted him but that isn't the focus of today's chapter. If you have yet to guess the focus is Iida, pristine, righteous Iida. Surprisingly scary and murderous Iida as well, that killing intent was no joke (and I would love to follow that up with so forgive me for making a joke about it but in reality there was no joke so it wouldn't work)

The killing intent that radiated off Iida was enough to rival most villians Izuku has encountered. That sort of aura is not one you would want to have, Izuku should know since he ended up killing quite a lot of people at the age of just 6. So Izuku also knows once you have killed someone there's no going back, infact it gets easier, you're world will spiral down into chaos unless you embrace the fact that you're a murderer or kill yourself and repent. Izuku didn't want any of that for Iida, pristine and righteous Iida. Scary and murderous Iida, complex and confusing Iida.

A lot of people harbour hate but not enough for it to turn into such a strong killing intent, therefore the words complex and confusing Iida. Did more happen then just his brother becoming paralysed, did he really harbour such a strong love for his brother which in turn made him harbour such a strong killing intent. The moment scares Izuku, how much love did he harbour in his heart, who knew people were capable of such strong love despite having all they could ever want. Love was not a foreign feeling to Izuku, he loved his friends and boyfriend, even to the extent he would kill for all of them. But this was different. When you're surrounded by all the things you need, shelter, warmth, friends and family, you just naturally take your love for granted, you will hurt but then you will move on.

So was Izuku's way if thinking wrong, or was Iida just different?

"Usually this agency doesn't see all that much action most of the time but due to- er... recent events, things have become a lot more hectic."

Tenya just simply nods as the hero rambles on. He had no idea what he was saying and to be honest he had no intention of finding out. He had one goal and one goal only and he admits its not really a pretty one, but he doesn't care. Stain the hero killer, just the very name left a bitter taste on his tongue, he despised him with his whole being. This was now more than just him and his brother, the criminal has been free for way too long.

Even if his goal is out of his reach even if it's stupid he couldn't allow the hero killer to roam free for any longer. He wouldn't let him get away with this.

The almost harmonic sound of cups being placed on a shelf rings through the bar, key word, almost. It was starting to get annoying now. Tomura sits quietly on a stool, waiting, thinking. Things are going down hill, what was meant to be his debut, his call to the world was ruined by a tiny green freak. Now the hero killer has struck again, despite him spending so much time out of the limelight, all eyes are on him. This was bad, this isn't what Tomura wanted but it was an opportunity. This was a chance to finally put things back on track and get rid of everything he hated once and for all. Karma had ruined his previous plan but not this time. He's sitting, waiting, thinking, ready.

All that's left now is destruction, not even a spec of dust will be left once he's done. If the hero killer currently had all the glory he would just take it from him, tell the whole world that he is here and that All Might is leaving, this time he wouldn't allow anyone to stand in the way of his plans. He will always come out on top as long as he had sensei and soon the world would learn that too.

"Kurogiri!" He shouts and almost immediately the mist man is infront of him.

"Yes Shigiraki Tomura." He answers, a wide grin spreads across Tomura's face, one of absolute confidence in himself and his plans.

"Go look for the hero killer for me and make sure you bring him back here." Just as suddenly as the mist man had appeared he disappeared, cups left abandoned on the table. Having a feeling the days to come where about to be eventful Tomura smiles.

The world won't know what hit them.

Toshinori takes a deep breath as he tries to calm his nerves (he is very much failing if the vibrating chair caused by his constant shaking is anything to go by). The previously annoying ticking of the clock in the room is drowned out by Toshinori's thoughts, this was unexpected, something he had hoped to never hear.

All for one is very much alive.

How this was possible, whether due to disbelief or the fact that he was a complete moron, Toshinori still didn't understand so for the third time already he asks for Tsukauchi to explain everything again.

With a sigh the detective leans closer to the hero in his chair. This information was very worrying he had to admit but if the hero asked one more time he was going to scream so he made sure that this time he'd engrave it into that stupid excuse of a brain of his.

"The Nomu, that big ugly beast thing that pummeled you and Aizawa to a pulp, we tried to get it to speak but it's completely unresponsive." Tsukauchi stops, giving Toshinori time to process all that information and to fully accept it. "We did a DNA test and we found that it's just some thug with minor charges, atleast it was just some thug. We discovered that it has multiple different people's DNA, which even an idiot like you should know is not normal."

Toshinori sucks in a breath as he pushes back his hair. The detective continues. "To make this simple, it's basically a modified human made to handle the burden of multiple quirks as a result of this modification it's brain activity seems to have dropped significantly."

"So what you're trying to say is..."

"Yes, the presence of multiple quirks in the Nomu is highly unlikely to have been gained through the DNA modification, if that's the case there's only one option left."

"All for One." Toshinori gulps wanting to reject this reality once again, just saying his very name left a bitter aftertaste on his mouth. AFO the guy he had thought was dead for all these years, who he thought had died by his hand was very much alive.
Toshinori feared for the future.

Tenya walks the streets with Manual, nothing but murder and his so called justice on his mind. Little did he know someone was tailing him, like his guardian angel. And maybe if he knew that, Tenya would realise what an absolute ass he's being cause his guardian angel definitely didn't deserve this shit (maybe he did, just a little).

"Sorry that we're patrolling again." Tenya turns towards the hero currently walking infront of him.

"It's fine." He replies. "It's better this way even." At that moment the hero infront of him and the hidden angels suspicions were conformed. Manual stops walking and looks over to Tenya.

Bluntly he says. "Are you going after the hero killer?"

Tenya goes rigid and fumbles over himself looking for something to say. What had given it away(basically everything but he definitely didn't know that).

"Why else would you come to my agency, I'm pretty sure there are many other agencies better than mine you could have gone too. So I thought it over and that was the conclusion I came to. Forgive my rudeness if I'm wrong, and don't get me wrong I'm happy that you're here but please stop if you're looking to settle a personal grudge." Tenya just stands there at a complete loss, he didn't know what to say. Thankfully the hero kept talking.

"We hero's don't have the authority to go around arresting however we please. There's a fine line between heroism and vigilanteism and I don't want you to breach it. I'm saying all of this out of my concern for you, I'm not in anyway condoning the hero killers actions if that is what it looks like. I'm just warning you to stay out of trouble."

Tenya nods, his hand shaking by his side. He lets out a mere, "Thank you," and the hero acknowledges it before beginning to walk again.

This however did not mean in anyway that Iida had accepted the hero's words. He hated to lie to the hero but he simply could not abandon this mission, which will later be to the displeasure of many other people. He had figured it out, the hero killers usual pattern that is, and maybe the hero's had figured it out too but Tenya knew without a doubt he'd get to to him first. To stain, the murderer, to stain, the hero killer with the blood of several different hero's stained on his hand. Iida had to admit it was a very fitting name, didn't mean he hated it any less.

In every place the hero killer has shown up he always killed atleast four hero's meaning it's almost certain that the hero killer will appear once again in Hosu. Tenya didn't know his motives or why he made his movements so obvious but Tenya was thankful for it. It wass all the more reason for him to dispose of scum like that.

Far off into the distance a frown settles onto a certain green haired boys face. He'd have to get to the hero killer before the young hero ever could. Seeping back into the darkness Tenya is left never knowing he was being followed in the first place.

Tomura sits by the bar table as he looks up at the hero killer who stands there looking displeased.

Glaring down at him the anti-hero starts to speak. "There were rumours about UA getting raided by villians, if I were to believe your story I guess the rumours would be true."

A smirk crosses Tomura's face hidden behind the hand which covers it, yet an evil glint is evident in his eyes. "Whether you decide to believe it or not it's the truth, you can't change that fact unfortunately."

A snarl escapes the hero killers lips. "So you think you can add me to your little gang huh. I don't know what you think you can achieve but let me tell you now your delusional."

"How can you be so sure, you don't even know what we're after."

"Tell me then. What are your goals?"

"My goals?" Tomura repeats. "Well they're really quite simple. First of all I want to get rid of All Might, the pillar that holds this world up. I want to destroy everything starting from it's foundation. Then after that I'm going to destroy all the things I hate, starting with that annoying brat Karma."

At this the hero killer sucks in a breath, the villians second goal being much more surprising than the first. The hero killer still remembers Karma very well, the kid barely looked twelve but inserted so much fear into him that no one would believe him if he told anyone. (No one would believe him except the readers of course since we are omniscient and know stuff that even the characters don't.)

"It seems like I have wasted my time here so I would appreciate it if you let me leave. Our goals do not align, in fact you're the type of person I despise the most."

"Oh really."

"I do not want to be apart of your childish temper tantrum, if everyone went around and destroyed everything they hated there would be nothing left in the world-"

Off to the side near the screen in the corner Kurogiri whispers. "Sensei should I let this continue?"

The monitor comes to life. "This is exactly what we want. Our goal is to install as much hate in Tomura as we can and push him onto the right path, this is just one step to independence for him, any outcome will prove beneficial."

Kurogiri just nods knowing sensei would see any dangers from the cameras. What no one saw though was the knife flying through the room at high speed aiming straight for the mist man. The knife peirces through his not so misty arm and in an instant the hero killer dashes for it, licking it before mist man can even react.

Kurogiri falls to the ground and barely a second later the Hero killer is aiming for Tomura. Tomura stretches his hand out in defence yet to his suprise the hero killer ends up behind him. His world flips upside down and now he finds himself on the floor, two swords peircing his skin. He lets out a short cry.

The pain Tomura felt was indescribable yet his feelings of anger where too overwhelming to even focus on the pain, it was nothing but a nuisance. On the ground, blades wedged in both shoulders he glares the hero killer down as he stands over him, a stupid snarl on his face. What did that bastard even have to be angry for.

Tomura scoffs before ordering the hero killer to get off him but it wasn't like he had much power in this situation. The hero killer just stays in the same position twisting the knife a little and Tomura's arm spikes with pain. The hero killer starts spouting some stupid bullshit but of course Tomura wasn't listening. It got to the point where his anger kept bubbling and now threatening to completely spill over. Tomura doesn't know what the Hero killer had said to lead up to this but all of a sudden one of the blades is being pulled out of his shoulder and now swinging straight down for his neck.

The blade swings down straight for his neck yet his skin stays unpeirced. Instead thousands of tiny pieces of debri fall to the ground as Tomura grabs the sword. A look of shock crosses the hero killers face, it was obvious he wasn't expecting that, he wasn't expecting the giant swing of Tomura's hand either aiming straight for his face. Stain moves away just in time, he may have saved his own life in that moment but he also created an enemy that wouldn't stop until he saw his downfall.

Tomura stands up clenching his shoulders, it felt like they were on fire a pain that he hated but it fueled his anger, his rage and his bloodlust. He was done with this self righteous anti hero who thought he was better than him just because he had a more honorable cause.

"Forget this." He snarls, nothing but hatred in his head. "I hate you, I don't need you so die!"

Despite the pain Tomura runs up to the hero killer hands outstretched and growing just inches away from the ex-vigilante, he was so close, just a little more and he would have hit his target. He wanted to feel the satisfaction and rush of emotions that came about when he watched his victims crumble to the ground in front of him, instead his arm was sent through one of Kurogiri's warpgates and now several meters away from the hero killer. It was a given that Tomura was pissed off however he couldn't say a word to Kurogiri as a warpgate dangerously close to Tomura's abdomen redirects a knife.

Pulling his arm out of the warpgate Tomura sighs, calmed down considerably. "Kurogiri send him back I don't want him anymore."

"Shigiraki Tomura, are you sure?"

You heard me idiot send him back!"

The hero killer pulls his knife out the gate of mist. "This has truly been a waste of time, send me back to Hosu."

Finally able to move again Kurogiri opens up a warpgate leading to Hosu, the hero killer walks through without a complaint and soon enough he's fully engulfed by the purple mist. The screen off to the side of the room flickers to life and Aunty Inko's annoying voice rings through the speaker.

"Tomura are you okay?" She asks with a concern he wasn't sure if she actually meant.

"No I am not okay, I have two fucking holes in my shoulders!" He screams, pissed off.

"It will heal." This time Sensei's voice rings through and instantly the previous stress and anger Tomura felt dissipates. "Your wounds might heal however your anger shouldn't settle, so tell me Tomura what are you going to do now."

A vile smile spreads across Tomura's face. "How many Nomus do you have right now sensei?"

"Quite a few, why?"

"I have a plan so please give me as many as you can."

A sense of intrigue resonates in Sensei's voice as he starts to speak. "I'll give you three, make the most of them."

"Are you sure?" Auntie asks and Tomura has never wanted the hag to shut up more than now.

" I have no doubt that I am making the right decision, Tomura I look forward to the outcomes of what's to come."

"I won't disappoint you sensei."

Hosu Attack

It's dark.
Noiseless, just pain. Suffering. Regret.
This wasn't what he wanted, this wasn't his intention. Or maybe it was, maybe everything turned out exactly as it was meant to be.

He closes his eyes accepting his fate. There's nothing he can do.

With a sigh on his lips Izuku collapses atop the roof and looks up to the sky. At this point it would just be easier to follow Iida instead of looking for the hero killer himself, so far there was absolutely no sign of him, he wasn't even sure if he was still in Hosu.

But that didn't make sense, none of this made sense. Anyone with any basic knowledge of the hero killer would realise that the he always attacked the same area more than once before moving on. If that's the case then how has he almost completely disappeared off the face of the earth in basically no time at all. Something wasn't adding up and little to Izuku's knowledge i can confirm that things were about start adding up quicker than expected. In approximately five minutes.

Off in the distance Izuku hears a crash and his attention is immediately brought to the smoke coming from a building. In no time at all he's also hearing screams and fires are being started all around the city. He gets up onto his feet, he had no idea what was going on but right now his top priority was Iida, he had to find him.

Eyes wide Tenya looks around in dismay. This couldn't be the hero killers doing, or could it be? He clenches his fist trying to rack his brain for any info to find where the hero killer would most likely be. Whether this was Stains doing or not this was an opportunity and Tenya doubted he wouldn't take it.

"Tenya, stay by me! We'll have to make a run for it so I can keep you safe!" Manual calls out but it's already too late, Tenya is already gone and patrolling through the alleyways in search for the one who ruined his brothers life.

Tenya didn't know what was going on, he didn't care either, he had one goal and one goal only and at this point he was certain he knew where to find him. And little did he know how much a collision with the hero killer would cost not just him but also the people around him. Little did he know how much the people around him really cared about him, how stupid he was being, everything he was risking and what others would risk for him. But none of that mattered as he stood face to face infront of the hero killer, the man seething with anger for being interrupted.

The hero killer glares, a sneer on his face. "A child playing hero? Begone this isn't a place for you to be."

With a clenched fist and a glare which could rival even the worst of villians Iida yells out. "You are the hero killer aren't you! With that blood red cape and your multiple blades, you must be. I didn't expect to find you so soon."

In almost an instant it's like the hero killers whole aura changes, he was no longer showing mercy and saw Tenya as nothing but an enemy. "I see, so you have come for revenge." He swings his sword which now rests just infront of Tenya's throat. "Just know that if the situation calls for it even a child will become my enemy, if you do not heed my warnings I will not show mercy."

"So I'm not even worthy enough to become a target?" Iida growls. "Well in that case I am the brother of a hero you cut down, the brother of one of the finest hero's. He may not be able to get to you in his condition so I have come to avenge him in his stead, my name is Ingenium! And don't you dare forget it!"

The hero killers glare deepens. "Is that so? Then die."

It was at this moment Tenya realised he was outmatched but yet the anger still wouldn't fade. He didn't even get a moment to blink as his helmet was flinged off his head and he was stabbed in the arm causing him to collapse onto the floor unable to move a muscle. Despite how he struggled his body refused to listen to him, he tried and tried, but tried as he will it was futile. The pain coming from the stab wound definitely didn't help either, it hurt more than anything he's felt before. But the words which came out of the hero killers mouth hurt even more.

"Weak, just like your brother." He drawls, his voice sending chills up his spine. "It's no suprise, you're both fakes. Be thankful, the only reason he is still alive is to feed rumours but unfortunately for you I can not let you live, you will die here."

"H-how dare you!" Iida yells, completely given up on restraining his anger. "He was a splendid hero, the best of the best, he fuelled my dream but now he can no longer fulfil his! He has saved so many people and now that will no longer be possible, because of YOU! If you can not be taken down by his hands then I'll kill you myself!"

"You sure can talk can't you. What dream did he fuel, the one of a murderer because I sure as hell can't see a hero." The hero killer lowers himself to Tenya's level just slight hovering above his head. "If you're such a great hero, if you're brother fuelled such a great dream then why don't you save him before you even think of killing me."

"Wha-" He sees it, he sees it and it makes him feel horrible. He saw the hero killers original target laying limp against the wall barely breathing. He realised how he had just put his stupid revenge before saving someone dying right infront of him. But he couldn't let these feelings go, he couldn't turn back now, it was too late.

"It's too late to regret your actions now." The hero killer snarls a manic look in his eyes. "There is no redemption for you so you must die. His sword goes swinging through the air too quickly for Iida to peice together his emotions but slow enough for him to realise exactly what was happening. He's about to die.

———

It's dark.
Noiseless, just pain. Suffering. Regret.

But then there's a light, it's green? There's a shout, a confrontation? Then there's movement, noise, light, suffering.

Regret?

"Idiot open your eye's!" Tenya's eyes startle open. He was alive, breathing, still suffering. He looks up, as much as he can anyway.

He sees green.

Almost like an angel Izuku jumps down from above as he kicks away the sword swinging down towards the student laying, eyes clossed and unmoving on the ground. Regaining his balance on the floor he lets out a sigh of relief, thankful that he wasn't even a second late. He glares at the hero killer before easily picking Iida up and moving him further away making sure to keep the hero killer in his line of sight the whole time.

Once a suitable distance away, as suitable a distance you can be in a alleyway (which would still mean you're in the way and likely of getting hit no matter where you are) Izuku smiles. "Long time no see." The hero killer stands there, too stunned to speak, or maybe it was fear. Either way he didn't move. "Open your eye's idiot." Izuku slowly shakes Iida who's lying on the floor, he opens his eyes and is consumed by shock as he looks into emerald green eyes.

"What are you doing here?"

"Here to save you of course." Iida's eyes trail to the phone hidden behind Izuku's back as he sends his location to all his contacts. A smile spreads on the boys face as he looks directly at the Hero killer, no fear perceivable. The anti hero almost seems to bite his tongue at Izuku's next words.

"I guess now I know the effects of your quirk. Glad we've cleared that up."

"That's right. You weren't able to figure that out last time were you. It's been quite a while since then, almost a year."

Izuku smiles not at all innocent or genuine but hiding a not so subtle malice towards Stain. "And if only I had decided to catch you that year ago, then I wouldn't be in this situation right now."

"If you had caught me all those years ago then you wouldn't know the information I'm about to give you."

"H-how do you know the Hero killer." Stain sends a spiteful glare Iida's way as soon as he opens his mouth.

"You have no place in this conversation so continue lay on the ground until I am able to cut you down."

"That's not going to happen Stain." Izuku gets into a fighting position.

The hero killer grits his teeth holding his hands out almost in surrender. "Did you not hear me, I said I have valuable information for you."

"Then why don't you start talking instead of threatening to cut him down." Izuku snaps. From the corner of his eye Izuku sees the absolutely horrified look in Iida's eyes at Izuku's courage.

"Are you aware of Shigiraki?"

"What about him."

"I'm unsure of your relationship with him but just know he is targeting you. As of now killing you is one of his main goals."

"That's it? That's the valuable information?"

"Your life is at stake, is that not valuable enough for you?"

Izuku laughs. "Good point."

"What on earth is going on! Who on earth are you!" Iida cries out from the ground and Izuku looks down for a split second. He may have an upper hand against the Hero killer but that doesn't mean he was to be feared any less. There was no doubt he couldn't get both Iida and the other hero away safely without some help.

"Why on earth are you still on the ground. What's your blood type?"

"My blood type?"

Just answer the question asshole, I'm only in this situation because of you."

"I never asked you to come here! I told you to mind your own business did I not, I don't even know you!"

"I'm sorry, next time you do something so incredibly stupid then I'll leave you to die."

"Please do. You're a complete stranger to me so ke- Watch out!"

In a split second a sword is flying into Izuku's field of vision. He steps back leaving Iida exposed. Gritting his teeth he activates his quirk instantly prepared for the fight. Another swing, he dodges again. He lunges towards the hero killer aiming for his abdomen but he blocks.

"Do you think you're the only one who gained valuable insight all that time ago. You're fighting style has barely changed."

The hero killer lunges forward once again. Izuku dodges being pushed completely away from Iida yet he doesn't relent. Activating his nail quirk he swipes at the hero killer who dodges effortlessly and grabs his arm. The hero killer raises his blade but Izuku pulls away determined not to get cut. Keeping the battle as far away from Iida and the unconscious hero as he can Izuku continues to let the hero killer push him back. Putting himself in a risky position like this was better than others getting hurt.

Preoccupied with dodging another attack Izuku doesn't even realise when the Hero killer is above him, blade aiming straight down. He dodges but that must have been what the hero killer was hoping for as somehow before he even notices the anti hero cuts Izuku's cheek as blood starts to seep out. Izuku lunges for Stain before he can lick the blade and flings it as far away as he can. Expecting the hero killer to lunge after it Izuku doesn't expect the chill that runs down his spine as he feel the hero killers tounge, almost like sand paper, grazing his cheek. He collapses. It was against his will yet no matter how much he tries to move he's stuck to the ground.

Izuku grits his teeth as Stain walks up to Iida triumphantly getting another sword out. He starts speaking his usual crap but Izuku can't hear him over the sound of his mind screaming at his body to move, to get up, to not just lie there helplessly as Iida dies. Running out of options Izuku starts to scream all sorts of insults, anything as long as the hero killer stops for even a second but to no avail. He completely ignores him as he continues to make his way to Iida nice and slow knowing that there's nothing to get in his way anymore. But then something blocks him, Izuku feels a blast of cold air as he looks on in relief.

Ice. Then fire.

Izuku had never been more happy to see Shoto as he is right now.

"Why do you all keep appearing one after the other." The hero killer snarls dangerously as he retreats from the wall of fire and ice that threatens him.

Izuku feels the slight chill as Shoto goes up to him.

"Next time Deku send a little more information in your texts."

"Ha, hopefully there is no next time."

——

This was hell.

Katsuki hated every single fucking second of this. Why did he insist on going to the number 3's agency, he should have just gone to the retired hero instead. He sighs, unfortunately it was too late for regrets. That doesn't mean he was going to stop complaining though.

Why was the first things said to him by Best Jeanist that he didn't like him. Why was he given a 'makeover' without his consent. Why did he need to be 'reformed' as the hero had put it. His hair had lost it's fucking poof! But forget about that, why right now was he in fucking skinny jeans!

Katsuki sinks into the closet chair as he watches the hero's sidekicks do what ever sidekicks do. For some reason they looked more busy and tense today but Katsuki hadn't thought anything of it. He wishes he had thought more of it as his phone rings in his pocket and its none other than the hag.

He picks up the phone and is met with a voice he wasn't expecting.

"K-katsuki." His mum starts. "Have you seen the news."

"The news?" Katsuki replies as he barges into Best Jeanist's office much to the hero's displeasure. It was the closest room with a TV so he couldn't blame him.

Without a moments hesitation Katsuki switches on the TV and his heart drops. "This..."

"D-doesn't that look a lot like I-izuku to you?" She stutters but Katsuki can't muster up the courage to say a word or even move.

That was Izuku, not just Izuku, Todoroki and glasses as well. "What the fuck is going on." Katsuki says out loud and the number 3 hero gets up to stand beside him.

"There was an attack in Hosu, several beasts which have multiple quirks, we're not sure what they are though. And then the hero Killer also showed up as well as you can see on the screen."

He could see it, he could see it very clearly. He didn't want to watch but his eyes were glued to the screen. He lets out a breath, thoughts swimming and heart racing. Why? Why was Deku on the news, what the fuck did he do, what the fuck was happening.

There was no mistaking it that was Deku. Endeavour confronting him while the hero killer is being taken away. What did he do, what did he do, what did he do. What's happening?

"Hey, breathe." The hero besides him urges but Katsuki pushes him aside.

He didn't have the time to breathe, he had to do something anything. Deku and Endeavour? No that wasn't accurate, right there on the TV was none other than Karma not Izuku and not Deku. Endeavour was facing the murderer who went around Japan getting rid of any and all child traffickers. Endeavour was facing a criminal.

Katsuki clenches at his heart not knowing what else to do, his phone clatters to the ground, his mother on the other end of the line completely forgotten about. He pleads to whatever God is out there to please get Izuku out of this situation, to not let things end with Izuku's arrest.

Katsuki's breath hitches. This wasn't what he meant. A winged Nomu, the overwhelming size of its red wings standing out in the night sky swoops down straight to Izuku and takes him away. Katsuki watches as Izuku struggles unable to wiggle free of the beast's grip his face clearly seen by the camera for a split second. He watches as his happiness is dragged away while he sits there watching unable to do something. To say he doesn't feel a few tears sliding down his face would be a lie.

More tears only spill out of his eyes as The hero killer somehow set free from his chains pounces up towards the Nomu and stabs it in the eye. He stabs it again and again as they start to decrease in altitude and slowly drop to the ground.

Deku is flung across the pavement as the hero killer gets back up, a manic look in his eyes enough to keep every person there rooted to the spot. There was no audio just footage as the Hero killer gradually gets closer to the vicinity of the hero's looking like he's ready to kill them all. And maybe he was, maybe Katsuki will never know as in that moment Izuku being the only one completely unaffected by the pressure of the hero killers unwavering ideals runs up to him, knife in hand completely prepared to cut him down. He doesn't need to though, the hero killer stops walking completely passed out where he stands.

Katsuki tries to breathe again but his lungs won't let him, its as if they urge him to continue watching, not to be distracted for even a single second as it could mean life or death. Not just for him, but also for the vigilante who stands now the center of every hero's attention. Thank God for the Nomu which gets back up it serves as an appropriate distraction for Izuku to escape but Katsuki still can't breathe. Life as he knew it was over, there was no doubt that the world knew that was Karma, what with that unmistakable emerald green hair. It was only a matter of time before any and all information about Izuku would be exposed, this is what Katsuki feared the most and it finally came to pass.

"Are you alright?" The hero besides him asks and he can't bear to say anything. He collapses to the ground tears spilling, not giving a damn about what others thought about him right now.

Why did things have to end up like this?

———

"Today we have a special guest, Torikku Azamu one of the two candidates for our countries next Prime Minister."

The people on the TV screen speak in the background as Izuku looks up at the screen, Iida and Shoto sitting quietly in their hospital beds. They had changed the channel to basically the only news station that wasn't talking about Karma and the Hosu incident.

"Are you sure its okay for you to be here?" Shoto asks his usual expressionless look on his face.

"It's fine I won't get caught." Is all Izuku says refusing to look at him. He felt too guilty whenever he looked at the injuries that both Iida and Shoto sustained. It just reminded him of how weak he truly is if he can't even save two friends.

Shoto huffs as he leans back in his hospital bed. "You do know your face was revealed on the news right?"

"It's fine Shoto, I won't get caught." Izuku says again this time more insistent. Iida just stays silent feeling out of place in this conversation.

Seemingly not convinced Shoto drops the subject at Izuku's insistence. He falls quiet once again as the TV continues to play in the background.

"You must have many goals you wish to achieve if you were to become Prime Minister. What do you hope to do to better this country of ours."

The man, nothing short of a few pixles on the 20 inch screen clears his throat as he starts to speak. "As you all know for the past few years we have lived in a state of peace thanks to our symbol of peace who still stands strong and our very capable hero and police force. I wish to preserve this peace and put a stop to the things that threaten our safety..."

Izuku sighs as he looks away from the screen, he couldn't care less about the politics of the country it was just more corrupt people coming into power. The only use of the upcoming elections to him was that they served as a useful distraction to slow down the backlash of his identity being revealed, that along with Stain's capture. However it's only a matter of time before everything is revealed just as Shoto had said, to say that Izuku wasn't worried would be a lie but for now he hypothesises that he still has about a week before things get worse for him.

"First of all I wish to put UA back in line." All three of them look back up towards the TV screen at the mention of UA. "First there was the attack on campus and now their students were at the frontline of a battle they shouldn't of had to see. If things continue like this UA will only continue to put their students in danger so I wish to once again unify the laws of UA and the laws of this country."

"So are you confirming that the on campus attack wasn't just a rumour."

"Of course. The fact that they were able to so expertly hide it is also another cause for concern. And people may judge me for trying to put my opponent in a bad light but as a main investor and backer of UA don't you think he should be doing a better job."

"Oh... yes of course."

"If he can't even manage UA properly then how does he think he'll manage a country."

Izuku growls as he reaches for the remote to switch it off. "I'm not in the mood to listen to political bullshit. If he has so much time to criticise his opponent he should do something about the corruption in the country."

Iida sighs. "If he really were to keep that promise then all the rules of the school would change."

"Would the change really be that big though." Shoto replies.

"You don't realise it but there would be a lot of differences. UA has the right to do a lot of things because of their separate laws, if UA were to take on the laws of the country it would loose a lot of privileges."

Suddenly Izuku shoots up to an upright position feeling as if something's coming.

"Yeah but it can't be that easy to change the laws of UA. Right?" Shoto interjects.

Hearing multiple footsteps Izuku quickly rushes out the window, Iida and Shoto watching in confusion, not having heard anything. Activating a invisibility quirk as well just incase, he cautiously watches as the hero manual and a police officer with a head the shape of a dog walks into the room not even a second later.

Iida is the first to get up, although rather shakily, and greet the two unexpected visitors. Shoto does as well reluctantly.

"You both can sit down." The officer says before introducing himself. "I am the chief of the Hosu police precinct and as you might have guessed I am here because of the hero killer."

Todoroki sits back down rather uninterested but makes an effort to listen anyway. Iida follows suit.

"Regarding the Hero Killer," the officer getting straight to the point. "He sustained many injuries including: burns, fractures, bruises and a few broken bones. I'm sure you both know that quirks appeared in the world out of nowhere." The officer looked at them both as Iida nodded and a glare started to appear across Shoto's face.

"And with the dawning of quirks came an increase of crime rate as there were no laws put in place to stop those people who used their quirk as they wanted. Thankfully there are now several laws to stop civilians from weaponising their quirks and to keep the people safe. Without theses strict rules and punishments for those that break them people would take this for granted that is why no individual can be let off for these crimes."

"What are you trying to say." Shoto growls.

"I'm saying that as you both of you are merely students and are yet to have a licence, and the fact that you were never given permission from a hero with a license, the two of you colluding to attack the hero killer is against the law."

"Colluding?" Shoto yells as he gets up. "You're making us sound like criminals, was I meant to just stand there and watch my friend die. So I'm meant to let everyone get killed all in the name of following the rules!"

"Hey Todoroki calm down." Iida urges but Shoto is in no state to listen to reason.

Manual sighs. "Please listen to the rest of what he has to say."

"Well I was merely stating my opinion as a police officer. Fortunately there is a way for you both to avoid these charges. Of courses defeating the Hero Killer would naturally bring praise to whoever managed to accomplish this task but if we were to make it public that you were the ones who defeated the Hero Killer you would not be able to escape punishment."

"So what?"

"So if you both don't mind giving away all the credit, we can essentially say that it was Endeavour who defeated the Hero killer and is responsible for the burns. However no one would ever know of your bravery."

Iida immediately gets up and bows. "Thank you for this opportunity. I am deeply sorry for the trouble we have caused."

"Im still going to have to take responsibility as your supervisor." Said Manual. "But as long as you regret it and don't do something like this again I'd say it's fine. I forgive you."

"Ah thank you." Iida looks over to Shoto who's standing there silently. He didn't know why but that wasn't a good sign. "Todoroki what's wrong?"

"You said you'd give all the credit to Endeavour right."

"That is correct."

"Then what about Karma?"

"Karma?" The officer repeats almost taken aback. "Well Karma's full face was revealed on camera so things are going to be hard for him. Even if he was to reveal the truth I doubt anyone would take it seriously."

"No. I don't care about him revealing the truth or not. I mean why are you giving the credit to Endeavour when Karma was there too?"

"Karma is a criminal."

"Vigilante." Shoto snaps. "He was the main reason we were even able to capture Stain in the first place. He even ended up revealing his identity all because he wanted to save us, so why won't you acknowledge him. What kind of excuse is 'he's a criminal'."

The police officer sighs. "I'm afraid it is too late, the press already thinks that Endeavour did it."

"So you came here, fully aware that you've already given Endeavour the credit, lectured us and then gave us a choice which wasn't really a choice at all."

"If you both had decided to take the punishment it wouldn't have been too late to say that it was the two of you who had done it."

"Then why can't you reveal it was Karma."

"It is different when it comes to two UA students. When it comes to Karma we can't..."

"Why because you don't want to improve his public image. The public will start to ask questions so are you going to keep on lying just to destroy the one person actually trying to make a change in this messed up society!"

"Todoroki calm down."

"Iida don't tell me to calm down!" Shoto yells. "They think after revealing his face for the world to see they can just ignore the fact that he's the real hero here. Why, because he keeps challenging the government?"

"I didn't come here today to talk about Karma. That is a whole different situation. Of course he was seen trying to attack the Hero killer but if we were to give him the credit he would be the one to take the punishment for both of you."

"It's not about the punishment and we both know it. So what, he already has endless charges to his name. What I'm saying is that you can't just reveal his identity, ruin everything for him and then give Endeavour all the credit. Atleast if you say it was Karma that would improve his public image even more and put him in a better place."

"Yes it would improve his public image while damaging ours." The officer says gritting his teeth and trying his best to stay calm.

"Who's fault is it that no one could catch the hero killer till now. I don't care for the excuses I simply want you to give all the credit to Karma. If not then I'll personally make sure Karma is given the recognition he deserves even if that means putting myself in trouble."

"And how exactly do you plan to do that."

"Simple, social media is a resource. And I'm Endeavour's son there's no reason for me to lie against my own father so people would naturally believe me."

The police officer flinches seeming to now fully understand the implications of what Shoto says. "You would ruin your father's image for a vigilante."

"If he didn't want to ruin his image he shouldn't have gotten ahead of himself."

"Very well." The officer says. "If that's what you wish, I'll see what we can do."

"If it's not said on the news or made known around the country I will make sure to do everything in my power to give Karma the recognition he deserves."

The police chief merely nods before marching straight out the door a little agitated. Manual gives a quick bow with a small smile on his face before walking out as well.

Izuku sighs as he turns off his invisibility quirk. That took more out of him than he had expected. Before he can go back inside he feels his phone vibrate so he takes it out. He checks it expecting it to be another concern filled text from Kacchan but instead he's met with an unknown number. Normally he would ignore it but there's no doubt he'd have to get rid of his phone soon so what was the worse that could happen.

'I have something important to tell you, I would like to meet up.'

Izuku stares at the screen unsure whether to take it seriously or not. Those were not the words he was expecting.

'How can I trust you?' He messages back.

Almost immediately the person replies.
'If you help me all of your criminal charges could be removed.'

Izuku sucks in a breath, that was quite a tempting offer.

By the time Shoto is looking out the window to see if Izuku is alright he's already gone.

Don't Come Back

"Have you seen this video?"

"Of the hero killer, it keeps getting taken down then re-uploaded again. It shows Karma's face as well."

"Finally Stain has been captured, and Karma's identity has been revealed. The police and hero's are finally doing their job."

"Is that really a good thing though, Stains ideologies actually make sense. They should just keep the video up, why does it keep getting taken down."

"Are you stupid, the fact that people have already started taking note of the video is a big enough concern. Those who were once abandoned and filled with malice across the country, slowly but surely they will all start to come together, the rumoured league of villians being the center point. The reason being this video."

A smirk slips onto an observers face. Things are finally going as planned.

Fidgeting with her fingers Mitsuki ponders on whether she should go talk to her son or not. He hasn't said a word to her since he came back from hero placements and after everything that had happened and been revealed on the news she was getting worried. She had suspected that the boy on the news was in fact Izuku, the son of her friend who had moved to America years ago. She had thought that he had gone with her all those years ago yet the news was claiming that Karma is in fact Izuku Midoriya. She bites her lip, she didn't understand.

Her foot constantly taps against the floor yet she couldn't bring herself to get up. She couldn't even sort out her own feelings, what made her think Katsuki could have possibly already sorted his? She wraps her arms around her torso, not because she was cold but because she felt so hopeless in that moment. She felt as if something was terribly, terribly wrong and that she had the power to have changed that. But she didn't, she did nothing and nothing hurt her more. She didn't know if she could have done something but even still she did nothing and now things have ended like this.

Mitsuki hears footsteps on the stairs and she's guessing that could only be Katsuki. How pathetic, she thought, she couldn't even work up the courage to get up to go talk to him herself and now he's coming down himself. Once Katsuki can be seen another wave of panic and helplessness overcomes Mitsuki. only the people who really knew him well would know that the expression on his face did not signify anger but nerves, despite what it looked like. Mitsuki looks up at him not sure what to say, expecting him to just completely ignore her presence instead he walks up to her, hands fidgety and for once not in his damn pockets.

She had been looking for this opportunity all along and it had just walked right up to her but still she couldn't find any words to say and neither could Katsuki apparently. This was there relationship, unless they were hurling insults at each other it was hard to say anything. So at her sons lack of words, that's how Mitsuki knew whatever was about to happen was important. Things hadn't been this awkward since the time Katsuki had came out. It was almost comical, they had sat there silent for almost half an hour just to discuss something that Mitsuki already knew.

Katsuki still standing there finally speaks. "Where's dad?" He asks.

"Ah, right. Masaru!" Mitsuki calls out and in no time her husband is coming from the kitchen. He understands what's happening straight away, probably referencing the whole coming out situation, and sits down.

Once they're both sat down Katsuki sighs before calling out to someone behind the door. "Hurry up and get out here you prick, they're both here."

"Oh." Mitsuki accidentally says out loud. Today was finally the day he would tell them who the guy he was always bringing over was.

"Oh." Mitsuki says again, this time louder and more shock behind it. The first thing she notices is the green hair and how he mutters under his breath, 'calling me a prick was unnecessary.' "Oh-" Mitsuki says once more as things finally start to click. The tears start to fall down her face as she is confronted by reality.

That was Izu. Cute, lovable Izuku. She holds in a sob as Masaru goes to wrap his arms around her also understanding the gravity of the situation. Izuku stands there next to Katsuki, an awkward but charming smile on his face and with just the sheer sight of him Mitsuki can't help but to fling herself ontop of him into a hug.

She cries while he tries his best to reassure her, tries to convince her that he's okay, that everything was okay. But everything wasn't, how could it be. This wasn't America, this wasn't the false reality she had been exposed to.

Shakily she raises her hand to cup his face. She looked into his eyes, it wasn't like she remembered but she could tell they were different. They weren't filled with life and didn't sparkle like they used to. "Did you ever really go to America?" He shakes his head and Mitsuki absolutely breaks down.

"This is my fault." She says. "I'm sorry I should have questioned Inko more, I should have tried my best to atleast see you one last time. I knew something was wrong and I did nothing, I always asked about you and she would say you were fine, would never let me talk to you. But she couldn't could she, 'cause you were-" Mitsuki couldn't bare to say anymore, her heart just couldn't take it, that would mean she would have to face the reality that she had purposefully ignored, that she could have changed. So instead she decided to do the next best thing.

She sniffs as she gets up off the floor to look at Izuku. He must be 16 by now yet he still looked so small. Wiping away her tears, she's decided, "This is all because of Inko right. I'll do something, I'll call her. Wait no I'll call the police, they must be able to do something. We can't just-"

"-No!" Startled Mitsuki looks up to her son who seems to be fuming with rage, on the outside atleast, who knew what he was actually feeling on the inside. "No police." He says. "We can't tell the police anything that could possibly mean that they find out that we know Deku, there's no doubt they'll come to question us anyway but we can't tell them any of this. They can't know anything other than the fact that we were neighbours when he was younger before he went to America."

"But-" Mitsuki starts but Katsuki shushes her.

"No. I'm sure you've already figured out that he really is Karma so please don't do anything unnecessary which could put him into even more trouble. There's a reason I haven't told you till now and that's to protect his identity and past so please no police. No anyone, you can't tell a soul."

"I mean it doesn't really matter, the whole world basically knows now."

"Deku shut up, just because they know who you are now doesn't mean you can just go and reveal everything about yourself. I know that your usually nonchalant when it comes to your identity but keeping things secret matters now more than ever."

"I agree." Masaru says as he gets up from where he had previously sat stunned on the couch to go lightly squeeze his shoulder. "Izuku, I'm glad you're safe. I'm sorry that we didn't realise what was going on till now, but now that we know we'll make sure to protect you as much as possible. So please do us a favour and try to protect yourself as well."

Gaze on the floor, Izuku merely nods. "I'll try." He says and that seems to be enough for everyone in the room as the atmosphere slowly lightens.

———

Izuku follows Kacchan upstairs finally able to get away from Aunty Mitsuki. Mostly thanks to her husband. After his outburst Kacchan hadn't said anything since, Izuku didn't know what he was thinking but he probably had hundreds of thoughts flying through his head at a thousand miles per hour.

Walking into his room Kacchan stops to look his door. "Why were you there in the first place?"

"What?" Izuku turns around to face him. It turns out he only had one thought flying through his mind.

"You heard me." Kacchan says. "why where you there? You knew didn't you. If you knew why didn't you tell me."

Izuku falters at the sudden ambush. "What do you mean, I don't understand."

Katsuki grits his teeth, voice shaking with anger and fists clenched. "You knew that Iida was planning on targeting Stain so why didn't you tell anyone!" Taken aback by Katsuki's sudden change in tone Deku just stands there with his mouth agape.

"W-well I-" He sputters and Katsuki just rolls his eyes. "I thought it was best to watch him alone I didn't want to ruin your placement for you by making you have to look over Iida."

"Are you stupid!?"

"What."

"Why was that the only fucking conclusion you came to!" He screams, you could practically see the smoke coming out of his ears.

"Kacchan, why exactly are you shouting at me. What have I done."

"What have you done? Deku are you an idiot, you've gone and exposed your identity despite the situation being completely avoidable! That's what you've done!"

"Well I didn't know things would end up like this did I! Why am I the one you're taking your anger out on."

"Because you're the fucking problem! Deku you don't tell me anything. You know everything about everything about me even if I don't want you to yet I barely know anything about you!"

"What do you mean you barely know anything, you know more about me than anyone else." More confused than he's ever been before Izuku grits his teeth, anger slowly rising.

"That may be true when it comes to Izuku Midoriya but when it comes to Karma you're a complete mystery."

"What are you talking about. Kacchan that's not true."

"Yes it is!" Katsuki yells and Izuku's anger rises even more. "Izuku, the most I know about Karma is basically the same as the public now. Are you not Karma, isn't he just another part of you. So why are you hiding him from me?"

"Kacchan I don't understand what you're trying to say." And that was the truth, Izuku really didn't understand what was the problem here. Why did any of this matter anyway?

Kacchan lets out a long agitated sigh, his hands perched in his hair in frustration. "I'm saying you know everything about me yet I know nothing about you. You know everything about everyone but no one knows a thing about you. You get into other people's business and try to help them yet won't let anyone help you. You intrude into others problems and feelings since they might as well just be kept in an unlocked room for you yet you try your best to keep yours completely locked away from everyone and anyone. Deku don't you see how unfair that is." Kacchan almost pleads, he needs Izuku to understand what was happening but it would be a miracle if he ever did.

Izuku huffs anger finally bubbling over. "Unfair?" He repeats, venom in his tone. "I've sacrificed myself many times trying to protect you and the people around yo-"

"I didn't ask you too!" Katsuki yells exasperated. "No one asked for your protection so stop doing unnecessary things and why don't you try protecting yourself for a change!"

"Well if I don't do it who will!" Izuku cries back. "No one else has stepped up even after I became Karma. What do you want me to do then, just abandon everything!"

"That's not what I meant and you know it." Katsuki howls back unable to hide the depths of his frustration anymore. "Fucking hell why are you like this."

"Why am I like this?" Izuku asks, hands balled into a fist as they shake by his side. "You're the one who suddenly started shouting at me. Katsuki I'm the one who's in danger of being caught, and I'm the one who's going to be punished. What I do and whether or not my identity is revealed should be non of your concern!"

Katsuki laughs finally losing it. "That's right, you're the one who'll get arrested and receive the most punishment but you're forgetting I'm likely too as well. I've been hiding and protecting a murder all this time, I'm an accomplice. So Deku this doesn't just concern you it concern me as well and everyone else you know and love."

"That's why I'm going to make sure that doesn't happen!" Izuku roars.

"By hiding away!? You're going to lock up your feelings even deeper away? Why do you refuse to let anyone help you, when it comes to me despite how I feel about it you'll go and do something about it even though you know I would hate it. When it comes to you, you refuse any and all help, you don't tell me anything! Just like the incident that happened a week ago with the quirkless child. You were suffering through that the whole day weren't you, yet your main focus was fucking Glasses!"

"Oh so it's wrong now to worry over people and try to help?"

"Deku stop with the bullshit! You had the perfect opportunity to tell us yet you said fucking nothing. It's so clear now that you don't trust anyone but yourself with your stupid, pathetic feelings."

"Well that's not fucking true!" Izuku cries, almost feeling defeated. He wanted this to stop, he wanted things to go back to how they were before, he wasn't ready to confront his feelings.

"Well guess fucking what." Katsuki snarls. "Whether you continue to deny it or not you're a horrible person! Go on and continue to fake smile after every harrowing experience if you so desperately want to pretend everything is fine then fine I'll play along with your fucking fantasies!"

The glare on Izuku's face only grows more fierce. He understood now. Things can't go back to how they were before, they'll never go back to how they were before. "Good, you should have just done that from the start!"

"Yeah, I should have. I should have kept my distance since you obviously don't need my help then I'm guessing you don't need my company either. You're fine on your own right, yeah keep on thinking that and don't expect me to talk to you."

"Katsuki what the fuck is your problem!" Absolutely done with this now Izuku yells.

"Your the problem you mother fucker! You refuse to understand so fine continue living in your stupid bubble, I'll stop trying to pop it, just don't expect me to make any effort to talk to you since you obviously don't want to talk to me."

"Katsuki stop!" He bangs his hand against the wall.

"Stop what! I'm just speaking my mind, showing you my feelings. That's what you want is it not, you want me to spill my heart out to you as you keep silent. Then what's the problem here?"

Finally having enough Izuku marches up to him and grabs him by the front of his t-shirt. His anger has completely bubbled over and he feels just inches away from punching Katsuki in his fucking privileged face. "Katsuki, shut up! I want you to shut the fuck up! I don't care how you feel or what you want from me so piss of and stop spouting fucking nonsense!"

Katsuki stops, eyes wide but unable to meet Deku's gaze. He had that look in his eyes, a look that he's rarely seen but has terrified him every single time. It's the same way he had looked at the traffickers all those years ago when Katsuki had been kidnapped. The same look he had given those fucking bully's that one time he had come to meet Katsuki at school. He has rarely seen it but that look installed so much fear into him. It had never been directed at him and he had never expected it to. But now it was. The look that Deku gave when he identifies someone as an enemy.

Katsuki sucks in a breath, rooted to the spot as Deku grabs the front of his shirt tighter. He looks down actually feeling more intimidated than he's ever been around Deku for quite a while.

"Katsuki." Izuku snarls. It feels like a thousand punches to the gut for Katsuki, never before had such a voice been directed towards him, never before had he felt so scared of the one named Karma. "I'm sorry, I hadn't realised that it was a requirement by law for me to spill my heart out to you just because you're my boyfriend." Deku lets out a short phsycotic laugh. "I guess that's another illegal act I'm committing"

"Izuku, you-"

"Since you seem to hate me trying to help solve your problems so much," Izuku interupts, nothing but pure venom in his voice, "then I'll stop. I'll cut all ties with you if thats what you so desperately want. I've got no reason to care about a strangers feelings." His grip on Katsuki tightens.

Heart practically beating out of his chest Katsuki bites his lip so hard it draws blood. If this was how it was going to be then so be it, he didn't need someone so toxic in his life anyway.

"Izuku p-please leave." Fuck he stuttered.

"Oh so now you're kicking me out?" The bitter resentment echoes in Izuku's voice and Katsuki can't help but feel an unslaught of emotion. But Katsuki has never been good with emotion, that's why he masked it with anger, with words he didn't mean.

He didn't mean to snatch Deku's arm off him or march up to his drawer the way he did or grab the money inside it with so much force. He didn't mean to turn around and look into those emerald green eyes and match the resentment aimed at him, neither did he mean to throw the money so cruelly as he did at Izuku's feet or the words he says after.

"Izuku get out! This is what you came here for in the first place right? Take the money and don't come back."

"You... Is this really what you think of me." Izuku growls with nothing but pure hatred so Katsuki responds with the same.

"I said get out!"

Looking like he wants to do more Izuku decides not to. He just wordlessly walks up to the window leaving the money that lays scattered on the ground. He pauses and without even looking back he says, "Don't ever expect me to come back."

And as soon as Izuku is gone Katsuki legs give out as he falls to the floor, a ball of resentment and sorrow because he knew Izuku meant that.

With a feather in hand and a tear stained face Izuku roams the city atop the rooftops. He sighs as he holds the feather up to the sky, he looks at it refusing to even think about his previous argument, but just because he refuses to doesn't mean his mind listens to him. Thankfully he was used to this, used to burying his feelings deep, deep down where even he couldn't find them because he didn't want to find them. He didn't want to face the feelings of hatred and regret in his heart right now because he hated the fact that they're even there in the first place.

He laughs, it was ironic. It was his stupid tendency to hide all his feelings that caused the argument, and now he's trying to do the same again. But why it even mattered Izuku still didn't understand, or maybe he just didn't want to understand. Maybe it would better for him and everyone if he didn't understand.
Nothing could ever be the same again, but maybe that was a good thing, maybe he was the factor that was holding Katsuki back, maybe without him things will be better, safer. Maybe he should have left sooner.

Izuku sighs again, the feather in hand being the route of his current predicament. Why did he still even have this stupid feather anyway, he thinks to himself however he knew it was finally going to become useful. That's if he could figure out how to use it. With a frustrated sigh Izuku curses out the fucking bird in both his mind and out loud. "Hawks you bastard what am I supposed to do with this! Couldn't you have just given me your phone number instead." Izuku complains out loud and actually has the intention of hitting the feather with a hammer until it's practically dust just so the chicken can suffer. Thankfully for Hawks the feather starts to respond and hover on its own.

Izuku follows the feather as it dashes through the night sky, where it was taking him Izuku had no idea. He turned several corners before landing in an alleyway, similar to the one he had met Hawks in before. Maybe it was the same, Izuku was too sleep deprived to even remember.

"I never thought you would ever come looking for me but I'm guessing this is about your identity being exposed." That annoying voice, Izuku can already tell it was Hawks. Izuku is not in the mood for this.

"Partially." Is all Izuku says as he finally stands face to face with the number 3. The hero looks down at him and a look of suprise crosses his face.

"Oh damn kid", he exclaims looking at his tear stained face. "Did your identity being revealed really hurt you that much. You didn't seem like the type to be bothered by it."

"Please shut up!" Izuku snaps, "I couldn't care less about that right now."

"Well good, I was afraid you'd ask me for some kind of shelter." The hero says crossing his arms. Unfortunately I can't offer you much help."

"Your not the one I need help from, just contact your pyromaniac friend for me and we'll be done with this conversation."

"Are you talking about Dabi? What do you want to see him for." Izukuk glares at the hero and he drops the subject. "Fine I'l call him. Kids these days are so fucking rude."

"You are aware that there isn't that much of an age gap between us."

"It's still pretty big though." Izuku sighs giving up on this conversation. Like said before he is not in the mood for this.

About half an hour later the pyromaniac has arrived, a smile on his face until he sees Izuku.

"Why is he here?" Is the first thing Dabi says, and if you ask him Izuku though that was pretty rude.

"I'm the one who asked him to call you." Izuku replies.

"Oh great." The sarcasm was very much not appreciated. "Look kid I don't know who you think I am but I'd rather not get into your villian business."

"Vigilante." Izuku corrects.

"Its basically the same thing, you both get arrested either way."

"Actually Vigilantes tend to get shorter prison sentences, for you though kid." Hawks looks him up and down, a judgmental look on his face. "If you were to ever get arrested there's no doubt you'd be spending the rest of your life in prison or even on death row."

"Is that even legal, he's a minor?"

"He's a hindrance to the people in charge, they want to get rid of him as soon as they can if not publicly then they'll definitely do it privately." Hawks turns to talk to Izuku specifically now. "You better be careful kid, they know your identity now so no one around you is safe."

"I'm fully aware of that, that's why I asked for Dabi's help."

"Did I not just say that I don't want to get involved."

"Please don't be like that. I don't know who else I could possibly ask."

Hawks leans against the wall, getting comfortable. "Atleast let the kid explain first, I'm curious now."

"Fine, go on then."

"The league of villians is a-"

"Woah, hold up." The burnt chicken nugget says. "'League of Villians'. I don't even want to hear the rest anymore."

"Dabi please. I'm begging you right now, I advice that you listen before I resort to blackmail."

"I don't care, blackmail me with whatever you want. I don't want to get involved."

Getting desperate now Izuku clings to his jacket. "I can make sure it has no consequences for you. You know Eraserhead right? If I make it seem like you partnered with him to go undercover it will only bring benefits to you, you won't get caught."

"I don't care, I don't want to do it." He says pushing the boys hands away.

"Dabi let him finish."

He crosses his arms. "Fine, make it quick."

"Like I said a group known as the League of Villians tried to get me to join them. They're the one's who gave me that weird substance that tracked my location on the night I first met you two." Dabi lets out a small grunt as if he wants to complain again but he stays silent. Izuku continues. "They infiltrated UA a few days after that but thankfully I had informed UA of their plan before that."

"I remember hearing about that I thought it was just a rumour."

"Well it was true. They were even the ones responsible for the monsters in Hosu, it seems like they tried to collaborate with Stain but he refused." It was at the mention of Stain that Izuku had piqued Dabi's intrest. He starts to listen more attentively.

"I've had a previous encounter with Stain before the whole Hosu incident so he made me aware of the fact that the League are targeting me."

"Because you refused their proposal to join?"

"And because I informed UA of their plan. Shigiraki, their acting leader is childish and has no self restraint, he's also got a person backing him up in the background but I'm not sure who. Currently he's looking for new members and the Hosu incident is a perfect opportunity for him since he can convince people that him and Stain were working together."

"So you want Dabi to infiltrate the League under the guise of wanting to join?"

"Exactly. This way I can ensure the saftey of the people I care about and UA from Shigiraki."

"Is he really that much of a threat to you?" Dabi asks.

"He's unpredictable, I have no idea what he could possibly do, I'd rather not take any chances."

"Still I'm not sure."

"Please Dabi." Izuku pleads. "I don't mean to inconvenience you but I can't think of any other way. Shigiraki is my biggest threat right now and my loved ones are at stake so please help me."

"By loved ones do you mean that blond buffoon who won the sports festival. That's your boyfriend right?"

"Didn't you tell me back then that I didn't tell you who my boyfriend was."

"Well I lied, and it's easy to figure out now that you're identity has been revealed. You were close in childhood before you became Karma, League of Villians or not he's going to be suspected first by the police."

Izuku sighs. "That's fine, I'll leave that up to him, he seems to be more prepared than I am anyway."

"Where exactly are you going to go now anyway? You can't exactly stay with him anymore can you."

"How did you know that I stayed with him."

"Spilled your heart out over food at 3am in the morning, remember."

Izuku beats himself internally over that. Why was he such an idiot when sleep deprived and hungry.

"Whatever. Even if I wanted to stay with him he probably hates me now."

"Ooh teenage drama. You had a fight didn't you, no wonder you look like such a mess."

"Forget about that will you," Izuku snaps, "get back to the point of this conversation."

"Frankly I don't want to go. But that might change if there's something in it for me." Dabi says a smirk slowly slipping ontohi face. "You mentioned benefits before did you not?"

Izuku sighs. "I'm not sure about your life or living conditions right now but I could perhaps convince Nezu to arrange something."

"Nezu? As in the principal of UA. Why are you so affiliated with that school, what on earth are they up to."

"I'm not affiliated to the school, more like a couple of teachers and students."

"What's the difference?"

Izuku sighs. Will you do it or not."

"Fine." Dabi groans. "I have a feeling you won't leave me alone until I do anyway."

Izuku lights up. "Thank you so so much." To say Hawks didn't enjoy watching the boy jump up and hug Dabi, and Dabi feeling the most uncomfortable and awkward than he's ever been before would be a lie. Because he was enjoying it, a lot if that shit eating grin was anything to go by.

"I'll tell you all the details, oh wait give me your phone number, I'll text them to you."

"You still have your phone?"

"I'm planning to get rid of it in a few days but I still have some things left to do." He turns back to Dabi and continues speaking before he can find the chance to go back on his word. "Like I said I'll text you all the details. It shouldn't be that hard for you to get into the league as long as you go through Giran, their broker. Like I just said I'm going to have to get rid of my phone soon but as soon as I get a new one I'll promise to contact you. Everything should be fine as long as you don't piss off Shigiraki."

"I'm starting to regret this."

"Its too late, I just hugged you and everything so you can't take it back."

"What."

"That would be taking advantage of me."

"For a hug?"

"It would be weirder if it was for a hug. I'm still a minor you know."

"Oh my lord, please leave before I'm arrested for attempted murder." Izuku smiles and gives Dabi another hug just to mess with him. He runs away before the pyromaniac can do anything but he makes sure to wave goodbye before he goes. Atleast Hawks was polite enough to wave back as Dabi grumbled where he stood.

———

'I'll accept your offer but if you want to meet you'll have to do exactly everything I say.' Izuku types into his phone as he replies to the shady unknown individual. 'Don't try and trick me, I'm going to get rid of this phone once we're done.'

Izuku didn't have to wait as long as he expected as a new message pops onto his screen.

'Deal.' He smiles. Things were finally starting to fall into place.

Interrogation

All Might blinks in disbelief. "How did you get in here." He asks shakily.

"The gate was open." Is Izuku's simple response but neither All Might nor Recovery girl seem convinced.

"Are you sure you can afford to be this care free when you're basically a wanted person now." Recovery girl nags.

"I'll be fine."

"I'm going to have to capture you now you know." All Might says.

"Nezu asked to meet me."

Recovery girl hisses under her breath. "That damn rat."

"If you're here to see Nezu then why are you here?"

"Because I also wanted to talk to you."

All Might raises an eyebrow. "About what?"

"Katsuki." Izuku doesn't miss the look that the two adults share.

He watches the two adults stand a little straighter as they signal for Izuku to start, showing that he's got their full attention. The boy sucks in a breath before proceeding.

"I came here to ask that you don't treat Katsuki any differently than you have been now." The two adults share another look. "I know the fact that I'm his boyfriend probably bothers you and that this should have been a problem that was established earlier on, but please know that he didn't tell you anything because he was protecting me. Katsuki trusts you both a lot, so if you were to act any differently towards him then that would just hurt him. Oh and if because of this you want to stop training him I hope that you consider what you all have already been through rather than me."

Rather unimpressed Recovery girl crosses here arms. "You came to us just to say that?" Izuku nods. "So you risked getting caught or us flipping out all so we don't treat Katsuki differently to how we have been?" Izuku nods again and recovery girl sighs.

"Deku is your name, correct?" All Might asks from the chair on which he sits.

"I don't mind being called Deku but my actual name is Izuku."

"Right, then young Izuku may I ask you a few questions." Izuku nods once again although this time a little hesitant. "Is it true that you and Katsuki are childhood friends." Izuku nods. "And he's told you everything about all our interactions?"

"Ah if that's what you're worried about," Izuku starts. "I promise I won't tell anyone any of your secrets. It's not like I have a right to anyway and plus I wouldn't reveal anything that could possibly put Kacchan in danger."

"But you do know everything that has happened between us?"

"Uh... yes." Izuku nods again.

"So you know the details of my quirk and that I passed it onto him." Izuku nods. "And that's how you knew who I was even in my deflated form during the sports festival." Izuku nods again.

"I'm sorry." He says. "I'm sorry if you didn't want me to know any of that, I'll-"

"It's fine." All Might interupts. "I was just making sure. I can tell that you really do care about Katsuki and he cares about you so I have no complaints. You can be on your way now, Nezu is probably waiting."

"You mean he's probably watching this whole interaction." Recovery girl chuckles while All Might groans.

"...so that's it?" Izuku asks. "That's all you're going to say to me."

Recovery girl sighs. "Do you want us to scold you or what? Maybe give you a lecture? Dear we were never going to treat Katsuki any differently than we have now. Of course we were a little upset but we can see how much you care about each other so what could we really do about it. We can't just drive you two apart."

To say Izuku didn't feel overjoyed was a lie, he could even feel a couple of tears prick his eyes. "Thank you." He says completely meaning it. "I promise I won't become an interference."

"Yeah whatever go see Nezu already. I'll tell Katsuki that you stopped by."

"Ah please don't. I don't think he even wants to hear my name right now, he's probably really angry at me."

All Might raises an eyebrow a little curious but let's it go. "As you wish." He says and Izuku gives them an awkward smile before a quick bow and leaves the room. What he did not expect to see was Aizawa waiting on the opposite side of the door.

"Did Nezu make you come get me?" He nods.

"Are you all done, should we go now?"

"Yeah." Aizawa pushes off the wall and starts to lead the way and Izuku just lags behind. Aizawa was being surprisingly quiet and he wasn't sure what to make of that.

"Uh, my identity being revealed isn't going to affect your job in anyway right, since you know you're kinda associated to me."

"It's funny how you only thought about that now."

"Its not that I only just realised, its just that I never imagined this time would come."

Aizawa sighs. "I knew it would come sooner or later but didn't expect it to be so soon. Whatever, if this affects my job or not it won't be the end of the world and I doubt Nezu would do that. Plus its not your fault, I'm the one who'd always talk about you, people would have started to make a connection."

"A connection to what? Deku isn't even my actual name."

"Who cares about that when you've already showed your face to all the staff at UA. Made a pretty big commotion as well. Sports festival remember."

Izuku diverts his gaze. "Yeah I remember."

"Then there's also the time before the USJ attack, the teachers are going to give me so much shit for that one. I lied and kept insisting that I hadn't brought Karma into the school after all."

"Ah." Izuku says with an awkward laugh. "Sorry."

"Like I said, whatever who cares. We can't change the past."

"Yeah..." Izuku still felt a little guilty but he tried to push that feeling down.

"Oh right, this is for you."Izuku looks over to Aizawa who's holding out a stack of money in his hand.

"Why are you giving this to me?"

"Its not mine it's from Bakugo. He insisted that I take it because he knew we'd see each other again at some point."

"Is he still angry."

"A little, but I think he's just worried about you."

Izuku walks over to the man as he takes the money from his hand. "I said some horrible things to him."

"I'm sure he forgives you."

"I'm not sure about that."

"Well then if you don't think he forgives you go apologise to him. I don't think its a good idea for you two to be parting on such bad terms."

Izuku shakes his head. "It's fine. I think it would be best if I just left him alone for now."

Aizawa sighs. "If you say so."

"Where are Kacchan and Toshi anyway?" Izuku asks.

"Mic will bring them to school, I came alone since I had to get here pretty early to look for a certain someone."

"Am I the certain someone?"

"Who else would it be."

"Well it could be anyone?"

"Which also means it could be anyone else that's waiting for them, what reason would I, of all people, have to be here right now if not for you. I hate the fact that I have to see that rat so early in the morning."

"Nezu isn't that bad."

"Yeah because you're just as bad as him."

"W-well I don't think I'm that bad either."

Aizawa just scoffs as the two near the entrance to Nezu's office. Unsurprisingly the door swings open as soon as they're just a few steps away.

"Tea?" The principal offers as the two take a seat. Izuku nods having a feeling he would be given some even if he declined.

"Straight to the point right?" The principal asks as he sets down his teapot to look at his two guest.

"Yeah." Izuku answers. "That would be appreciated."

"Well then. I called you here today to tell you that my offer from last time still stands. It is still possible for you to join UA now. It may bring some strong controversies but it is better that you join UA and are safe from the law for the next three years."

Izuku wrings his hands as he smiles softly. "I appreciate your kindness but I would still like to decline."

"Deku you know it will be too late once you're caught, the country wouldn't just hand you over to us." Aizawa says, concern clearly evident on his face.

Izuku turns to Aizawa. "I know that it's safer for me to join UA but right now I have something important I need to do. If it's enough for you then I promise I won't get caught. I'll join once I'm done with my business."

"And how long is that going to take?"

Izuku sighs, "I'm not sure."

Nedzu nods. "I understand, then I will await the day you change your mind and join the school. Until then try your best to stay safe."

Feeling a little displeased Aizawa combs his fingers through his hair. "Fine, do as you wish. Just promise me that you won't get caught before you finally decide to join the school."

"I promise you that I won't get caught no matter what." That seems enough like a good enough response for Aizawa as he simply nods.

Katsuki drags his feet along the corridor not looking forward to whatever All Might has to say to him. He has a suspicion that it's about Deku and that's the last person he would like to talk about right now.

Katsuki sighs as he knocks on the door, not even a second later Recovery girl calls out telling him to come in. He cautiously opens the door, considering just running away now before it was too late. He only considers these thoughts more as the three adults stare at him.

"Great, he's here." Katsuki mumbles to himself, but he guesses in the silence it wasn't such a suprise that the detective hears him.

"The one and only." He replies arms crossed but his usual bored and unimpressed expression was nowhere to be found. Instead he looked annoyed, and stressed, very stressed.

"Come sit down Young Bakugo." All Might points to the chair in the room basically directly infront of three adults who stand in the middle of the room. Begrudgingly Katsuki drags himself to the chair and sits down with a huff, refusing to look at any of them.

"What is it you wanted to talk about?"

"I think you know the answer." Tsukauchi replies and Katsuki can't help but curl into himself. He really didn't want to talk about Deku, he felt too guilty and upset and it was even worse because with the detective here he couldn't risk lying.

"Young Bakugo, I don't know if he told you this but I bumped into this Karma at the start of the sports festival." Katsuki grits his teeth because no, Deku had not told him this and it was no suprise that he didn't either.

Recovery girl also starts to speak. "He also went into the staff room during the sports festival looking for Aizawa, basically everyone saw him." Katsuki really wishes they'd stop talking, he doesn't want to hear anymore.

"I haven't seen this Deku before but imagine my suprise when I found out he was actually Karma." The detective says, arms still crossed and same annoyed expression on his face. "It turned out that the person I was looking for had always been closer than I expected." Katsuki stays silent not knowing what to say. "So your not going to say anything?"

The teen glances up at the three adults all staring down at him before losing courage and snapping his head back down. He really really hated this.

"C-can we just please not talk about Karma right now." Is all he says as the adults all exchange glances.

"You know you can't avoid this forever right."

"I'm not trying to avoid it." Katsuki snaps. "It's just I really don't want to talk about him right now, not even think of him so please don't ask."

"I guess you both really did have a fight." All Might walks over to him and rests his hand on his shoulder. Kneeling until they're eye level he looks at Katsuki and speaks once again. "Katsuki don't get us wrong, we're not trying to criticise you or anything like that. I'm sure you have your own story and you could always tell us when you're ready, and if you don't want to then that's okay too."

"So you're not mad at me?"

All Might shakes his head. "I have no reason to be."

"But I lied to you."

"I would probably do the same in your situation." Katsuki stares silently at the hero infront of him before sighing feeling defeated.

"Sorry." He says and All Might smiles.

"Are you sure I'm the one you're meant to be apologising too. Did you even get the chance to say goodbye."

Katsuki scowls. "I thought I said that I don't want to talk about Deku."

All Might sighs. "Very well then. Then back to the reason I called you here."

"Before that," the detective interupts. "Tomorrow afternoon there will be a meeting discussing Karma and you will have to be in attendance."

Katsuki groans as he shrinks into himself once again. Why couldn't everyone just shut up about Karma already.

"Ah thats right." All Might says. "You might as well bring Shinso as well."

"Yeah whatever." Katsuki says, all life practically sucked out of him. "Can you hurry up and tell me what you wanted to say. Class will start soon."

"Oh yes, thats right." All Might goes to drag a chair infront of Katsuki before taking a seat. "There's a story that I've yet to tell you so I think its about time I do. I think this will serve as a suitable distraction from your troubles although I'm afraid it might bring you even more."

"Go ahead." Says Katsuki, he need all the distractions he could get right now.

"Okay then." All Might sits up straight as Recovery girl and the detective listen from a distance. "You remember me explaining how One for All works, correct."

"Yeah, after you tricked me into taking the quirk."

All Might sighs, "you still think of it as me tricking you, huh. Fine then let's roll with that. I've told you how the quirk works but today I'm going to tell you about its origin. And I acknowledge that I probably should have told you all this before but I didn't see the benefit in worrying you so I apologise."

"Please get to the point."

All Might smiles. "One for All is a stockpiling quirk which can be passed on from user to user getting stronger as it does. But obviously there has to be a first user, the one who brought the quirk into the world. OFA is actually derived from a quirk that's called All for One and like the name suggests the user was able to steal quirks and make it his own, he could also grant quirks onto others." Katsuki pauses not knowing if he had heard correctly.

"Did you just say steal quirks. He could steal quirks?" All Might nods and feeling of dread starts to pool in Katsuki's stomach. This sounded a little to familiar to someone else, how much did the world hate him to keep bringing the one person who's existence he wants to ignore back up. Hopefully this is all just a coincidence.

"Everything started as quirks were first introduced to the world, the world had yet to adapt and discrimination against those who were quirked was bad. Society started to crumble as there were no laws put in place for these people. During this time of devastation a man rose up to gather the people together. He stole the quirks of those who wanted them gone or gave quirks to those who wanted more power. He quickly gathered pawns from all across the country and in no time at all he basically had full control over Japan.

He has the power to take and grant quirks, but those who received quirks couldn't handle the strain on their body for too long and became lifeless animated dolls, unable to speak."

"Like those monsters on TV?" Katsuki asks.

"Yeah, exactly like those monsters on TV." All Might replies. "From the USJ attack we have come to know them as Nomu's. But back to the story, not everyone who was granted a quirk became like that though, for some people the quirk given to them blended and mutated with their original quirk. AFO had a younger brother who was quirkless."

"Quirkless?"

All Might nods. "His brother had a strong sense of justice and was strongly against his actions. AFO one day forced a quirk upon his brother however, whether it was out of kindness or he was trying to get him to submit is unknown to me. The important part is that the younger brother wasn't so quirkless after all. It turned out he had a quirk which was able to be passed on to another. Therefore the stockpiling quirk forced upon him and his original quirk merged together creating OFA, the quirk you hold today."

"Oh." Is all Katsuki can manage to say.

"Oh, indeed. AFO being able to steal quirks also means that he could steal aging quirks, therefore allowing him to live indefinitely."

"So he's still alive?"

"Let me finish." Katsuki nods. "His brother not having enough power to stop him passed on the quirk to the next user who passed on their quirk to the next user, and to the next, and to the next, all the way till we get to the 9th user. You. This power accumulated little by little, and finally I was able to defeat him. Well that's what I thought, he's the villian I told you injured me 6 years ago. However now I think he is actually still alive, there is no doubt he is the one behind the league of villians, instructing them from behind the scenes. OFA is the power passed on specifically to beat AFO which means you may have to face him one day as well. But I plan to put and end to him before that so-"

"Whatever I don't care about that." All Might looks up at the teen, confused.

"You said this guy can steal quirks right."

"Yes, I said that quite a few times."

"Then is it possible for someone else to also have the same quirk."

"The same quirk?" All Might questions. "Well I guess it's possible, I'm not sure though. Although there would be a pretty good chance if it was a relative or something like tha-" All Might stops talking as he looks at the grave expression on Katsuki's face. "Katsuki why do you ask?"

"It's nothing."

"Are you sure?"

He nods before getting up. "I'm sorry but I should leave now. Class will start soon."

"Yeah ok." Is all All Might has time to say before Katsuki has already rushed out the door.

Katsuki dashes through the halls not stopping for a second for anything or anyone. He couldn't believe this was happening, it's like he couldn't leave Deku alone for a single second before he got himself into who knows what bullshit. This couldn't be happening, it all had to be a coincidence. Katsuki refused to believe that Deku was related to that evil phsyco in anyway. Katsuki stops. Now that he thinks about it it was completely possible, Hisashi Midoriya. He was meant to be in America but then again Aunty Inko and Izuku were meant to be there too. Well shit, Katsuki thinks.

Deku please stay safe.

Tension in the classroom is high as everyone decides it's much safer to gather on one side of the classroom. Away from the sulking teen who could and would quite literally kill them all if they dared to utter a single word. To say the whole class was too terrified to even move isn't an exaggeration. They had seen many emotions from Bakugo, anger, frustration, even quite a few fond smiles would you believe it or not but never, and I mean never have they seen him looking so upset. So heart broken. Call it instinct but they were pretty sure this wasn't normal or even natural, which only left a few conclusions, either that wasn't Bakugo or something really, really bad happened.

Out of the whole class only three people dared to go about there morning as usual despite the horrible energy in the room. There was no suprise that one of those people was Shinso, he had known Bakugo since before UA and has no doubt grown used to the different auras he let out. He sits on his desk quiet and solemn although somehow he also seemed to have a strange air of sadness around him.

The other two students who went about their day as normal were Iida and Todoroki, the two students who had been there first hand to see the chaos that reigned in Hosu not that many days ago. Little to the classes knowledge however, (minus Hitoshi and Bakugo) did they know that they also played a crucial role in how everything played out. Iida refuses to look at anyone keeping his eyes to himself, glued to his desk. Todoroki seemed to be preoccupied with whatever was going through his head, unlike Iida his gaze was fixed on the blond moping in his seat. Of course the rest of the classes focus was also on Bakugo but they still found this weird.

Overall everything was quiet, very quiet. It would have been less anxiety inducing if everything stayed quiet but then Todoroki just had to get up out of his seat walk over to Iida to drag him out of his, much to Iida's displeasure, and then pull him right infront of Bakugo.

The blond looks up, his usual scowl not on his face, just an expression which looks as if he could burst into tears at any second. The look on his face was enough to make anyone stop and do absolutely anything to wipe that expression of sadness off it, but like explained before, class 1a values their lives. Shinso looks up as well now as Todoroki holds Iida by his blazer to make sure he doesn't leave.

"I came hear to apologise." Out of all the things Todoroki could have possibly said no one expected it to be that. "Iida too."

"I did?"

"Yes, we did."

"Apologise about what asshole?" The tone at which those words came out of Bakugo's mouth was just as pitiful as the expression on his face. It could even quite possibly make someone's heart ache for him. But again, class 1a values there lives too much to have time to feel sorry for him.

"About Deku."

Shinso finally sits up. "Deku." Todoroki nods. "None of this was your fault, you don't have to apologise."

"But it is our fault."

"What, I don't even know who Deku is. I've never met him."

Todoroki grits his teeth kind of annoyed. "Yes you have." He tells Iida. "You've met him many times."

"I have?"

"Are you done? Can you leave now?" Bakugo says in a way too depressed tone.

"No I'm not done. Iida we have to apologise." He drags back the blue haired teen as he tries to go back to his seat.

"What am I apologising for, who's Deku."

"Oh for the love of-" Todoroki leans in close so only he can hear. "Karma, Deku is Karma." He aggressively whispers.

The class watch on in amazement as Iida seems to go through about fifty different emotions all at once as he connects the dots. They watch in even more amazement as out of nowhere he gets to his knees almost hitting his head against the floor.

"Bakugo I am truly sorry, I didn't know things would turn out like this. If I did then I wouldn't..." He looks up at him before this time probably actually hitting his head on the floor. "I-I, I'm sorry."

Bakugo clenhes his fist as he looks down at Iida then Todoroki who is now also on the floor. He opens his mouth as if to say something but probably thinks better of it as instead he turns away from them, gaze straight ahead. "I don't care if you're sorry or not, either way what's done is done." He grits his teeth. "I don't want your fucking apologies and don't expect my forgiveness. Just take responsibility for this and come with me after lunch to the meeting room tomorrow."

Todoroki looks up at him in confusion before slowly getting up, Iida still on the floor. "The meeting room?" He questions.

"Please." Says Shinso. "It would really help us out if you do. It doesn't even take a second after hearing those words that Todoroki nods okay.

"Just tell us when you need us, we'll go with you."

"I'll do anything to make up for this." Iida declares from the ground and Bakugo just rolls his eyes.

"Then get out of my sight." And that is exactly what they did, they went back to their seats same as before except now Todoroki seemed to be a little more down to earth while Iida guilty sat in his seat as he battles through all sorts of emotions. The memories appearing every time he even blinks. He remembers the dark. How it was noiseless, just pain. Suffering.

He feels regret. They all do.

Tsukauchi stands in the middle of the meeting room. The last time this had happened was after the USJ attack but now his focus wasn't the villians but Karma. He continues to stand there, eyes practically blazing as he stares down at Shota. Unfortunately the rest of the teachers in the room weren't that different, an air of resentment is clearly evident in the room but Shota can ignore that. Its not like he really cared what most of the teachers thought of him, he was never exactly popular to start with but now he was at a level where they would probably ignore his existence completely if they could, or send him snide remarks and that was going to be annoying. Shocking right, they were all meant to be heroes but Shota knows for a fact that's what will end up happening.

Tsukauchi finally done staring Shota down clears his throat and starts talking. "As you all know Karma's identity was revealed on the night that The Hero Killer Stain was captured. His face was accidentally revealed on TV and now his identity is completely know."

"Izuku Midoriya." One of the teachers contributes with not the best of tones.

"That's correct, it seems that most of the new information on him has already been publicly released. Then as you all should know his real name is Izuku Midoriya. He is currently 15 years old and his birthday is the 15th of July. His birth parents are Inko and Hizashi Midoriya. All of this is just trivial information but is also quite critical in furthering the investigation. As I'm assuming most of you in here may know, he also goes by the name of Deku." A bit too many gazes wondered over to Shota at that but he tried his best to completely ignore them, he doesn't regret anything so he has nothing to be ashamed of.

"After some time I was able to realise that the name Deku was just an alternative way to read the kanji of his actual name Izuku. considering I have never met this Deku before I hadn't made a connection but it seems like most people if not all of you in here have."

"Yes most of us met him during the sports festival." Vlad King comments. "He basically just barged into the staff area and created a ruckus."

"He was looking for Mic and Aizawa." Cementoss says.

Shota huffs, maybe it was a bad idea for him to have brought Deku to the sports festival. Although saying that wouldn't make much of a difference in this situation. It was already too late after all.

Tsukauchi continues to speak now, focus fully on Shota. "Yes I'm aware that Aizawa and Karma are very close it seems they have been for quite a while. And considering the argument that happened concerning the note that was snuck into Principle Nezu's office is it safe to assume Aizawa that it really was Karma that you had brought into the school." Shota huffs in agreement. "And I'm guessing you got through my questioning through half truths." Shota nods.

"Aizawa what are you up to. Are you doing something you shouldn't be." One of the teachers accuses and Shota grits his teeth.

"How am I doing something I shouldn't. I usually work with Vigilantes so what is the problem."

"But Shota this is more than just working with him." Nemuri pipes up uncertainly. "At the end of the day, with those Vigilantes you're nothing more than occasional work buddies. But Karma at this point probably knows everything about you and I wouldn't be suprised if he knew everything about this school too."

"Whatever he knows about this school is not my responsibility, and even if he does know everything about me I trust him."

"You really trust a murderer?" These teachers are starting to annoy him.

"Come on, the little listener is really not that bad. He-"

"Mic you knew that it was really Karma who left the note as well didn't you." Great, Shota thinks. Now they're targeting Mic.

"Dont bring Hizashi into this, he knew nothing I didn't tell him anything until much later."

"So are you saying you take full responsibility for that incident." Tsukauchi says, a not so friendly look on his face.

"What responsibility!" Shota shouts. "He was only there to warn us about the villian attack."

Vlad King glares at him. "And how exactly did he know in the first place?"

Shota stays silent not knowing how to answer.

With a huff Tsukauchi pinches the bridge of his nose. He looked tired, way to tired, it was an uncommon look for him. "Aizawa if you're still planning to get out of this with just half truths then I advise you stop now. Last time I made the mistake of only activating my quirk during our one on one interrogation, but it is in your best interest to know that even now my quirk is on."

Shota grits his teeth. "The league of villians tried to recruit him and he declined."

"So your saying that the league was stupid enough to reveal their whole plan to someone who wasn't even apart of them." One of the teachers says obviously not convinced.

"Look I don't know much about that situation, all he told me was that he found out their plan using his quirk."

"One second, on the news didn't it say he was quirkless?" Nemuri asks.

"Thats correct, he was initially quirkless till the age of 6 which we are guessing he gained a trauma quirk. What his quirk exactly is we're not sure so maybe Aizawa can shed some light onto that issue."

"I don't know." Shota says.

"Don't give us that bullshit! Are you really still trying to protect him. You mentioned something about his quirk during the entrance exam did you not."

Arms crossed Mic taps his fingers against his arm. "Now that I think about it All Might also mentioned something about his quirk during the entrance exam as well. Shota isn't the only one who knew about Deku before the sports festival, All Might and recovery girl did as well. Even you Tsukauchi, weren't you all the one's who questioned Shota about him."

"That was before we knew he was Karma." Recovery girl defends.

All Might sighs. "It was Young Bakugo that told us he had a memory reading quirk, Tsukauchi was there when he said it so it must be true."

"But Aizawa claimed he had a different quirk did he not." One of the other teachers says.

"Look, when I met him he used a nail based quirk around me, I don't know how he can possibly read memories as well but he can. He has never told me the details of his quirk, I don't think anyone knows."

"Aizawa that's a lie." Tsukauchi tells him. "You've been telling the truth so far so why are you lying now."

Shota grits his teeth. "There's only one person who knows what his quirk really is but I've never asked and at this point I doubt he'll tell anyone."

"Is it Katsuki." Shota stays silent. "I'm assuming from your silence it is Katsuki."

"Wait, how does Bakugo come into this?" Snipe wonders.

"Ha, that's right you said during the entrance exam that Katsuki is Deku's boyfriend." Vlad King snarls. "How many people in this damn school are affiliated with that villian."

"Well considering that the detective currently investigating me is also somewhat affiliated to him I guess its safe to assume that it's quite a lot of people." It was obvious to tell that Shota's snide remarks were not appreciated, but he didn't exactly appreciate their noseyness either.

Tsukauchi huffs. "The most I know is that Katsuki and Karma are childhood friends, that is precisely why I came here today to interrogate him. There's no doubt he knows the most about Karma since they've known each other their whole lives."

"And you really think he's going to tell you anything. You're mistaken if you think that for even a second Katsuki would let slip anything that would put Deku in danger."

All Might starts to speak. "But didn't they have a fight. Young Bakugo has been pissed the whole day because of it."

"You are all truly idiots aren't you. All Might why do you think Deku cane to see you yesterday morning."

"He came to the school yesterday?"

"Did you let him in again." To say the teachers are really starting to piss Shota off is an understatement.

He ignores all the teachers and continues what he was saying. "Deku came here to protect Katsuki because he knew his influence would have an effect on Katsuki in the future. And that time when he made me bring him into the school, who do you think he was thinking of the whole time he was here. He's not stupid enough to go into a school brimming with hero's, he came to protect Katsuki and Katsuki alone. Those two were all each other had so if you think for a second Katsuki would do anything to put him in any more danger than he's already in, well then you're wrong and have clearly underestimated the kid."

Tsukauchi looks down at him. "Aizawa do you think he really has a choice. If Karma truly wanted to protect him he would just give himself up right here right now. If Katsuki refuses to tell the truth he will become an accomplice just like you and your son. You have all been sheltering a murderer and I'm sure he knows that as well. I don't know what Karma thought running away could possibly do for Katsuki."

Shota laughs. "Knowing Izuku if we ever were arrested as his accomplice he would turn the world completely upside down. I know fully well what he's capable off and I'm afraid nothing will end well if it means Katsuki is involved."

Tsukauchi huffs. "Your being really difficult."

"I'm just stating the truth, is that not what you wanted from me."

Before Tsukauchi can reply a faint stomping can be heard as it slowly grows louder in volume. All the teachers are immediately brought to the attention of the door as it slams open, nearly swinging off it hinges. And right there in the center of the hallway is non other than Katsuki, absolutely fuming. Behind him are Hitoshi, Todoroki and Iida and Aizawa can't help but sigh.

"I won't let you capture Deku." He growls as he marches into the room. "I don't know what the fuck all of you have been discussing but I'm telling you right here right now that I won't let you get even anywhere near Deku."

"Ha." The detective laughs. "I guess you do truly care about this Deku. We've known each other quite a while yet you still managed to hide everything about Karma despite being fully aware I was on this case. If I didn't feel so stupid I would congratulate you, I guess deception is a common trait between you and your boyfriend."

"Tsukauchi you asshole, you think I would just outright tell you that Deku is Karma."

"No, but I would have thought you would have accidentally let it slip by now."

Nezu speaks for the first time since this meeting started. "Bakugo you nearly broke the door."

He turns to the fucking rat a mix of astonishment and anger on his face. "I've broken worse have I not."

"Yes but this is a professional meeting so let the nearly broken door be the most you break today." A bit flustered and not sure what to say Katsuki just nods.

Ignoring the momentary distraction, Tsukauchi clears his throat before speaking again. "Katsuki could you please shed some light onto Karma's quirk."

"Like hell I'm going to tell you anything!" Katsuki roars. "If you're going to arrest me, so be it just don't harm Deku!"

The detective sighs. "Okay then, you." He looks over to Hitoshi. "Hitoshi shinso correct?" Hitoshi nods. "Do you know anything about Karma's quirk."

"Ah-" Hitoshi starts as his eyes dart around the room. He was flustered and panicked and personally Shota didn't like the way Tsukauchi was handling this situation.

"I-i don't know anything about his quirk."

"That's a lie. Please refrain from lying, I have a lie detector quirk." That only seems to get Hitoshi more flustered and if it wasn't for the fact that this is a meeting (more like an accusation), Shota would have definitely caused a riot.

"I t-truly know nothing about his quirk. He's never told me about it."

"Yes but the part about you knowing nothing is a lie."

Hitoshi glances over to Mic and Shota before looking over to Katsuki as well. He looked so guilty and it broke Shota's heart.

"W-well Aizawa had some t-theories, b-but that's about it, I don't know anything else about his quirk." Shota doesn't miss the look that Katsuki sends his way.

"He has theories? What theories."

"None of your concern." Shota snaps. "Now can you please leave Hitoshi alone, he looks scared out of his mind."

"Fine then." Tsukauchi looks over to the last two people who could possibly shed some light onto this issue. "Shoto Todoroki and Tenya Iida, I don't know your relationship with Karma but if you know anything about his quirk please speak now."

"What if I refuse." Todoroki says.

"Pease cooperate."

"Well I don't want to. You have no right to make me talk."

"Wait he doesn't?" Hitoshi pipes up. "What so I could have just stayed silent?"

"A minor isn't allowed to be interrogated without the consent of a guardian but considering your guardian is also getting interrogated I'm not entirely sure in this situation." Todoroki says.

"I know nothing." Iida says, arm raised and a look of guilt on his face. "I apologise, this is all my fault. None of this would have happened if I hadn't-"

"Oh stop with the bullshit!" Katsuki snaps. "Just leave us alone, just leave Deku alone. Please just let him be." Katsuki says, almost pleading now. "I'll make sure he stays put and out of trouble, I'll do anything."

Tsukauchi couldn't help but send him a small smile at the genuineness of his words. "Unfortunately Katsuki that is not possible."

"Then make it possible." Katsuki is basically outright begging now, his desperation is clear.

Having enough of this Shota gets up. He couldn't bare to look at the expression hiding so much pain on Katsuki's face. He also hated having to drag so many other people into this situation.

"Tsukauchi." He yells and the detective watches him as he walks around the table to the centre of the room. The whole room suddenly goes silent as they watch Shota, the same man who masks all emotions, who would never do anything without a logical reason, who has no problem expelling a whole class on the spot.

They watch him get on his knees, head against the floor as the mess on his head known as hair hides the pitiful expression on his face.

"Tsukauchi." He says again. "Please don't look for Deku, I don't care how you do it but please find a way to leave him be. We just need more time, he promised to fix everything so please just give him more time."

"Aizawa..." Tsukauchi much like the rest of the people in the room stares on in shock. Never in their entire lives had anyone in that room imagined the would see Shota in such a vulnerable state.

"Me too", Mic says as he gets up from his chair taking his husbands lead, he makes his way next to him. Similarly he gets on his knees, head lowered. "Please don't capture the little listener. I haven't known him for long but he's not a bad person."

Katsuki is the next one to get down on his knees, and to say that the teachers who knew Katsuki personally weren't even more shocked than before would be a complete and utter lie. But then Hitoshi comes over as well, as does Todoroki and Iida.

"Don't look for Izu. If it wasn't for him I'd still be in some Foster home with a muzzle around my mouth."

"If it wasn't for Deku I would still be refusing to use my left side."

"If it wasn't for Karma, I wouldn't even be alive right now infront of you."

"If it wasn't for Izuku who knows what would have happened to me. So please Tsukauchi," Katsuki begs, "I know you've never really liked me but please just this once consider me and how I feel, don't look for Deku. I beg you." To think that Katsuki could get over his pride and beg on his knees came as a shock to everyone. But Shota wasn't suprised, Mic wasn't suprised, neither was Hitoshi and all the people who knew Deku personally. Katsuki held the last string of Deku's sanity Similarly to how Deku held Katsuki's. If Katsuki could he'd do even more just to protect Izuku.

Tsukauchi sighs not knowing what to say. He doesn't need to say anything though as All Might gets up to stand right infront of Katsuki. Everyone in the room expecting him to make the boy get up or something like that definitely didn't expect All Might, the symbol of peace and the protector of Japan to also get on his knees looking up at Tsukauchi.

"Toshinori what on earth are you doing!"

All Might smiles. "Come on Tsukauchi look at all the people on the floor begging you on Karma's behalf. Who knows how many people wouldn't be here right now if it wasn't for him."

"Are you defending a murderer."

"Isn't that a little harsh calling him a murderer. He's also saved many lives."

"Yes and ended many lives as well."

"Tsukauchi look around. If it wasn't for Karma do you think any of these children would be here right now. Aizawa and Mic wouldn't have found such a special child to call their own. And Iida and Todoroki would have been kidnapped and taken away on their first day of school. And Katsuki, do you think Katsuki would be such a..." He pauses, looking for the right word. "Charismatic? And lively? person if he didn't have that person he so desperately loves."

"Why did you look so unsure when you talked about me?" Katsuki questions, eyes furrowed but All Might just waves him off.

"My point is, the fact that Karma can get so many people on their knees just to save him, the fact that he can get so many people to truly care about him despite who he is. Do you really think its worth arresting him and getting rid of such a bright hope that this country desperately needs."

"Toshinori you're the number 1 hero you can't be doing this."

"Exactly, it is my job to protect all the people of this country yet I failed to save the future of this country which a young child had to take the responsibility and do it in my place. Now I know better, I'm going to do everything in my power to stop this unsightly corruption in our country and that starts with Karma stopping the traffickers who think they have a right to sell children like merchandise."

Still in her seat Nemuri stares at the scene, tears prickling her eyes. "Shota." He looks up. "Do you really care about him that much?" Shota nods, not even hesitating for a second.

"Yagi are you sure about this?" Recovery girl calls out as well."

"Yeah." All Might replies.

"Well then Tsukauchi." Nedzu calls out. "What are you going to do. I don't really think you can say no when they all try to convince you like that."

Tsukauchi sighs. "All of you please get up."

"Not until you promise to not harm Deku!" Katsuki retorts.

The detective sighs once again. "I'm afraid I can't promise that."

"Then I'm afraid I will not be getting up any time soon."

"Katsuki I am a police officer. I may be in charge of this case but at the end of the day I cannot control what happens."

"Well you can atleast try." Katsuki barks.

"Can you please let me finish. I cannot control what happens, and if this case gets taken out of my hands I will no longer be able to do anything. I am a police officer and care about my values. However with all of you infront of me like this I really can't deny." Katsuki lights up. "In the first place I never intended to out everything about Karma. I'm the only one who knows his relation to UA after all."

"So what are you saying?"

"I had already been given a list of questions to ask you before coming here and they're all about your childhood nothing to do with you and Karma now. I'm the only officer that knows about the both of you anyway so in the first place the investigation was never going to go that far." Tsukauchi sighs as he runs his fingers through his hair. "I was just upset that all of you knew so much yet hid it from me. I've been on this case for 10 years yet all of you could face me despite knowing that."

"Sorry." Katsuki mutters.

"Yeah whatever there's nothing I can do now. Fine then I'll let it go, we'll just do what I came here to do originally. I won't ask anymore about Karma other than in your childhood but just know that if it comes to it and anything that transpired here is somehow found out I will have to reveal what I know."

"That's good enough for me."

"Good, so all of you get up."

Tsukauchi rubs his temple, exhaustion catching up to him. He watches as they all get up and can't help but gaze in awe at the sheer amount of people Karma had brought onto their knees for him. If that wasn't enough of a reaction to make anyone give in to their request then Tsukauchi doesn't know what is. But one thing is for sure, Deku is truly loved.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Here's the list of questions I'll be asking you, you can say half truths if you want I won't question it but please don't straight up lie. I'm not the only one with a truth quirk in the police force. Whatever information is revealed is up to you since right now you're our main lead." Katsuki nods after skimming through the paper and handing it back to the detective.

The teachers and the few students in the room all watch from their seats as Katsuki takes a seat in the middle of the room along with Tsukauchi. The detective signals for everyone to be quiet before switching on a voice recorder.

"Ok then, your name is Katsuki Bakugo, 15 years old and currently attending UA Hero course correct." Katsuki nods.

"Do you know the name Izuku Midoriya?"

"Yeah." Katsuki acknowledges.

"Who was he to you?"

"We were childhood friends. Our mum's were friends and practically neighbours back then so naturally we were forced to always be together."

"Could you explain his personality? What he liked to do?"

Katsuki huffs. "Back then Deku was a damn freak, he always followed me around and did that weird mumbling thing."

"Weird mumbling thing?"

"He'd always talk super fast non stop about whatever bullcrap he was on about. Mostly about heroes, he was obsessed. His room was practically a shrine. He also had his stupid notebooks where he'd analyse hero fights. Basically he was like any other hero obsessed child."

"Even after he was diagnosed as quirkless?" Katsuki pauses and Shota can't help but suck in a breath.

"Yeah." Katsuki says solemnly. "Even after he was diagnosed as quirkless he still wanted to be a hero." Katsuki looks down at his clenched fist. Maybe doing the interrogation in front of the whole UA staff board wasn't a really good idea.

"And did anything change after he was diagnosed as quirkless? No weird theories or ideologies put into his head?"

Katsuki shakes his head. "I doubt that, Deku was too nice for his own good. He barely changed... ah-"

"What is it?" Tsukauchi urges.

"Nothing."

"That's a lie."

Katsuki grits his teeth. "He didn't change all that much, just became quieter and seemed to try and keep out of everyone's way. He was still annoying as always though."

"What do you think were the reasons for these changes." Katsuki stays silent as he refuses to look away from his hand. "Bakugo, what do you think were the reasons for these changes."

"He was quirkless, what other reason could I possibly give."

Tsukauchi sighs, "That's a lie."

"Look I don't know."

"Also a lie." Katsuki grits his teeth in frustration.

"Look he was being bullied. What else would you expect to happen when children are being brain washed into thinking those without quirks are nothing but dirt."

"Bullied how exactly? Be specific."

"Why are you going so deep into this anyway, this wasn't what you told me you'd ask about." Katsuki complains a little agitated now.

Tsukauchi gives him a pointed look before asking him again. "Please be specific."

"Urgh, what do you want me to be specific about, Deku was bullied. Called names, picked on, often left out and isolated. What more do you want."

"You call him Deku why is that?"

Katsuki grits his teeth for who knows what time that day. "Can we stop now, I don't want to do this anymore."

"I'm afraid that we can't, unless you want me to come back with more officers please answer the questions."

"Damn you asshole. Deku is just another way to pronounce the Kanji of his first name, it meant useless. I called him that to make fun of him." Todoroki narrows his eyes in displeasure from where he sits.

"Thank you for being honest."

"Yeah whatever."

"You mentioned your mother and Inko Midoriya were friends."

"Yeah."

"Could you describe her personality for me."

"I don't know, she was nice I guess. Aunty would always come over with Deku. She'd always get upset when I yell but for some reason that would never anger me." Katsuki frowns. "She cried really easily as well, Deku too. It just kind of ran in the family." Not anymore though, Katsuki thinks.

"And have you met Hisashi Midoriya?" Katsuki shakes his head. "Ok then do you know where Inko Midoriya went."

"It was when I was around 6 years old. Deku didn't come to school for like a week. I didn't think much of it but all of a sudden Aunty Inko said she was moving to America to meet her husband. She said that she was bringing Deku along with her but I guess as you know that didn't actually happen."

"So she just left, you never saw her again."

"No."

Tsukauchi huffs looking down at the paper of questions. "Okay last question, did you ever see Izuku Midoriya again after that."

Katsuki sighs, thankfully he had already prepared an answer for that question so he didn't have to lie. "Yeah I saw him again after that." He could see the discomfort on Aizawa and Hitoshi's faces.

"When I was nine I was kidnapped by traffickers. Imagine my suprise when the rumoured Karma ended up being the little quirkless boy who was meant to be in America."

All the teachers look at each other feeling the uncomfortable tension in the air. Aizawa stares at the blond as he sit looking a little frustrated. He would have never thought that their relationship stemmed from hatred.

"Thank you for your time." Tsukauchi says. "That's all the questions." He switches off the recording device and looks up at Katsuki a soft and apologetic smile on his face. "Are you okay?"

"Why wouldn't I be?"

"I think I went into a personal topic for a little there, I'm sorry."

"Whatever."

"Your one of the bullies he told me about aren't you." Todoroki pipes up out of nowhere. The words practically bursting from his mouth.

The room is silent and the tension only skyrockets. No one expects to hear the cackling of the blond as he gets up out of his chair. "Ha, of course he'd fucking tell you that. Can't keep his mouth shut for a second."

"Even if Katsuki was one of his bullies," Aizawa interupts, "its obvious that they've sorted things out."

"Deku really is too nice." Todoroki sighs.

"He's a fucking nightmare that's what he is." Katsuki retorts.

A smile appears on Tsukauchi's face. "That's a lie."

"Fuck you asshole, I'm leaving."

——

As soon as the meeting is over and Katsuki and Aizawa are able to leave that godforsaken room Katsuki is dragging his teacher off to somewhere quiet. He signals for Mic and Shinso to follow as well.

He drags them to a random classroom, all of them empty by now as all students had left the school. Making sure no one is around he closes the door as Aizawa, Mic and Shinso stand there in confusion.

"What was that about?" Katsuki hisses.

"What was what about?"

"Deku's quirk. You said you had theories but didn't know exactly."

"Ah." Shinso pipes up. "Well that's kind of..." He looks over to Aizawa who sighs.

"Katsuki could you please explain Deku's quirk to us. Yes I had theories but they're all probably far off and wrong, so would you please explain."

"Ha." Katsuki combs his fingers through his spikes of hair. "I don't even know anymore. I'm so confused, I don't know what to think."

Unsure of what exactly is going on Mic speaks up. "What do you mean your confused, don't you know the listener's quirk."

"Of course I do, and that's what makes it even more confusing. Aizawa do you happen to know about AFO and what happened six years ago?"

Aizawa's eyes widen, his calm demeanour wavering. "So this does have something to do with AFO after all."

"What?" Shinso yelps. "AFO as in the AFO you were telling me about." He asks Aizawa and the hero just nods. He takes a seat knowing he's going to need to sit down for this conversation.

Mic looks at Aizawa, a concerned yet serious look on his face. "What relation does Deku have with AFO." He asks Katsuki.

The blond sighs. "How on earth would I know. Thats what I'm trying to figure out."

"What do you mean how should you know? Why wouldn't you know?" Shinso snaps a little.

"Look I just found out about AFO yesterday from All Might, I didn't know who he was before that."

"First of all what's Deku's quirk."

Katsuki grits his teeth. "It's exactly like AFO's. He's able to steal quirks or give quirks to others."

"Ha." Aizawa runs his fingers through his hair feeling fidgety. He did not appreciate all this extra concerning information after that long ass meeting. "Go into more detail, maybe there's some difference between the quirks."

"There isn't much detail to go into."

"Fine then. How exactly does he take quirks, physical contact, through some sort of control."

Katsuki shakes his head. "He can kind of just suck it out of you. He doesn't need physical contact or anything like that. It would be hard for anyone to realise that it was even due to a quirk."

"Okay then. What about limitation. Are there any important limitations?"

"I'm pretty sure he can only use one quirk at a time. I'm not really sure. I think he also takes on the limitations of whatever quirk he takes. Oh right. He told me once that him taking a quirk somehow makes it stronger, so I guess he can also somehow upgrade a quirk."

"Well that's one major difference." Mic says. "See maybe this could all just be a coincidence.

"That isn't enough of a difference. We still can't know anything for sure." Aizawa sighs. "I say for now we keep this between ourselves and trust in Deku. Even with this new information there's really nothing we can do about it."

"That doesn't stop me from worrying though." Aizawa sends a small smile Shinso's way.

"It will be okay, everything will end up just fine eventually."

"Yeah." Katsuki agrees, mostly just to not worry Shinso, although he couldn't exactly believe the words himself so he doesn't know how reassuring they really are. He sighs. He can't take much more of this.

———

Toru bounces up and down, rather energetically as she speaks to Uraraka. "Did you hear about Karma? Apparently he appeared again on the news."

"Oh yeah I heard about that this morning. I don't understand though, shouldn't he be laying low since he's identity has been exposed."

"No, no. I respect that." Kirishima interupts, butting into their conversation. "Despite the obstacles that stand in his way he still thrives to do the good things. The manliest of men indeed."

"Killing people is a good thing?" Asui questions out loud.

Kaminari also decides to join the conversation. "Well they're bad people right. He only kills the bad people."

"Denki we're training to be hero's." Mina says, interfering as well. "You can't just kill bad people because they're bad, that makes you a bad person as well."

"Wait seriously? So does that make Karma a bad person?" Kaminari asks.

"I think he's a bad person?" Uraraka says, finger to her chin in contemplation. "Kind of hard to believe he's the same age as us."

"I know right, its so scary to think about." Mina shudders rather dramatically. "That could have somehow ended up being any one of us."

"Oh gosh you're right." Yaoyorozu butts in as well having been listening from a distance. "I do feel bad for him though, he was kind of forced upon this."

"If any of you say one more fucking thing about Karma, I swear I'll-" Hitoshi slaps his hand across Katsuki's mouth, saving the class from hearing the horrendous actions he would a hundred percent commit if they don't shut up.

"He's in a bad mood, like a really bad mood."

"He's been in a bad mood ever since we came back from hero placements." Jirou points out.

"Yes and I'll continue to be in a bad mood if you all don't shut your trap." Katsuki snaps.

Aizawa walks into the class already loathing the rest of this talk. "Everyone settle down. As you all know we're getting closer to the midterm exams so study hard you lot." Aizawa observes the people with the lowest grades in the class who aren't even batting an eye at the situation. That might be the case now but that was about to change. "Oh yeah. Quick notice, on the last week of summer break we will be going to a summer break forest lodge so that's something to look forward to." Noise erupts in the class and Aizawa covers his ears.

"Yeah, yeah, exciting I know. Except anyone who fails on their midterms will be in school taking remedial exams instead. So unless you want to be taking more exams during your summer break I advice you put the effort in. We have about a month before exams which will consist of a written and practical assessment, failure in either will result in an overall fail meaning your stuck at school. So no pressure I guess. So on that note all of you get yourselves out of here and go home and study, the sooner the better."(😭I should be studying, i need an Aizawa in my life to make me study, we all do.)

Katsuki watches as all his classmates happily get up all excited for summer break. Some of them panicking at the thought of having to pass all their exams but Katsuki has no reason to worry so no reason to care about anyone else's worries. He has no reason to care about anything to be honest and no reason to remain in the classroom as all his classmates leave yet Aizawa signals for him to stay so he can talk to him. He is definitely not in the mood for this because the topic is no doubt Deku.

"Are you still angry at him." Aizawa asks a slight look of concern on his face once all the extras are gone.

Katsuki grits his teeth. He knew it. "Of course I'm still angry with him, why wouldn't I be. Look what I had to go through because of him. Forget about that, I don't even care about the interrogation anymore, the worse part is that I know for a fact he probably still doesn't know why I got so angry."

"And why did you get so angry."

"Because he doesn't tell me anything and thinks it's okay to carry all these burdens alone. It pisses me off."

"Katsuki." Aizawa finally says after pausing for some time. "Izuku might not have changed his phone yet, it might not be too late to contact him."

"And why should I do that?"

"Because you both shouldn't end things off like this, you have no idea when the next time you'll see each other will be. Do you really want to meet again all awkward because of your last fight."

"Who says I want to see him again. He said he's never coming back so that's exactly what he should do."

"Don't you think that's a little harsh." Shinso says from his desk where he still sits.

Aizawa huffs. "Katsuki, most things that boy does he does it for you. Its so blatantly obvious that he priorities you over everything else in this world and I know you care about him just as much as he does you. Why else would you contact me, a person you didn't even know back then to help Deku with his nightmares."

"What do you mean. I only did that because there was no one else I could possibly ask."

"Exactly, you did that despite the risk because you care about his wellbeing. Same for Deku. Katsuki did you know that the day before Deku had come into UA as a transfer student he walked around unfamiliar streets alone for 24 hours because he didn't want to put you in danger. He had been forced to consume something which tracked his whereabouts for 24 hours."

"Oh." Shinso says. "So that was the 'mysterious substance' he was talking about back then."

"Hold up, didn't he also say he got a feather from Hawks back then. So either way what was the point, instead of being tracked by villians he got himself tracked by a hero that's just as bad."

"Ah. Good point." Why was Shinso still even here Katsuki wonders.

"Okay maybe that wasn't the best example. Well then what about when he asked me to let you train with us. He only did it in hopes of improving your mental health and so you could make a new friend."

"What is he my mum? I don't need his help to make new friends."

"Yes but it worked didn't it?" Shinso pipes up once again.

Katsuki snorts. "Who says we're friends."

"Oh I'm sorry. I didn't realise you thought of me as your best friends." Aizawa sighs as the two glare each other down.

"Deku had no right to do that to 'improve my mental health' while he locked his feelings away and was suffering." Aizawa sighs again.

"Ok then. What about that time he told me about? With the bullies in middle school."

"You mean the three idiots I sent to the hospital. How is this even going to help your argument. He cares about me? If he didn't want things to escalate he should have just kept his mouth shut."

"Okay I'm confused now." Hitoshi pipes up once again.

"It happened when All Might tricked me into taking one for all then abandoned me for two weeks while I was struggling trying not to kill my class. The fuckers thought I lost my quirk or something, long story short we were all hospitalised."

"Oh wow."

"Okay that wasn't the best example either but I'm running out of them. Fine then he signed the note he left on Nezu's desk about the USJ to remove any risk of the teachers not doing anything."

"Oh so that what he was here for. I was wondering why he was asking about Nezu's office. I guess that makes sense. Although you got in trouble didn't you. What's funny is that when this happened you went absolutely ballistic and yelled your heart out at him calling him selfish, so why am I in the wrong right now. I remember you even saying things like, 'its like you want to get caught'. You understand why I'm upset at him don't you so why are you trying so hard right now to make me forgive him?"

Aizawa sighs. "What about him helping you control OFA. That has got to count for something."

"Aizawa stop. I get it okay, he cares about me, he's done a lot for me because of that. That still doesn't change the fact that he refuses to let anyone know how he's feeling. It was fine at first because he had you to talk too, but now you both have grown closer and he doesn't open up as much now does he? I don't know where he gets this from but it's like the closer he is to a person the more he wants to hide his true feelings, it's annoying. Aizawa I understand what you're trying to do but I'm not ready to forgive him. Not until he finally realises the situation and stops messing around. He's playing with his life!"

"Katsuki. Just don't have any regrets later on."

"I won't know if I'll regret this until later so whats the point of worrying now."

Dabi sighs as he leans back to rest against the bar table, the clatter of cups being overriden by the chattering of villians all left to their own devices. This was tiring, he was starting to regret agreeing to Deku's request.

He was right. It was pretty easy to get into the league of villians, he also somehow ended up as the leader of the Vanguard action squad. That was a shitty name but he'd rather not complain and get turned into dust. Deku was right, Shigiraki Tomura is really childish. It's almost surprising that he could contain so much evil. Then again he's surrounded by villians, all evil in their own right. Well that's what Dabi had always thought, that was until he met Himiko Toga and the boy who insisted on being called Mustard. In fact most of these villians in this room didn't seem all that bad, except muscular of course and moonfish who thankfully isn't in the bar right now. They seemed like pure evil and the fact that one of the pure evils, muscular had tried to confront Dabi several times because he was appointed as leader is a matter that Dabi is going to make sure Deku severely pays for.

He doesn't know what came over him or what he could possibly be thinking but he had an urge to try and get rid of some of the evil inhabiting these people. Maybe it was seeing the two children, about the same age as Deku, Mustard even younger, which broke his heart. He wasn't any older than them when he first left home. Why is it that society liked to fail children like this, and then they had the audacity to say all kinds of shit about them when they finally say fuck it and decided to be a villian. To live by their own rules. Why were these two children being discriminated against because of their quirks, just flat out abandoned. Why was Deku put into a situation which gave him no choice but to start killing from an early age? Why was Dabi abandoned, thrown away when he was no longer of use anymore? Why did society like to disregard the young?

He sighs debating on whether he should do something. Most of the villians in this room weren't villians at all, just broken. It may be too late to convince the others, and a little too dangerous at that, but Dabi could always try and convince the two children that it's not too late to find somewhere you belong. And if he couldn't find a place like that for them, maybe he'd have to just make one. (Omg I'm just making this up as I go but that is actually a really good story idea, it would be so cute. I would definitely read.)

They would only be here for another hour or so, Shigiraki only allowed them into the base because he wanted to understand them all better, quirks, personality and all. They had been warped here by mist man so soon enough they'd be warped back into the old warehouse that Shigiraki has been making them gather and stay. Maybe that would be Dabi's chance, but then again this was a stupid idea. Villian or not he was only here to keep those UA brats safe, who became a villian or not was none of his concern. Well damn, he thinks. Whether UA students were safe or not was never any of his concern either yet here he is now. He balmed fucking Deku for this, if he gets caught and turned into dust he's going to haunt him for the rest of his pitiful life on the run from the law.

Eventually Shigiraki got tired of them all, he said they were all too noisy so he sent them back earlier than Dabi had expected. As soon as they were back in the warehouse everyone went about their day, most of the villians leaving as they still had somewhere to go back to, somewhere they'd rather be than cramped up in a warehouse. Dabi wishes he had somewhere else to be than crammped up in a warehouse, maybe soon that'll change once he's finished helping out Deku. Keigo is nice and all and a really good friend but he couldn't exactly help Dabi all that much with his living conditions or anything for that matter. It wasn't like Dabi expected much from him anyway even if he is a hero. That guy is more reckless than anything, probably even more reckless than Deku.

Dabi had lived his life in the shadows of the city away from sight where no one could find him. He never exactly had anything to live for but he never had a reason to die either. Maybe deep down he actually wants revenge, revenge on all those who've wronged him. Or maybe he just actually wants to feel loved, feel normal again, not feel like an outcast. Then he met Keigo. He was an idiot, no better way to describe him. He was a hero in training yet still took time out of his day to actively seek Dabi out to talk to him, at first it was annoying. Then it became normal, nice even, it felt good knowing he had a friend to talk too and thankfully that didn't stop even after Hawks became an official hero and as he climbed the ranks all the way up to 3rd.

Dabi sighs as he watches the blond girl who he's been monitoring get up and leave the warehouse. Not that long later Dabi is following her. He still isn't sure if he should try and convert her to his side or not but at this point he was already trailing her and might as well take his chances.

"Hey Toga." Dabi calls out to the bubbly girl happily skipping through the streets.

"Oh it's Dabi." She almost sings as she rushes over to him, smile fixed in place on her face. "What is it, did you want to tell me something?"

He shakes his head. "Just wanted to know you better."

"Who me?" She points at herself with a slight frown, clearly not expecting that.

"Thats what I said."

"I'm not really worth knowing though." She says a slight frown on her face.

"That's not true, we're going to be together for quite a while so of course it's worth knowing more about you."

She thinks for a second before her previous grin appears back on her face, mouth stretching from ear to ear. "Well then my name is Himiko Toga and I really like the colour red." She grins as she starts taking long slow strides down the street as Dabi follows besides her.

"Red?"

"Uh huh. The colour of blood. Its such a pretty colour don't you think?"

"I guess you could say that."

"Blood, has such a nice smell and taste, and it looks amazing what's not to love. Although others don't see it like that though." She pouts a little. "I try telling them that they'd look much better with a little blood on them but they just think I'm a phsyco." She turns to Dabi. "What about you Dabi. Do you like blood, or do you think I'm a phsyco as well?"

"Ah. Blood isn't really my style, although I don't think your a phsyco."

"You don't?"

"Well your quirk requires blood, doesn't it? Naturally your drawn to it, why wouldn't you be."

She stops. "Oh." She says. "Really?"

"Yeah, isn't that a known fact?"

She shakes her head. "No one has ever said that to me, they would always just say things like I'm not normal, I'm crazy, I'm a phsyco." She looks at Dabi and he can't help but spot the underlying hope hanging in her eyes. "So its because of my quirk?"

"I mean probably. Blood is just another part of your diet, you probably need it to sustain yourself."

"Sustain myself?" She repeats.

"Ah, how should I explain this. Maybe your just blood starved. You now how when people are severely dehydrated and unable to find water, they start to hallucinate and normal bodily functions can no longer work properly. Its the same when you starve yourself, you have no energy for your body to work. Maybe you're just blood starved. You probably need blood to satisfy yourself."

"Oh." She says again. "You really think so." Dabi nods. "So I'm not weird?"

"You don't seem weird to me, you seem pretty normal to me. Except for whatever weird blood obsession you've got going on there, but to each their own you know."

"So am I weird or am I not weird?"

"You're not weird, and I don't think your a phsyco either." Dabi smiles as she looks at the floor with utmost concentration.

"Oh." She says once again. "So I'm not weird. I'm normal?"

"Do you think I'm normal?"

She looks up. "I don't know? I'm not sure what normal is."

"Then does it matter if your normal or not. Who cares as long as you have someone who loves you for you."

"But I don't have anyone like that. Do you?"

Dabi shakes his head. "Maybe. I'm not really sure. I have friends at least."

"I used to have friends. But then they all left me, they said I was a freak, so did mother and father."

A sad smile appears on Dai's face as he decides to start walking again not exactly sure where they were going but just going with it. It isn't good for them to stay in one spot for too long after all. "Well I don't think your a freak so why don't we be friends."

"Wait really?" She says shocked.

"What you don't want to? Do you think I'm a freak then?" She shakes her head as her previous grin slips back onto her face, it was truly a shame that society abandoned such a sweet girl. Dabi smiles as well, genuinely this time. "Then that's that, let's be friends."

She squeals as she jumps up and down, clapping her hands. She turns to walk backwards to look at Dabi full of energy. "We're friends now right, so what now!"

"What do you mean?"

"Friends are meant to do all kinds of stuff together right. So what should we do now?"

Dabi looks at her a bit bewildered. "Well I don't know? Continue doing what we were doing before I guess." At some point the two had stopped in a deserted back alley to hang out there instead of walking around aimlessly.

"The getting to know each other part?" She asks.

"Yeah, that seems like a good course of action."

She looks up to the sky as she thinks for a moment. "Well you already know that I love red, and you know my name and my quirk so what else could you possibly want to know?"

"I don't know. What your hobbies are, your favourite movies, things you like and dislike. Stuff like that."

"Ohh ok then." She claps her hands in excitement. "I like stabbing, stabbing counts as a hobby right?" Dabi opens his mouth to protest but the girl continues talking before he can even get a word out. "I don't really like movies and its been quite a while since I last watched any. I like the colour red and I like stabbing because it reveals the colour red, oh oh I also like saito. No wait I used to like Saito but now not as much. I dislike my parents and I hate my old school and my old friends. Now your turn."

"Uhh." Dabi tenses up getting a bad feeling. "...I don't really have any hobbies, I also haven't watched any movies in quite a while. I like rock music and I hate endeavour. OK now who's Saito."

"Oh, so its my turn again." she smiles. "Saito was this really cute boy. He was so cool and so brave and looked so good in red."

"Oh." Dabi asks letting himself relax.

"I became Saito." She says a little too cheerfully. Dabi really wishes she had just stopped at the looks good in red part.

"You became him? As in your quirk. Did he give you permission for that."

"I need permission to stab people?" Dabi pinches the bridge of his nose.

"So you killed him?"

"What, is that weird. Do you think I'm weird now?" He shakes his head still a little shocked.

"No. I just don't think that's the best way to express your love to others."

"What?"

Dabi sighs thinking over his words carefully. "If you love someone or care about then then you probably shouldn't kill them."

"Your not meant to kill the person you love?" It is very concerning how shocked she looks at that revelation. "But he looked so good drenched in blood," she whines, "his face was all tear stained and cute."

Dabi sighs again. He almost wanted to laugh, not that long ago he was calling her a sweet girl but obviously she had a lot of underlying problems which no one had ever bothered to fix. "His face was all tear stained because he was crying and in pain. Your not meant to hurt the person you love."

"Your not?"

"No."

"Then did father not love mother?" Dabi pauses not knowing what to say. This took an unexpected turn and was staring to hit a little too close to home.

"No, your father didn't love your mother. Maybe he did at once but if he hurt her, on purpose, all the time, then maybe all that love disappeared."

"Humph." Toga huffs, crossing her arms. "How does that make sense. I became Saito, his love will always be with me now."

"Toga you drank his blood right." She nods. "Can you even turn into him anymore."

"Well no."

"Then what exactly is always with you."

"Saito?"

"What part of Saito?"

"I...I don't know."

"Toga." He looks over to her trying to find the best way for him to understand. "Lets say for now blood is what connects you two together since you don't seem to fully understand yet. If Saito was alive right now he would still be with you wouldn't he. You could still be him whenever you wanted, blood multiplies, a person can always make more, but not once they're dead. That connection between you two, that love can always grow, but not if he's dead. Do you understand?"

"No."

Dabi sighs. "Okay, that's fine. No rush."

"Was what I did wrong?"

He smiles. "I don't blame you, its not your fault. Its not anyones fault really. You've had a shitty upbringing with unexpected circumstances just like me, that's not something you can control. But its fine, you shouldn't let others tell you how to be you, but you should take other people's feelings into consideration as well."

"That's confusing."

Dabi chuckles. "Yeah it is, isn't it. You'll understand eventually. That's if you do want to understand. I can help you if you want, I know people who are also willing to help, who won't judge you for being you because they've been in the same position. If you want, do you think you could follow me?"

"Follow you?" She repeats her eyes widening in slight panic. "Where are you going? Are you going to leave the league? Are you going to leave me? But we just became friends."

"That's why I'm asking if you want to come with me, but even if you decide not to that wouldn't stop us from being friends."

"But where are you going?"

"I'm going somewhere that was promised to me. Maybe finally I'll get the life that I missed out on, you can too. You don't have to answer me now, you can think about it."

"No it's OK." She says almost instantly. "I trust you. Your my friend, friends trust each other right?"

Dabi smiles, the wide grin on her face surprisingly contagious. "Yeah, they do."

Chapter End Notes

Yay I've finaly caught up to where I am on Wattpad. To be honest I haven't been updating very regularly which I apologise for.

Due to me currently sitting mock exams and my actual exams getting closer I'm not going to be posting any more chapters for a while. My exams won't end till June but there's a likely chance that I may post a chapter before that.

Thank you all for reading and for all your comments as well💜 💙

Chapter 41

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Shota cautiously walks up to an abandoned warehouse, not walking in until he had looked for all possible exits first and made sure no one could possibly sneak up behind or ambush him. He doesn't know if the person he was meeting is dangerous or not but its better to be safe than sorry.

"You must be Eraserhead." Shota looks towards the voice as he walks through the door. The man sat atop some boxes right in the middle of the room. What he noticed first was the endless amounts of staples reflecting in the minimal light as they held together his charred skin. At first it did startle him but made Shota wonder what on earth happened to get him in this state.

"Yes I'm Eraserhead." Shota answers. "And I'm assuming you're Dabi."

"Yeah that's me." He gets off the boxes before walking towards Shota. "You're close with Deku right?"

"That's right. What about him?"

"Then he told you about me didn't he? He told you what he asked me to do?"

Shota nods. "Everything has been sorted, I've talked it out with the principal of UA, once all of this over you will be given shelter and protection from the law, and anything else that you would so wish."

Dabi smiles. "Anything?"

Aizawa holds back a grimace, maybe he should have phrased that differently. "Well anything that we are capable of."

"So if I said I want to try and convince two people who just joined the LOV with me to leave would you give them shelter as well?" Out of all things the man could have possibly said that is not what Shota thought would be one of them.

"That's what you want?" He nods a look of confidence on his face. "I mean sure that can be arranged but isn't that risky."

"These two aren't bad people, well I'm sure they're not. I wouldn't put myself at risk if they weren't obviously unchangeable. They're just kids who ended up drawing the short end of the stick in life, ya know what I mean."

Shota sighs as he looks at the man, he didn't miss the brief look of sadness on his face.

"Fine you're free to do as you want. I will arrange for not just you but also the other two to be given shelter as well, if you manage to convince them that is. It will be hard if they already have criminal charges but we could always find a way."

"Thank you."

"Its no trouble at all. Deku is annoying for springing this on me out of nowhere but just know that I appreciate what you're doing. This could quite possibly save a lot of students so thank you."

"Its no problem." Dabi smiles.

"If you are to get caught by the league however, I'm afraid there wouldn't be that much we could do since this technically isn't an official undercover job." He seems to get a bit worried at that. "But rest assured, if you make me aware of it, even if it's single handedly I will try my best to save you. Although that will be hard without the location of their base."

"I'm sorry, they warp us into the base whenever we're there so we never get to know the location."

Shota sighs. "They're much more careful than I initially anticipated. That's fine, just give me your phone number, it won't be too hard to track your location if I ever need to."

The man nods as he takes out his phone, a pretty old model that Shota is pretty sure is no longer on the market. In no time at all the two have exchanged numbers and Shota should start getting on his way in time to make it into school. Shota leaves first, still a little cautious. Dabi seemed nice and way more selfless than he let on but he guesses Deku has a knack for finding good people. It would be a pleasure to get to know Dabi once everything is over and done with and times are peaceful once again.

'If that time ever comes', a voice in the back of his head says but shota swiftly buries that thought far far away.

———

Now walking side by side towards their meeting point, Dabi smiles at the middle schooler who looks just about ready to rip his eyes out from their sockets.

"What do you want?" Mustard snarls.

"Just to know you better, thats all." Dabi didn't think he'd be doing this again but things had turned out well for Toga so he decided to push himself and give things a go with Mustard as well. However the little brat seems to be a lot more difficult than Toga and a lot more stubborn.

"I see no need in getting close to you so if you don't mind I would like to leave now." The boy says as he starts to pick up his pace as he walks away. Dabi catches up with him.

"But we're going to the same place aren't we?" Dabi grins. "Hey where did you come from anyway? Do you still have a home to go to?"

The boy stops in his tracks, his brown hair reflecting silver in the dim lighting. "Are you deaf?" He asks almost astonished. "Didn't I just tell you to leave."

"Come on." Dabi says putting his arm around the boys shoulder. "We're team mates now, its only right that we know more about each other."

"I have nothing to tell you. You keep your secrest so let me keep mine."

"Ah, is that how it is. Well then it all started several years ago. My father is a total dick who, instead of facing his own problems would rather leave it up to his children. You get me?"

"What."

"What?"

"I don't care about your life story, leave me be."

Dabi sighs. "Why do you have to be so difficult."

"Why do you have to be so persistent."

"I'm not being persistent, I just want to know more about you."

"Your doing nothing but proving my point."

"Am I?"

The boy closes his eyes as he tries to calm himself. "You're actually an idiot. To think you're meant to be the leader of our squad. I don't know what Shigiraki sees in you."

"Better me than someone like muscular right?" Mustard doesn't say anything to that, he must no doubt agree.

"Anyway, how long are you going to follow me?" He snaps.

"Until I achieve my goal." Dabi pronounces with a grin on his face as the boy, barely fourteen turns to look at him, quite judgmentaly if you ask him.

"Do you have an ulterior motive or something?"

"What would make you think that?" Dabi replies innocently a smile still etched on his face. He did have an ulterior motive but just not as bad as whatever the boy could be thinking.

"Because no one has ever been so interested in me and I refuse to believe that anyone would be now."

"Why not. You seem like a pretty interesting individual."

Mustard groans as he picks up his pace trying to get anywhere as long as its away from the burnt freak who won't stop smiling.

"You know if you want to get rid of me that badly it might just be easier to give me what I want." Dabi says, easily catching up to the boy. Trying to speed walk away probably isn't the best idea when the person you are walking away from has longer legs.

Mustard huffs as he turns back to look at the man. "And what exactly is it that you want?"

"To know you better." For some reason Mustard now seems to be more pissed off than he was originally. For a split second Dabi considers giving up and actually leaving him alone now, just for a split second though. Then he realises that the boy getting so upset is actually quite funny so there's no way he's leaving anytime soon.

"Would you please stop following me. I don't know what you're up to but I don't like it." The boy snaps as he stops in his tracks to glare at Dabi.

"I'm seriously not up to anything, I truly just want to get to know you better." What probably doesn't help is the way Dabi bursts out laughing at the look that still sits on the boys face. His glare is pretty scary but coming from a fourteen year old it looks more pathetic and amusing to him. "I can tell that being in the league is going to feel like a pretty lonely place and I don't like that." Dabi tells him holding in his urge to burst out laughing again.

"We're not here to make friends."

"Yes but that wouldn't hurt." Mustard seems to consider his words but is still thoroughly pissed. It just creates an even funnier expression on his face but Dabi decides to stop laughing before the boy gets more pissed than he's already made him. "I know we all have our reasons for being here but I still think its important to make friends, the things that we missed out on because of who we are, you get what I mean."

The boy actually seems to consider his words seriously for a few moments before sighing heavily. "If I give you what you want you'll leave me alone right."

"Yeah, sure."

"But what you want is to be friends."

"I have to get to know you better first."

"What you want is to get to know me better?" Dabi nods.

"So telling you my life story is enough to get you off my back."

"I guess so." And maybe this approach wasn't the best idea because who knew the boy could speak so much.

"I hated my life, I hated my home. Ever since I was born I've always been compared to my older brother who I could never hold a candle too. If my parents wanted an only child so badly why the fuck did they give birth to me and decide to make my life a living hell."

"Oh." Is all Dabi has time to say before the boy is raving on again.

"Why is home a place I detest more than anything. I was shown more love and affection on the streets than my parents had ever given me at home. Out there I wasn't some useless person defined by his future, they actually thought about the now and saw my potential."

Dabi smiles. "It seems you found some good people. I'm happy for you."

Mustard looks at him unimpressed. "Who said they're good people."

"Were they not?"

"Well they were all criminals that's for sure, but they were criminals who were willing to teach me, a random kid who came out of nowhere, how to fight and defend myself. They were more like a family than my real family yet my parents decided to crush my happiness by getting them all arrested. They said they didn't like me being around villians, that they were disappointed in me, they expected better from me. That my brother would never do something like that.

Do you know how it feels like to always be put down no matter what you do." He snarls. "Your brother this, your brother that. Its always him, him, him, they didn't care about me only ever him. I could never be enough for anyone. Just because he goes to some fancy school and has a bright future ahead of him, who said that he's guaranteed to do well in life, why am I put down just because my achievements don't measure up to him?"

"I understand." Dabi says simply and that seems to fuel something in the boy.

"What could you possibly understand!" He yells, not loud enough for the people around to take notice though. "To the people around me I am nothing. Just a hindrance. I bet you my parents would have been ten times happier if I was never born, it they were stuck with the illusion that their one and only child is the most perfect thing in their stupid little lives. Sometimes I'd like to imagine how much it would hurt them to see that beloved son of theirs dissappear. Sometimes I thought of killing him with my own two hands just to see their reaction."

Dabi stays silent not sure what to say. "What nothing to say?" Mustard scoffs. "You were so eager to know more about me and yet now you have nothing to say to me."

"I-" Dabi pauses, thinking over his next words carefully. "I know how it feels like to not be enough. I will never be enough for him, especially now. If he were to see me he would probably deny my existence, that's why I'm too afraid to go home, because I know I won't be welcome there."

"Thats not the same thing."

"But it is." Dabi says, a glossed over look in his eyes. "I'm the oldest, I was once the pride and joy of my family then I became not enough in a matter of seconds as soon as my brother was born. Even before that I could tell he lost intrest in me, in the first place I was never his first priority, I was never what he wanted. I was just the best option at the time."

Mustard huffs as he crosses his arms. "Yeah well I don't care. You wanted to know more about me so there you go, can I leave now."

"Mustard." Dabi starts.

"What is it?"

"How do you know for certain that your parents aren't looking for you. How do you know for certain that they're not worried sick."

"I don't." He says. "Because they're dead."

"You killed them?"

"Of course not. If I were going to kill them I'd have to make sure they suffered a little first." That kind of talk is very concerning but Dabi doesn't say anything. "They died the day they found out I'd gone behind their back's to go out and participate in some illegal activities. They were really pissed, basically kicked me out of the house saying all sorts of things. Its not my fault that those people were the only ones who made me feel safe and worth it, even if I knew they were only using me. They taught me how to fight, how to use a gun, everything. And what did my parents ever teach me other than suffering and pain."

"How did they die?"

"Hm, oh we were outside and my quirk went out of control because I was angry. They collapsed to the ground and could you believe it, out of nowhere a truck kind of went off path and boom they're gone. I could say it's my fault, in all honesty it was, my quirk had probably caught on the wind, affecting the driver as well which caused the truk to derail, and I had made my parents lose consciousness which meant they were unable to move out the way. So in a way I guess you could say I killed them, not of my own choice though."

"I don't think that counts. It wasn't really your fault, just a string of unfortunate accidents." Mustard looks at him not convinced.

"Whatever you say."

"What about your brother, where is he right now?"

"Who knows. I sure as hell haven't heard from him, but I'm sure he's doing horribly no longer having anyone to support him financially, he's going to get kicked out of his fancy boarding school eventually and I'll be there to laugh at him once he does."

"That's a little cruel." Dabi sighs.

"Then what about you. Don't tell me you don't hate you younger brother as much as you hate your parents. Is it not his fault that things turned out like this."

Dabi stops to think for a second. "I guess. Not really sure, in all honesty I know nothing about him. He was always isolated because he was in a league of his own you know, according to my father anyway. But I guess things were better before he was born, things were perfect even. But things aren't so bad now, if he wasn't born we wouldn't be having this conversation right now getting to know each other. And see, in the end you did open up."

"What is wrong with you."

"What do you mean?"

"Your weird, like really weird. Who on earth would be happy in this situation."

"Me?" Dabi says a little confused.

"I actually can't understand you. I don't know why you wanted to know more about me but I guess you've succeeded so now will you leave me alone?"

"That's it? You tell me your life story yet you still want me to leave?"

"Yeah." Mustard nods bluntly.

"But doesn't this technically make us brothers."

"Not in any single way."

"Come on," Dabi grins as he wraps his arm around his shoulder, much to the boys displeasure, "we've both been through the same hardships, it's only right that we become as close as brothers right. I'll be the supportive older brother you never had."

"Did it ever occur to you that I don't want a brother." Mustard says, glare as intense as ever.

"Not at all."

"I don't need an idiot for a brother."

"Well that's upsetting. Luckily for you I'm not an idiot."

"Yeah no I'm leaving." Dabi smiles as he lets him walk away. He had to admit he didn't expect talking to Mustard would be all that easy but after talking to Toga he had thought maybe he was better at this talking thing and getting others to open up than he gave himself credit for. He always had time to convince Mustard to follow him, he didn't need to rush things.

———

"Aaahh! The exams are only getting closer and I haven't studied at all!"

"And who's fault is that exactly." Kirishima says to a panicking Denki.

"If it makes you feel better," Hitoshi starts, "I haven't exactly started studying either."

"Wait really?" Denki lights up as he grabs Hitoshi's hands.

"Aw look at that, you two are made for each other." Mina drawls.

"Except for the fact that Shinso is actually smart so he can afford not studying." Sero scoffs as Denki starts to feel disappointment.

"Thats not exactly true." Denki deflaits anyway. "Why don't you ask Bakugo to help you. He's much smarter than m-."

"-I refuse."

"You didn't even let me finish."

"I refuse." Bakugo repeats.

"Well then that option is off the table."

"I could always help." Yaoyorozu offers.

"Wait really." Denki beams. "Yaomomo, you're a goddess."

Bakugo scoffs. "I was expecting you to try and study with your beloved at all costs but instead you opted for the 1st in the class." He says, his input much unneeded.

"My beloved?" He points at Hitoshi and Denki's eyes widen in recognition. "You're right, I just totally missed an opportunity!"

Hagakure laughs from her seat. "He didn't even deny it."

Hitoshi can't control the barage of red that slowly creeps up his cheeks. "All of you shut up."

"Oh no what should I do?" Denki asks. "I want to study with Yaomomo but this is a totally perfect opportunity."

"Opportunity for what?" Hitoshi questions but it falls on deaf ears.

"Its fine Kaminari, go get your man. I could always tutor you separately."

"What?"

"Wait really! Yaomomo you really are a goddess." She smiles.

"You hear that Shinso, looks like your going to be helping Denki study." Bakugo barks out in laughter.

"What?" Hitoshi says again bewildered. "But I didn't agree to that."

"Its fine we agreed for you." Mina says a look on her face which is practically thirsty for romance.

"Yes but that isn't how consent works-"

"Dunce face, he says he can't wait." Bakugo interupts, his input once again much unneeded.

"Really? You speak Shinsonese?" Bakugo burst into laughter at that, it annoyed Hitoshi a lot but it also made him glad that the blond was alright and able to smile.

"Your an absolute moron you know that right."

"I mean I'm the lowest in the class so..."

Kirishima stares at the two confused. "What on earth is Shinsonese?"

"Oh come on Shitty hair, you don't know? Shinsonese is the rarest of languages only spoken by very few people. Its so rare that only 2 people speak it out of the 8 billion people in the world. If you can turn that into a percentage I'll agree to tutor you."

"Wait really." Bakugo nods.

"Okay, hold on just give me a minute." After 5 minutes he is still trying and failing to get the answer.

"What is the answer Bakugo?" Sero asks.

"I don't know, would rather not figure it out. Although I do know that there's a shit ton of zeroes, and I also know that it doesn't take this long to do a simple calculation like this you moron!" He shouts at Kirishima. "You only need one equation, what have you been doing for five minutes. (I feel like I have to go figure this out now, trying to find out how many zeroes are in 8 billion seems too tiring though. Yeah no I did it, 2.5×10^-8(0.00000025%), I just realised I could have easily done that in my head. Nope nevermind I have no idea if that's even correct anymore, I apologies for the days I have ruined by bringing up math.)

"Bakugo, what was the question again?"

"What? What on earth have you been figuring out if you forgot the question."

"Sucks to be you man." Denki says going over to pat him on the back. "Lucky for me I now have two tutors."

"Yeah go on and rub it in. Keep that attitude up and I'll tell Shinso not to tutor you."

"Never really agreed in the first place."

"You hear that, he can still totally back out."

"Will you back out?" Denki gives him the worst attempt at puppy dog eyes he's ever seen. Hitoshi is convinced even Bakugo can do better than that, not like he'll ever get to see it though.

"If you keep looking at me like that maybe?"

"Are you all forgetting that there's also a practical exam. You can study as much as you want for the written exams but failing either the practical or written still counts as a fail overall." Iida just had to open his mouth and send all kinds of dread flooding over the room.

"We're aware glasses."

"Well shit I forgot about that. I'm doomed, absolutely doomed." To say Denki isn't totally panicking is a complete and utter lie.

"I'm sure you'll be fine." Hitoshi tells him although feeling a little worried himself.

"Maybe if you give me a kiss for good luck I'll be able to pass."

"You know I'm sure you won't miss us that much when we go on the summer camp. I'll make sure to take lots of pictures so you can see exactly how much you're going to miss out on when we come back."

"Dude I think he just rejected you."

"Hey Brain Freak I think I have a newfound respect for you."

"That is so totally mean. You've been spending too much time with Bakugo."

"If i was anything like Bakugo things would have gone more like, 'fuck off, if you're pathetic enough to think a kiss is going to bring you luck then you deserve to fail the exam. Ask me again and I'll make sure your head is dangling off your body if you come anywhere near me'." (Is it easy to tell I am nothing like Bakugo. He comes up with the weirdest threats)

"I don't sound like that."

"Whoa, you sounded just like him."

"You really have been spending too much time around Bakugo."

"You know leaving your heads dangling off your body doesn't sound like such a bad idea." They all shut up.

"I heard from a third year that the practical exams are always against the same robots we faced during the entrance exam."

"Wait really." Shinso gasps. "Well shit I'm fucked. Maybe I'm the one that needs that good luck kiss."

"That can still be arranged." The way Denki is looking at him with such eagerness and hope in his eyes should be illegal, its enough to send anyone into a heart attack.

"Ew stop it, your practically eating him up with your eyes." Bakugo smirks.

"What!"

"You're really fun to tease, you know that right." Its at times like these Hitoshi really hates him.

"Anyway back to business. You," he points straight at Hitoshi. "You are not allowed to fail or else I will personally kill you myself."

"Wow thanks, glad to know how much you care about me."

He ignores him. "And you," this time he points at Todoroki who's been rather silent this whole time. "I'm gonna make sure I crush you so far into the ground you'll never see the light of day. I'll completely crush, annihilate and murder you, maybe then you'll learn to stay the fuck away from Deku."

"Oh so this is about Deku? Makes sense." Todoroki says unbothered.

"Wait Todoroki you know Deku too?"

"Oh yeah you mentioned him before didn't you when you went to apologise. I feel like you've been apologising to Bakugo a lot lately."

"Hold up, so you only care about Shinso and Todoroki, Bakugo."

"Well yeah, I couldn't give a shit about the rest of you. Do what you want, fail or pass."

Hitoshi sighs before grabbing Bakugo by the arm and pulling him out the classroom. Its a suprise that the teen didn't struggle or even attempt to rip his head off. "Come on all of you." He shouts back into the classroom. "Lets get some lunch."

And sure enough everyone follows. Most of the class is gathered around one table while the others take up another. Everything is peaceful and thankfully Bakugo seems to be silently eating. Things were calm - well as calm as one can be when stressing over exams - until Hitoshi feels someone lingering behind him. It was stupid, it could have been anyone, he was in a room filled with students after all but still he turns around. Once he does turn he instantly regrets it as he sees Monoma, one of the class b kids sneering down at their table. He is what Aizawa would describe as a loud blond, and what Bakugo would describe as an annoying bastard. Both terms were completely understandable and described Monoma well.

"I heard you encountered the Hero killer." His eyes linger on the two students involved with the Hosu incident, a condescending grin on his face. Iida stares back at him not sure what to say while Todoroki continues to go about his day, practically inhaling his soba. "You class 1a bastards really like the spotlight huh."

"If you want to be acknowledged for once then why don't you try doing something worth acknowledging first." Bakugo sneers.

"If we're going to get acknowledged unlike you lot its not going to be for getting ourselves into so much trouble. You lot are real troublemakers aren't you, how scary is that. What would we do if one day we get wrapped up in the trouble you cause-" (little to his knowledge that day will come sooner than expected.)

Its a sudden shock how the blond slowly starts to tilt towards the floor before growing limp. Looking up Hitoshi sees that its the work of Itsuka Kendo, another student in 1b. Her help was much appreciated, now he could go back to worrying about the practical exam in peace.

"Sorry about that." She says ignoring the horrifying glare Bakugo is sending her way. "He means well, he's just.... an idiot."

"I'm not an idiot!" He calls out from where he dangles in Kendo's grasp.

"Ignore him." She says. "Good luck on the exams all of you." She starts to wave goodbye as she holds her tray in one hand and Monoma with her other before Bakugo is standing up and banging on the table.

"Hold on."

"Yeah?" She turns back around confused. "Don't tell me the summer camp is going to be together with you bastards."

Hitoshi sighs. "Bakugo whats wrong with class b."

"You're telling me we're going to be stuck with that idiot." He points at Monoma which was very rude in Hitoshi's opinion didn't his mother ever teach him its rude to point. Who is he kidding he doesn't care, and Bakugo 100 percernt absolutely didn't either.

"I'm not an idiot." Monoma says once again. "And of course we're going to be together. What do you think your class is so much better than ours that you need your own private holiday."

"Monoma shut up." Kendo chastises. "Don't worry." She says with a smile on her face. "I'll make sure he doesn't pull anything."

"Its bold of you to even assume that you'll be able to pass the exams." Monoma scoffs.

"Oh yeah is it true that the practical exam will be against robots." Yaomomo asks, question basically just directed at Kendo.

"I heard from a third year that that's how the exam typically is but I think its going to be different this year."

"What makes you say that?"

"Apparently with the recent villian attacks the school has decided to increase the intensity of the exams."

The whole class groans as Kendo sends them a little smile and a wave before walking away. The class wave back then some go back to their wallowing while others try and see the positive side of things. This would be a good chance to get to know 1b better Hitoshi thinks and all of a sudden this mysterious summer camp, which he has a feeling is much more than that, seems even more exciting. He still needs to pass his exams first though.

"Well done all of you on your written exams, you've all done well but now it's time to focus on the next test at hand." Aizawa stares down at his students as they all stand, looks of determination on their faces, some with looks of anxiety.

Several teachers all lined up besides him say nothing as he continues to speak to his students. He could feel a faint hatred coming from them and he definitely hated being so close to them but he has to suck it up. "Of course as this is a test you can still fail so you all better try your hardest. The rules will be explained to you momentarily, I bet you've all prepared extensively having gotten some background information on the exams correct?"

"Yeah we're fighting the robots from the entrance exam." Said Sero a bit too excited.

"Unfortunately," The principal suddenly popping out from Aizawa's scarf startles everyone, even some of the teachers. "This years exam will be quite different." Those were the words that the class were dreading. "You will not be fighting against the robots instead you will be fighting against the teachers."

"The teachers?"

"You will all be put in teams of two carefully decided by us. You will be put against one of the teachers here."

"All 10 exams will be going on simultaneously," Aizawa starts to speak. "You will be transported via the school buses to your respective areas." All of a sudden Aizawa grins, the same grin he gives when he exposes one if his 'logical ruses'. "Shinso, Yaoyorozu, you'll be with me."

"Well fuck." Hitoshi says outloud, and the cackle which Bakugo lets out is very unappreciated.

"Bakugo," Aizawa starts, the teen's attention now on him. "You'll be fighting against All Might."

"Hell yeah!" He cheers.

"With Todoroki."

It is a bit concerning how Aizawa seems so happy at the Bakugo's disappointment but Hitoshi has something else to be focused on. He has never beaten Aizawa before when they spar and there is no way he could possibly beat him now.

Hitoshi sighs as nerves start to accumulate in all his classmates. Aizawa smiles again, "Try your best and go Plus Ultra."

Chapter End Notes

Justice for Mustard he deserves better than this. Its so unfair how he's arrested and that's it, he's never brought up in the manga again. He's not even in highschool, he's a middle schooler that's so sad. What on earth happened to him to make him join the LOV and why on earth can he use a gun, is that normal. Do 14 Yr olds usually know how to use a gun, I mean I've never even seen a real one.

Anyway I just made up some random backstory for Mustard and I'm assuming Dabi's backstory has been animated now. Don't worry Mustard will get the love he deserves, Dabi too. Everyone will get love eventually.

Thank you all for reading. 💙💜

Eri

"Hey mister Deku?"

"Hm?" Izuku acknowledges as he looks over to the little girl, crayon still in hand as she looks up at him. Big red eyes staring back into his emerald green.

"Don't you miss your friends? Are you going to go back? Are you going to leave me here?" Izuku looks away refusing to face the bundle of hope staring at him with anticipation. He refused to give in to his underlying emotions, had to fight the urge to whisk her away right now somewhere far far away, somewhere where she would be loved instead of hurt.

"I'm going to leave. I have too, I promised I'd go back."

"You promised?" She frowns, doubt evident in her voice. "Promises don't mean all that much to me. Everyone always promises that they'll do stuff for me, that it'll be quick, that it won't hurt, that everything is okay. But that's not true, nothing is okay, it never has been. It always hurts it always feels like time is going by so slowly..." She stops talking, gaze distant. Izuku couldn't help but feel sad no matter how much he wanted to lock away these feelings.

He sighs as he gets up to get the hairbrush laying peacefully on the far table. He goes to sit behind the little girl as he slowly starts to feed the brush through her tangled curls. It was hard to miss the sight of her pale blue hair. How messy it was, how much it reflected the conditions she's been living in, the things she's had to go through. As he slowly untangles her hair the girl stays silent, eyes closed as she enjoys the brief moment of peacefulness, meant to be a deserved right instead a rare luxury.

Izuku continues to brush her hair as he talks, no louder than a whisper in an attempt to preserve this peace if only a little. "Promises don't mean much to me either, people are cruel they always break their promises." He smiles softly as the girl opens her eyes, head now tilted back to look at him. "That's why I decided not to be like other people, to do something about the suffering that they put people through. That's why I gave my life to giving little children like you," he squeezes her in a little hug as she giggles, "a life that they deserve."

"Oh." She says, a look of realisation crossing her face as helplessness washes over her. "So you are going to leave me here."

Izuku sets down the brush as he gets up to go sit infront of the girl. "I'm not going to leave you."

"But you said you want to give children a life that they deserve. I'm cursed, I hurt people, I'm getting exactly what I deserve." Izuku's heart breaks at those words. He felt horrible like a monster for not doing something, anything to take all suffering out of her life. But he couldn't, he made a promise.

"Eri." The girl looks up hesitantly. "What kind of life do you think I deserve?"

Her eyes widen, a fond childish smile on her face. "Of course you deserve an amazing life, one with lots of friends and food and presents and-" She stops as she looks at the lifeless look in Izuku's eyes.

"I deserve none of that." Eri scampers across the floor to grab at Izuku's sleeve. "Eri I'm also cursed." He takes her hand as he slowly pulls it away. "I hurt people, I cause people to suffer, I can't even protect the ones I want to, they always get hurt. I'm a nuisance wherever I go, I'm a monster who doesn't deserve a good life at all."

"That's not true." She cries, tears welling up in her eyes. "Your an amazing person, you're really nice, you cheered me up and kept me company. You saved me, of course you deserve a good life. I'm the one that's cursed, I'm the one who deserves to suffer."

Izuku squeezes her hand as he refuses to look her in the eye. "Eri, promises don't mean that much to me because people always lie, you can't trust anyone or what they say. That's why I made sure no matter what I wouldn't be like those people, I will always keep my promises." He squeezes her hand again, gaze still on the floor. "Eri I'm also cursed, my curse is worse then yours could ever be, so if I deserve a good life you deserve the world and back. Eri, just like me promises don't mean that much to you so instead I'm not going to promise."

He holds out his hand as particles of light slowly start to swirl, an emerald green jewel slowly materialising on his palm. He unfolds Eri's hand as he places the jewel in her grasp.

"That's important to me." He says. "It's very, very, very important to me. I can't bear to lose that, that's how important it is to me." She looks on in wonder at the jewel that glistens in her hand. "Since we're both cursed I trust you. No matter what don't lose that. As long as you don't lose it no matter what I will come back for it, I'll come back for both the jewel and you as well. Do you understand?" She nods, a sad yet determined expression on her face. Izuku smiles as well before leaning in to hug the small child. She was so thin, so fragile, he felt as though she would snap if he squeezed her even just a little tighter.

"I'll protect it." She cries, tears fully streaming down her face. "I'll protect it with my life, no matter what so please come back. Please come back for me."

"I will." Izuku whispers as the girl continues to cry and he continues to embrace her. As her tears flow Izuku steels himself, he gets rid of all attachment and longing as she slowly starts to sniff. Once her tears have completely dried up so have his emotions as he wordlessly gets up leaving the child to call out to him, desperate for him not to leave.

He walks out the door not looking back once, he couldn't, it would only ruin all the progress he's finally made. It would only make this departure more painful.

"Your going to come back for her huh." He looks towards the voice, meeting peircing grey eyes. It's Chronostasis, one of the assistants for that damn Kai Chisaki. "Do you really want to go against Shie Hassaikai."

"That jewel means nothing to me, I made it on the spot." Izuku looks away, instead focusing his gaze on the empty wall. "I thought it would be better to give her something to look forward to in this hell hole."

"Isn't it cruel getting her hopes up like that. Now she's convinced you'll come back to save her."

"Maybe I will."

Chronostasis laughs. "What? You're going to come back for her? Are you going to break out of prison for her, are you going to come back from the dead to whisk her away?" He says mockingly as he slowly grows closer in distance. "You have better things to worry about than a little girl who has no relation to you whatsoever. How long are you going to hide out here from the law, just turn yourself in already."

Izuku ignores him as he starts to turn away to leave, but then he stops. "You're wrong."

"What?"

"I don't have no relation to her, I have every reason to care."

"What?"

"I've already saved her once, I have no reason not to save her again."

"What." He says once again, this time laced with venom.

"Who knows maybe one day I'll be reminded of her. No doubt I'll get stronger and when I do I might just come back."

"That's if your not dead by then."

Izuku laughs. "That's true, who knows how long I'm going to last at this rate."

"Not that long if we have anything to do about it." Izuku watches as Chronostasis walks away a dangerous glint in his eyes.

He doesn't care about what anyone says. He will definitely come back no matter how long it takes, no matter if he's imprisoned or on death row. He'll come back to save eri and break the curse that shackles her.

———

In complete silence both Bakugo and Shoto sit in one of UA's school buses while All Might drives. The hero had tried to start a conversation before but soon realised neither teen was up for it so eventually things just drifted into an awkward silence. Bakugo sat as far away from Shoto as he could at the back of the bus. Shoto isn't exactly sure why Bakugo dislikes him so much, maybe it really is just because of Deku. In that case Bakugo's hate is justified, he is one of the reasons why Deku's identity was exposed in the first place.

Shoto sighs as he gets up from the front of the bus, where he previously sat and makes his way next to Bakugo. "Bakugo?" He calls out to him, the teen refusing to look at him.

"What do you want Icyhot, I said I don't want to talk to you."

"It's not about the exam." Bakugo finally looks up.

"What is it?" He growls.

"Deku." Bakugo groans as he crosses his arms rather violently.

"How many times do I have to tell you to stop talking about Deku."

"Bakugo what's his quirk?"

"What?"

Shoto pauses feeling as if he's struck a nerve. Bakugo looks a little uncomfortable and maybe deciding to continue this conversation isn't the best idea but thats what Shoto does anyway. "I mean he took my quirk during the sports festival, like completely. I couldn't feel it, there was nothing there, just ice, just the cold."

"Why are you only asking this now?" Shoto tilts his head in confusion. Bakugo grits his teeth while looking over to All Might to make sure he's not listening. "You idiot, I mean why are you asking now, I thought you would have asked a long time ago."

"Well I did ask Deku that day when he came to my house but he just said it's complicated."

"He came to your house!" Bakugo yells seeming to catch All Might's attention for a moment.

"Are you both alright?" The hero calls out and Bakugo just nods before focusing his attention back on Shoto.

"Don't worry Endeavour wasn't home." Shoto tells him as soon as All Might stops paying attention to them.

"I couldn't give a shit about that flaming piece of garbage why the fuck is Deku going to your house!" Shoto stares blankly at Bakugo. He doesn't know how he's meant to answer that, it isn't like he's Deku. So instead he sits there, continuing to stare blankly at Bakugo which eventually made the teen give up on that subject.

"Fucking hell you're annoying. Fine then forget about that. If Deku told you its complicated then he didn't want to tell you."

"Bakugo that isn't fair at all," Shoto huffs, "I got hit by a quirk that you won't even explain to me. I may not know how his quirk works but if I had told the detective what happened during the sports festival do you know how much information that would have given him."

Bakugo clenches his teeth. "You're so damn annoying, fine I'll tell you. But you better keep that mouth of yours shut, if you go and tell anyone I'll kill you."

"Does Shinso know?"

"Now he does, before he didn't. Same with Aizawa." Shoto just simply nods as he briefly monitors All Might from where he's sat, the man still focused on driving. "Ok then, you must have guessed by now that he can take quirks and can also give them as well so what more could you possibly want to know?"

"What did he do to the quirk."

"What do you mean?"

"My fire." Shoto tells him. "It seemed different somehow when he gave it back to me. Hotter, easier to control, I can even control it's temperature now and do things with it that aren't even supposed to be possible. I know I never trained my fire before the festival but it was definitely nothing like that before, it was just normal fire. I couldn't change the temperature I would have to change the output instead, I couldn't create stuff with it as I can now, it would basically run rampant as soon as it's released. It's just different now, nothing like how it used to be."

Bakugo huffs as he leans back in his seat, his voice a whisper. "Once Deku takes a quirk he somehow upgrades it, it becomes stronger and more versatile. It was just a theory at first but I guess you're proof that that's actually what happens."

"He made my quirk stronger?" Bakugo nods. "How?"

"Just by taking it I guess. As soon as he takes it it kind of just morphs into something stronger."

"Oh." Shoto says. "Thanks for telling me."

"Yeah whatever." Bakugo says as things start to drift back into an awkward silence.

Todoroki sighs. "Don't you miss him?" He asks trying to keep the conversation going.

"Don't you have something better to do than to be asking me questions about Deku." Bakugo snaps back.

"Well we should be planning tactics against All Might but you don't seem very willing."

Bakugo grits his teeth. "We're going to beat All Might whats more to discuss."

"Yeah whatever. That's not an answer to my question though."

Bakugo sighs. "You're really annoying you know that right." "It doesn't matter if I miss him or not, he probably doesn't even want to see me."

Todoroki sighs. "Why is it so hard for one little question to be answered. Do you miss him or not?"

"Yes. Are you happy now? I miss him so will you shut up now."

Shoto laughs. "No, annoying you is fun."

"I really hate you."

———

"Tomura what are you planning this time?"

Rewatching clips of the sports festival Tomura presses pause just as the blond haired teen who won the festival lets out an enormous explosion up to the air, spark of orange and green shrouding his arm. He taps his finger against the table restless, before a huge grin starts to spread on his face as he looks at the TV in the corner of the room.

"I'm going to take something valuable from UA." His sadistic grin only widens as he goes back to watching the video on repeat. He found it truly amazing how someone could have such explosive power. The hero's didn't deserve someone like him, he was much better suited by his side where he could really let out his rage and destroy anything and everything.

"Kurogiri gather the others, I have a plan."

It takes a while for the whole league to be finally gathered but after a while they're all gathered and sat in the bar.

"All of you listen well." Tomura calls out from the bar stool where he sits. All the villians turn to look at him. "I have gotten some of you some new support gear to enhance and support the effects of your quirks. Giran should bring them over soon enough."

"Aw, you shouldn't have how sweet is that." Dabi, the very annoying one, drawls earning himself a glare from Tomura.

"Don't worry, you don't get anything."

"I don't need anything anyway."

Tomura scoffs. "Yeah, I guess you're satisfied with destroying yourself every time you use your quirk." That guy pisses him off quite a lot for some reason but he's the most competent out of all the others. That fact physically pains Tomura to admit but as long as he gets closer to his goal of crushing All Might then he doesn't care.

"How did you know that?" Dabi asks and Tomura can't help the grin that spreads on his face at how uncomfortable he looks.

"The staples kind of give it away." Dabi huffs and crosses his arms.

"Do I get something?" Toga asks.

"Yeah."

"Is it cute?"

"Does that matter?" Tomura replies in the same tone, mocking her.

"Of course it matters. Why would I wear anything if it isn't cute.

Tomura sighs, feeling a headache threatening to split his head open. "Whatever I don't care. Like I said at some point Giran will bring over the support gear. You all have about a week to get use to them. 10 days from now I want you all back here and ready. The new Vanguard Action Squad will soon be making their debut."

"What?" Tomura doesn't even attempt to discern who said that.

"I will tell you all the details in 10 days. Make sure you are all ready because that is when we will take action."

"What so you're only going to tell us the plan on the day of the attack?" A snarl, who Tomura is assuming came from Muscular causes the rest of the members to start making a fuss.

Tomura sighs. "All of you shut up. This is my league. My base, my plan, so my rules." Tomura huffs at the confused looks on everyone's faces. "Whatever, I don't care I'm leaving."

"Your leaving?" Dabi calls out. "Where are you going, you can't just leave like that."

"I'm going anywhere as long as I'm not here. You're all giving me a headache. Kurogiri take care of them I'll be back soon."

There are several protests from the villians in the room but Tomura ignores them all as he walks straight out of the bar. Everyone is too loud and he needs time to think.

———

Dejected, the students who had failed the practical exam slump in their seats as they look out into the distance, staring nowhere in particular.

"Have fun you guys." Mina drawls.

"Take lots of pictures." Kirishima sighs.

"Don't forget about us while we're there." Denki says this time.

Iida watches his classmates solemnly while Katsuki gains the urge to go hit Kirishima on the head after all that effort he put into tutoring him just for him to go and fail the physical exam. Before he gets the chance though Aizawa is sauntering into the room, a more than unsettling grin on his face.

"All of you in your seats." He says as he walks up to the front of the room. "Well done to those of you who passed the exams, I will be seeing you in the last week of summer vacation." Katsuki is sure that if everyone in the class didn't feel slight pity for those who failed, then they would all be cheering right now. "For those of you who didn't pass your exams, I will be seeing all of you in the last week of summer vacation as well."

Dunce face slumps in his seat. "We have to come into school for remedial classes don't we."

The unsettling smile on Sensei's face only grows. "Would you rather be taking remedial classes at school, that can always be arranged."

"What?" Sato exclaims. "Didn't you say those who fail will be taking remedial classes?" The flutter of hope is in no way missed in his voice.

"Did I?" Aizawa asks in mock confusion, his grin growing even wider. "It was a logical ruse, you're all going to the summer camp." In all honesty the class should have fully expected this but they were all to busy feeling happy for those who failed than to focus on Aizawa's deception.

"No one failed the written exam however Ashido, Kirishima, Kaminari, Satou and Sero you all failed the physical exam. Don't think you're off the hook though. All of you will be having special remedial periods during our time at the forest lodge, so while the others are having fun you all will be spending your free time with me." Katsuki didn't think it was possible but the man's sadistic grin widens further.

"Now hurry up and take one of the lodge guides and make sure you get everything that you will need."

Aizawa decides to sit back as he watches his students chat happily for the last 5 minutes of homeroom.

"Congratulations Denki." The class cheer.

Dunce face grins from ear to ear, bouncing on the balls of his feet. "This means we can still be together." Shinso reflects his smile.

"You two should just start dating already." Mina cackles as her words cause Shinso's cheeks to flush red.

"Mina you can't just say tha-"

"Hey you guys." Invisabitch calls out, one of the lodge guides in hand. "We should all go to the mall together to get the stuff that we'll need, all of us as a class."

"Oh that's perfect!" Mina exclaims. "That would be so much fun, Shinso, Denki, you'll go right? You too blasty?"

Katsuki sends a glare her way. "Don't call me blasty." He says. "And I'll go only because I need some stuff, don't think for a second that it's because I want to be with you extras."

"Did he just admit to wanting to hang out with us?" Tape arms asks igniting a spark of anger in Katsuki.

"Dumbasses who can do nothing but sleep during their exams should have no right to speak!"

"Damn bro, a bit harsh."

———

That weekend the class all gathered just like Hagakure had suggested. Its almost amazing how quickly everyone had split up into groups and separated to go and buy individual things.

Hitoshi has no idea how he ends up alone with Uraraka but either way he doesn't really mind.

"Hey Uraraka." He smiles as he walks up to her. "What is it that you need to get, I'll come with you."

She stands there for a moment staring at Hitoshi, silent and unmoving. A little concerned Hitoshi strolls closer to her. "Are you alright." He sees a red flush run up her face and he immediately steps back realising he was way too close. "S-sorry." He squeaks.

"Shinso." Uraraka finally says as he cocks his head, all attention on her.

"Yeah? What is it?"

"Do you like Kaminari?" Hitoshi splutters trying his best not to choke on air. He can feel the heat as his ears flush at the unexpected question.

"Do I like Denki?" He repeats. "Why do you ask?"

Uraraka stares at him, a soft yet pained expression on her face and Hitoshi can't help but think that he's done something wrong. "You know for a good period of time I had a crush on you."

And there it was. There were the words that sent guilt creeping up his throat as his mouth hangs ajar, words un able to form. He stares at the ground speechless and dumbfounded. What on earth was this situation, he could barely comprehend the fact that Denki liked him and now he was being told that Uraraka had liked him as well. How stupid and dense had he been to not realise. How did this even happen? Why did they even have feelings for him in the first place? Why is life so confusing?

"W-why?" Is the first thing he's able to blurt out and instantly regrets it. That's such a stupid thing to say he tells himself.

"Why?" Uraraka repeats. "I'm not sure. It probably had something to do with the entrance exam."

"The entrance exam?"

"You saved me." She smiles and a bottomless pit forms in Hitoshi's stomach. Before Hitoshi can even say anything Uraraka speaks again. "That probably had a lot to do with it so I guess after some thought I realised that maybe I didn't actually like you. Maybe the thing I was feeling was just admiration towards you, not love."

"Not love?" Uraraka nods. "What's the difference?"

"The difference?" She repeats. "I'm not sure, it's hard to explain but I'm certain now that it was never love I felt. I look up to you, ya know." She looks up at the teen and smiles. "So thanks again for saving me Shinso, I will forever be grateful. You're going to make an excellent hero one day."

Hitoshi looks at her, eyes wide, this situation confusing him quite a bit. "I-i'm sorry." He cringes as the words leave his mouth, why would he reply with that to a compliment.

Uraraka just laughs a little. "It's fine, Shinso. No worries, you can just forget about all this. I just thought that maybe I should tell you, or I don't know. Maybe this was just confirmation for myself."

"Confirmation?"

"Yeah, confirmation." She beams. Hitoshi should really stop repeating everything she says.

"Uh, well then... h-how can I tell if I... you know"

"If you like Kaminari?" Shinso nods. "Well its not really something I can just explain to you. You should find that answer for yourself."

"How."

"How? Well I guess I realised after seeing you seem so happy with Kaminari." Shinso stands there silent not exactly sure what to say, thankfully she continues to speak. "I guess if you want to know you should take your time. You'll figure out eventually. Although I can't determine how you feel for you, if you ask me I think you really do like Kaminari, or atleast deeply care for him."

"Really?"

"Yeah." She smiles. "Kaminari is lucky to have you. And I guess you're also really lucky to have him"

"Yeah." Hitoshi agrees, a small smile upon his face.

"I should probably go now." Uraraka tells him. "I have quite a few things I need to get."

"Ah, yeah ok."

"I'll see you later. Thanks again for listening to me rant."

"Ah, yeah no problem." And within a blink of an eye she's gone and Hitoshi finds himself alone with his thoughts. Thankfully he's not alone long as a certain blond shakes him out if his thoughts.

"Hey Brain Fucker!" Bakugo yells to get Hitoshi's attention.

"Oh, hey." Hitoshi waves and soon enough Bakugo is right beside him.

"Why were you alo-" out of nowhere Hitoshi feels an arm draped around his shoulder. He would have assumed it was Bakugo if it wasn't for the fact that he's standing right next to him looking just as confused.

"What the-" Bakugo starts before taking a look at the mysteriois mans face. "Ah, I know you."

"Do you?" The man asks, his voice raspy.

"You're that damn reporter that broke into the school."

"Reporter?" Hitoshi questions. He makes the mistake of looking at the man's face as well, his mouth stretched wide in a manic grin. At first Hitoshi is confused but then he looks into those deep red eyes and recognition settles in.

"You're Shigiraki."

"You're Shigiraki."

The man's grin widens, every little crack becoming prominent on his face. It happens almost instantaneously, the way the hand that was previously dangling by Hitoshi's shoulder effortlessly slides to his throat, only a single finger still hovering over the area, teasingly so. Hitoshi tenses up, all life sucked from his face. It takes everything within him to not gulp, to not give in to the dryness of his throat. Cautiously, Hitoshi directs his gaze to observe Bakugo's condition. Facing the exact same threat, the other teen seems just as uneasy. His shoulders are tense and it seemed to take a lot out of him just to return Hitoshi's gaze.

"You know me?" Shigiraki questions, the source of his chilling voice just inches away from Hitoshi, lowered so only the two students could hear. "I don't remember ever having met you?"

Hitoshi could practically hear his heart beating out of his chest. He takes a shaky breath, his gaze directly set on the floor and unchanging. "I-i've been shown a p-photo. From the USJ attack." Hitoshi can hear Bakugo audibly gasp but he doesn't even dare look over to him, one wrong motion and he would no longer have a neck.

"Oh really?" The villian drawls. "Since you know who I am, I'm guessing you know how my quirk works as well?"

Hitoshi wants to nod but then he remembers he doesn't have that luxury so instead forces his words through. "Y-yes." He croaks, his throat dry and closing up.

"What about your friend here? He doesn't seem to fully understand the full scope of what's happening right now. You still know me as a reporter don't you?" The villian directs his words at Bakugo.

"Y-you're Shigiraki?" Hitoshi has never heard the teens voice sound so scared before, it was a definite given considering the situation but it still made Hitoshi uneasy nonetheless. It made the butterflies in his stomach become more violent, his heart beating faster as every part of his body was itching to move, to run, to get far, far away from here.

Shigiraki grins, seeming pleased with their reactions. "Act naturally." He demands with a smile on his face, his finger wondering teasingly closer towards their necks in warning. "Let's go sit down why don't we. No odd behaviour, you hear me. The second all five fingers are wrapped around your neck you'll both be nothing but piles of dust in an instant."

"If you do that the hero's will catch you." Bakugo snarls.

"Oh but look around." The villian says, a manic grin on his face. "How many of these innocent people do you think I could manage to kill in the time it would take for a hero to arrive." That's a good point. The two of them are meant to be heroes yet they're in such a helpless situation. Innocent bystanders could never stand a chance.

"Walk."

The two follow Shigiraki's command as they take cautious steps, painfully aware of the distance between Shigiraki's finger and their demise. He guides them over to a nearby bench where he forces them to take a seat. Hitoshi risks sparing Bakugo another glance. He sees the way the blonds hand twitches, urging him to move, to blow the villians head right off. Wait blow the villians head off? His quirk, Hitoshi could use his quirk.

It happens so quickly. The way dread suddenly invades his body, seeping into every part of his being. In the heat of the moment he had forgotten about his quirk, forgotten about the easiest method he had to get both him and Bakugo out of this situation. But he can't. Believe it or not he's scared, too scared to even open his mouth, to speak, to trap the villian under his command.

Shigiraki is talking, preaching even, Hitoshi isn't sure. His mind can't help but wonder from the conversation at the violent pulsating of his heart beat and the mental urge to speak, say something, do something, anything.
He knows he should probably be gauging some information from the villian while he's here, while the villian is being nice and keeping them alive, but Hitoshi can't hear a single word. He can only hear his blood racing, his breath quickening, his throat tensing up. He has to speak, has to say something, do something, anything.

"The Hero Killer doesn't go around taking students as hostages by the throat." Hitoshi hears Bakugo snarl and his breath hitches as he feels Shigiraki's finger grow closer in a moment of annoyance.

"If I wanted sarcasm," the villian scoffs, "I would have just stayed at my base." Bakugo surprisingly doesn't say anymore, instead Hitoshi feels the villian aim his gaze at him. "What about you?" He asks and Hitoshi's eyes widen as he starts to panic.

Hitoshi hadn't heard a single word which was exchanged, he doesn't know what's going on. A single 'what?' Would be enough to use his quirk but he can't muster a word. His throat is as dry as ever, his hands are sweaty and he has the urge to pry the hand around his neck away. He wants to speak but he can't, he's afraid. The one time his quirk is actually useful he's too afraid to even use it, if the situation wasn't so dire he would laugh, cry even. The one time he was the only one who could do something is the time where he's too afraid to do anything. It really was comical.

The villian seems to raise an eyebrow, getting a little impatient. "Answer the question." He demands, Hitoshi didn't think it was possible but he tenses up even more.

He opens his mouth trying to get the words through but there's nothing. What a stupid time to go mute, why can't he speak? He wants to speak. He has to speak. All sorts of emotions well up inside him as he continues to try to push the words through. This was no different to back then, back to the time before he finally found a caring family to adopt him, back when he was still muzzled for any words he dared to utter.

Why is he thinking of that time now. He shouldn't be recalling such bad times, he should be saying something, doing something, anything. But his mind can't help but wonder back to that time, it was just like now. Just like how he thought he was going to die, just like how he wished for someone to come and save him, rid him of his misery. But Izu isn't here, Izuku can't save him this time, he has to save himself. He has to-

"Shinso, Bakugo? What are you doing?"

That's Uraraka. That was Uraraka's voice! Uraraka is here, she's back thank goodness!

"Shigiraki, why are you here?"

"Why am I-"

And just like that it's over and Shigiraki is under Hitoshi's command. Hitoshi doesn't know why he suddenly found the courage to speak, maybe it was due to the reassurance that Uraraka was also here. Either way now the hard part was done, he just has to keep on talking.

"Slowly lower your arms without touching us." Hitoshi says out loud and the amount of relief which washes over him is more than he's ever felt before. He feels the Villian putting up a fight against his quirk but he has to endure, make sure all these people aren't harmed, himself included.

"Shinso?" Uraraka says as she walks closer to the two boys. "Who's this? What's happening, why was he grabbing you by the neck?"

Hitoshi sighs in relief, his hands wandering towards his throat, enjoying the bare feeling, the freedom.

"That's Shigiraki." Bakugo answers for him.

"Shigiraki?"

"The mastermind of the villians who infiltrated the USJ." She gasps before taking a step back, pulling the two boys with her. Concern is written all over her face.

"Are you both okay? You're not hurt are you?"

"We're fine." Hitoshi just about manages to say, his throat seeming to tense up once again. "But what now, I can't hold him under my control for much longer."

Bakugo whips around to face Uraraka. "Pink cheeks hurry up and call the hero's." He urges.

"Bakugo I can't hold him that long. And we can't just leave him here, what if he goes on a killing spree?"

Bakugo fidgets on the spot as he tries to think of a solution. Barely 3 seconds later he's whipped out his phone and is dialing a number. His leg constantly taps against the floor as he waits for whoever he's calling to pick up, by the second ring they have, and Hitoshi immediately knows that must be Aizawa. Weird looks are directed at the teens and the full grown man standing in the middle of a mall unmoving but no one seems to say anything directly. A few seconds into the call with Aizawa and Bakugo has explained the whole situation perfectly.

After explaining, Bakugo gives him the phone and he can hear the sense of panic in Aizawa's voice.

"How long do you think you can hold him?" He asks.

"Three minutes at best. He's putting up too much of a fight." Hitoshi hears a sharp inhale from the other end of the phone and can just picture Aizawa pinching the bridge of his nose.

"Hitoshi I'm on my way, stay on the call don't hang up."

"Ok." Is all Hitoshi can say as he tries his hardest to keep Shigiraki under his control.

"Hitoshi you've sent Uraraka to go look for a hero right." Hitoshi confirms that statement. "Good. If she isn't back in three minutes then everything is up to you. This is a big risk but you might have to bluff your way through this whole thing. Do you think you can do that?"

"Yes."

"Good, once those three minutes are up and you really can't hold him any longer, walk him to the front of the mall or somewhere more secluded. Tell him that there are several hero's now surrounding the mall, and that if he makes a commotion you can easily put him under your quirk once again. Please, please stay safe, make sure he's as far away from you as possible so you atleast have time to escape if he tries to go after you. Hitoshi I'll be right there ok, I give both you and Bakugo permission to use your quirks to defend yourself but that is only if he comes back to attack."

"Well technically I'm already using my quirk."

"Yes and we'll talk about the reprocussions of that later just do as I say. If Uraraka still isn't back by now start walking him somewhere less crowded."

Hitoshi sucks in a breath as he gives the phone back to Bakugo, not daring to end the call. Thankfully Aizawa's voice had helped calm down his nerves if only just a little bit, but that meant a reduced chance of messing up and having hundreds of people killed, if only just a little bit.

After 2 minutes, Uraraka has yet to return so Hitoshi starts walking Shigiraki to the other side of the mall where it's less busy. He tries to hold on as long as he can, he really does, but Uraraka still hasn't returned and he can no longer hold on.

Looking at the villian, Hitoshi tries to hide his fear. "I-I'll let you go as l-long as you don't make a fuss or aim to hurt anyone. I can put you under my control again just as quickly as I can release you so you better not harm anyone. There are already heroes nearby." Hitoshi bluffs but it seems to work as he feels The Villian put up less of a fight. "P-please just leave." Hitoshi stutters. "Or I'll have to keep you here for the heroes to capture." At this point the villian has basically completely given up on fighting the quirk. Hitoshi doesn't know if that means Shigiraki has accepted his proposal or is planning on going against it as soon as he's released but Hitoshi really can't hold on any longer.

Just like that, Shigiraki seems to gain awareness once again and both Hitoshi's and Bakugo's heart rates spike to a dangerous level, as he slowly turns around to look back at them. For a moment Hitoshi thinks that this is it, he's actually going to die. Hs sees his life flash before his eyes and he thinks of all the good times he's had ever since meeting Aizawa and Karma. He thinks of his friends, his family, how devastated Mic will be, how Bakugo will have so many regrets. Then he thinks about why on earth he has so much time to be thinking about anything, just to see that Shigiraki is stood still and relaxed, no intention of coming after him or anyone.

"Whatever." Shigiraki grumbles as he shoves his hands in his pockets. "I'm fully aware that you're bluffing but I'll let it go for now." Hitoshi feels his heart rate increase once again at the revelation that Shigiraki had called his bluff. He doesn't feel safe even as Shigiraki seems to back away from them, no hint of him planning to remove his hands from his pockets visible.

"See you soon." Shigiraki grins, directing his gaze at Bakugo much to the two boys confusion. He walks away and dissappears into the crowd but even once out of sight Hitoshi can't seem to relax. He listens out for screams or any sort of commotion but thankfully there is none.

It isn't till Aizawa has arrived not that long after that Hitoshi can finally breathe again. It's not till Hitoshi is safe and sound at home in his bed that he fully realises how many lives could have ended if it wasn't for Shigiraki giving up. He realises how incapable he truly was.

What kind of hero gets too scared to even use their quirk?

——

"Why if it isn't Class 1a."

"Monoma, put a sock in it."

Laughs are exchanged as all students, 1a and 1b alike, gather at the front of the school, filing into their assigned buses. Initially Aizawa had made the whole trip out to be something fun but now that Hitoshi thinks about it, it was impossible for Aizawa to have a whole week of just fun planned out for them. That's why the revelation of the summer camp actually being a boot camp didn't suprise him one bit. He was still kind of disappointed though, but he knows this trip will be helpful and a good experience. What he doesn't know however, is how dangerous and chaotic this trip will turn out to be, how much of a burden he is, how useless he truly will be. He doesn't know that everything is going to turn to shit, sooner than expected, but for now I give him the benefit of the doubt. Hitoshi files onto the bus feeling many emotions, but unsafe is not one of them. It's almost funny how quickly that will soon change.

Hitoshi wasn't sure how long this bus ride is going to be and just like the others he has no idea where they're even going, no one but the teachers present and maybe a select few back at school did. According to Aizawa this was the safest option, the less people that knew meant less of a chance of the villians knowing. After the whole Shigiraki incident apparently the location had been changed just to make sure that they would all be safe. Even so Hitoshi couldn't help but feel as if something was wrong, as if he was missing something. He looks around the coach, class A all being their usual boisterous selves. It's loud, very loud and the fact that Aizawa has yet to complain or say anything was suspicious. The slight smirk that lays on his face is even more suspicious. Something is definitely wrong but he just can't figure out what.

The coach comes to a jolting halt and for a second Hitoshi thinks they've arrived except when he looks outside they're still in the middle of nowhere.

"This is a rest spot all of you get out." Aizawa calls out as the class all start to get up. The smirk that still hangs on his face is concerning, very concerning. It gave Hitoshi all the more reason to believe that this was much more than just a rest spot.

"Guys." He barely croaks out as a few of his classmates turn to look at him. "I don't think its a good idea to leave." When Aizawa had managed found his way behind him he doesn't know, how he had done it in this cramped bus without Hitoshi noticing is what's really impressive. Although the way Aizawa smiles down at him as he starts to push him off the bus while ushering the rest out is probably the most concerning thing about this whole situation.

Eventually, Hitoshi relents and allows himself to be dragged off the bus. Like he had suspected, where they had stopped didn't seem like a rest stop at all. Him and his classmates all stood outside in confusion, a grin still on Aizawa's face. They didn't expect a whole dance routine/ introduction from pro heroes, The Pussycats who suddenly came out of nowhere- well only 2 of the Pussycats, but it had happened and he has no reason to complain.

Turns out they had stopped at quite a distance away from their destination. Turns out that not just Aizawa but the Pussycats as well are real sadists. It's a shame the class are only realising that now.

"Aw its so sweet how you all let your guard down." Pixiebob, one of the Pussycats says, an unsettling grin on her face.

Everyone's eyes seem to widen as they start to understand the gravity of the situation. "Everyone back to the bus! quick!"

Fuck this Hitoshi decides. He knew something was wrong, of course Aizawa was up to something. He stands there allowing the landslide of rocks to carry him down to the bottom, accepting his fate. The cuts that he acquired just from that one moment didn't even bother him as he knew for certain he was about to get many, many more. What definitely doesn't help is the materialisation of some monsters entirely made of rock, dust etcetera.

He already knew he was fucked, but this, this was way too much. Of course things only get worse as one of the Pusycats call out that whoever doesn't make it to the lodgings by lunch isn't getting any food. Hitoshi wishes he had listened to Aizawa in the morning when he had told him to eat as much as he can. Sometimes he really hates his life.

———

"Oh you're back." Mandalay smiles.

"Fuck yeah we're back!"

"I thought it was possible to make it back by lunch time." Denki whines.

"I don't ever recall saying it was possible." The shit eating grin that spreads on Pixiebob's face is enough to get anyone's blood boiling, that was assuming they even had the energy to get angry. Which they don't. Hitoshi has the urge to just completely collapse right then and there and never get back up again, in all honesty most of them do. That was absolutely brutal.

"You all did surprisingly well though. Made it back much quicker than expected." Mandalay tells them in an attempt to make them feel better.

"When had you expect us back?"

"Maybe around dinner time, who knows." If all the life hadn't already been sucked out of Hitoshi before, it definitely was now.

What makes things even worse is the fact that at the front of the lodgings all their suitcases and belongings lay on the floor. Hitoshi barely had anymore strength in his arms and now he'd have to carry his stuff to his room. He sighs accepting his fate being one of the first ones to find the resolve to get his luggage.

"All of you hurry up and get your things sorted. Dinner will be waiting for you, after that you're free to do whatever for the rest of the evening. You can all visit the hotsprings as well if you wish."

Hitoshi lets his eyes wonder to the boy standing off to the side. He had also been standing with the Pusycats before, come to think of it. The boy makes eye contact so Hitoshi decides to send him a wave but with a very distasteful glare the boy looks away. Hitoshi thinks that maybe he should go up to him but out of nowhere he feels Katsuki's hand against his shoulder. "I have a strong feeling that if you care about your life then you won't go over to him."

That feels a bit exaggerated but Hitoshi decides to let it go. He's had enough of not taking people's advice and regretting it later.

Soon after Hitoshi has put his suitcase away and is stalking over to the dinning room where most of his classmates have yet to arrive. He's absolutely starving but decides it would be rude not to wait for the rest of his classmates. Instead he goes over to Aizawa who's sitting alone and content off to the side.

"Had fun?" Aizawa grins as he sees Hitoshi approach him.

"Which part of that was fun?" Hitoshi grumbles as he collapses into a seat. "I was completely useless against those monsters, why on earth would you put your son through this."

"You're going to be put through this quite a lot on the future due to the nature of your quirk. Best to start learning how to overcome it now than later."

Hitoshi looks away begrudgingly knowing Aizawa is right. "Could have atleast warned us or something."

"In the future you're never going to have a warning."

"My future sounds bleak."

Aizawa huffs out a laugh. "Go eat your food, the rest of your classmates will be here soon. With how little you ate this morning you must be starving. If only I had warned you about that too, huh."

"How was I supposed to know this is what you were planning."

"This just goes to prove that I am always right." Hitoshi huffs as he walks away as soon as he sees his classmates walk into the room.

He gets where Aizawa was coming from but in reality, no part of this morning was fun or beneficial. All it taught him was how much of a liability he really is. He was of basically no help at all while in the forest, those with the more physical quirks were all stationed near the front, and it might be true that they were being tested as individuals but the class thought it would be easier to work together. Even working with the class Hitoshi could barely do anything, he had to be saved by his classmates way more than a couple of times. He could barely do anything in a team talkless of on his own, those terrifying few minutes where he found himself separated from the class were absolutely horrible.

To say that Hitoshi went and stuffed a whole lot of food in his mouth after this would be an understatement. It relieved his hunger and distracted him from the thoughts going against his self worth. All students, 1a and b alike sit together gulping down their food, satisfying their hunger after a long and stressful 6 hours. No doubt the food tasted amazing but even more so considering 1A haven't eaten all day. 1B however didn't seem to have gone through the same hell as them

After that the students were allowed to go soak in the hotsprings. It was nice to finally wash off all the dirt and sweat after the meal, and Hitoshi was hoping that for the rest of the night he would be able to relax but then one thing led to another led to the boy which had previously been following the Pussycats (Kota as he now knew) ended up falling from the intersection of the hotsprings. He was somehow nominated to go and tend to him to make sure he's alright and in the process he ended up finding out more about him from Mandalay

It turns out Kota hates hero's. Apparently his parents were hero's before dying on the job. The thought of any little kid hating heroes is unimaginable, especially in this society where every child you see aims to be a hero. Then again having late parents who died due to being heroes would probably upset anyone.

That night Hitoshi had a lot to think about. With his failure to be of any real help earlier on and the revelation of Kota's hate for heroes, it got him thinking about things that he would rather not. Like doubts and fears, if he was even suited to this kind of job, if he wouldn't just end up like Kota's parents revered at the time of death then forgotten straight afterwards. It was a scary thought, no one would wish to be forgotten but Hitoshi knew that isn't what matters, its saving peoples lives which matters.

Hitoshi hated his mind for wondering so much so with that revelation he decided to end his thoughts there before they spiraled out of control. Surprisingly not long after Hitoshi was able to fall asleep, able to ignore all doubts and worries. He had the best sleep ever, possibly even better than that day he woke up, finding himself in Aizawa's apartment.

Chapter End Notes

I thought I should atleast post something before I have to go on a short hiatus so here it is. It's not the best but I promise after this one, chapters will be much more interesting, this is where the plot really progresses.

I know I've been saying this for quite a while now but my final exams are actually here now. They'll end late June so until about early July I probably won't be updating any of my stories.

Thank you all for reading so far and I hope you continue to do so after I start posting again.💙💜

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

They were all up and running rather early. Way too early, the extras had been exhausted but Katsuki was fine. Aizawa had taken all their phones however which annoyed quite a lot of the class. Thankfully, Katsuki being the genius that he is had brought a backup phone to give in instead, he had told Shinso to do the same as well. Its no fun being the only one breaking the rules, plus Shinso is the only one of his idiots that he trusts not to get instantly found out.

It was the first official day of training and unsurprisingly it was no different to hell. To compare something to hell despite never having been is rather unfair however having to constantly survive Aizawa's training on a daily basis, Katsuki stands by those words. He could handle it of course, he can handle just about anything these stupid old geezers throw his way, what he couldn't handle however was having to cook with his classmates later that evening. That and talking about feelings.

"Great work everyone, it's time for dinner!" Cheers flow from the students utill it gradually melts into a disappointed silence. All that litters the tables are ingredients, no ready-made dishes in sight.

"Where's the food?" One of the 1B students asks.

"Didn't we say yesterday that we'll no longer be helping you. So get off your asses and come make it yourself." Groans fill the area but soon enough the students find some kind of stupid motivation and get on with the task.

Katsuki wouldn't say he hates cooking, no its actually quite the opposite. He likes to cook and he believes he's rather good at it as well - he's good at everything after all. The one thing he does not like however is being forced to watch as basically every single person in his class butchers the task. He wouldn't consider himself a perfectionist but when it comes to cooking if it's not perfect it might as well be garbage. It may have come as a suprise to the rest of the class when Katsuki starts to criticise them and bark out orders but soon enough, thanks to Shinso's assurance that he knows what he's doing, the class is actually following instructions.

Thankfully, in the end they are not left with a pile of burnt goo to eat, the food looks and tastes somewhat edible. To say it is perfect is a complete and utter lie, but as Deku would say for some weird reason, perfection is a spectrum. Although that is mostly just his excuse for making horrible food. In this case however Katsuki had to agree but like hell he's going to tell that to anyone. As far as they're concerned the food is absolute and utter rubbish even if he was so hungry he finished it all. Well he would have finished it all faster if he hadn't noticed Kota, the boy who has been doing nothing but moping around all day, walk away into the forest to who knows where.

After yesterday Brain Fucker did seem a little concerned about the child. He had told him about his parents and all that. Frankly Katsuki thought his parents death was a stupid reason to hate hero's, he loves his parents so how could he hate something that his parents once were, and will always be. Then again it's understandable. Either way Katsuki decides to get up to look for the boy, a plate of curry in his hands as he goes.

It's not that hard to follow the boys footprints, clear and prominent. He windes up by a cave where he finally spots the boy's stupid red cap. Katsuki hates how he's vaguely reminded of Deku's just as stupid, red shoes. Katsuki huffs as he walks up to the boy and sets the food next to him. The boy doesn't even notice he's there - courtesy of Aizawa's stealth training - until Katsuki huffs to get his attention. The boy is rather suprised when he finds Katsuki towering over him but then that suprise morphs into anger and Katsuki is regretting ever caring enough to come up here.

"Food." Katsuki says, pointing out the plate he left on the floor. "You haven't eaten yet have you?"

"Why are you here?" They boy glares. "How did you find my secret hiding space?"

Katsuki snorts. "Not much of a secret anymore is it."

They boy snarls at him before proceeding to look away in an overly dramatic manner. "Go away, I'm not hungry." Who knew this boy was so full of shit because not even a second after saying that his stomach audibly growls.

"You're not hungry huh?" Katsuki says with a shit eating smirk.

"Shut up! You didn't hear anything!" Katsuki snorts which seems to make the boy even angrier.

"Fine then let's say I didn't hear anything."

"Good, then leave."

"Oh, but it's not that simple. I came up here to give you food, so I'm not going to leave until you eat all of the food. But since you're not hungry I'll just wait until you are." The boy grits his teeth clearly pissed as he eyes the plate of curry in Katsuki's hand.

"Just go away. I'm not eating that."

"Then I guess I'm going to be here for quite a while. Don't get me wrong it's not like I want to be here right now. I'm just as hungry as you are you know."

"Then leave."

"Unfortunately for your Brain Fucker seems to be worried about you. No idea why but if it will make him feel better I'll suck it up and talk to a little brat like you."

"What?"

"What?"

The boy stares at Katsuki, speechless. Katsuki takes a seat next to him setting the plate next to him, just to annoy him.

"Go away I don't want to talk to you!"

"I didn't say anything."

"You don't need to say anything. I don't want to have anything to do with you wannabe heroes. You're all fucking delusional." The boy springs up onto his feet before losing his balance and slipping over the edge of the cliff. Effortlessly Katsuki grabs the kid by the back of his shirt and pulls him back up onto the cliffs edge.

The panic on the boys face morphs into relief before frustration as he looks away refusing to thank the so called 'hero wannabe'. Katsuki snorts once again. "See if I was a villian I would have just let you fall, probably would have laughed as well. If I was just any other citizen I probably would have lacked the confidence to even try to catch you."

"So." The kid snarls.

"So stop being ungrateful you little shit and eat the food."

"What is there to be grateful about!" He yells. "All of you stupid people playing heroes and villians, trying to show off how great your fucking quirks are. You're the reason so many innocent people are constantly dying!"

Katsuki stares blankly at the kid not expecting that outburst. "What does that have to do with me?" He asks in disgust. "If you have a problem with innocent people dying go take it up with the hero commission. They're the ones responsible for brainwashing society into fitting themselves into these stupid roles. What difference do you think you yapping on to a bunch of hero students will make."

"What!" He says enraged.

"What exactly are you trying to achieve anyway? I don't care if you hate heroes or whatever, that's not going to stop us from doing our job, is it? Its not our fault we live in this fucking world, going along with the commissions will, believing its actually our own. Congratu-fucking-lations, you haven't fell for societies stupid brainwashing. That doesn't mean you go around shouting at every hero you meet, its not our fault that we live in this fucked up society is it."

"What?" The boy says again this time actually confused.

"For fucks sake just eat the food before I it force down your throat. I don't have all day you know, if I don't hurry back down the fucking extras will eat everything and not leave any for me."

"I..."

"Eat." Katsuki shoves the plate of food onto the kids lap and thankfully this time he complies. Just as he had stated, Katsuki doesn't leave until every bit off food has been eaten off the plate.

Just as silently as he had arrived, he left as well. He isn't sure if the kid even realised that he was no longer there, he had kind of just left while he was still occupied with the plate infront of him. Either way it doesn't matter much to him, he walks back to the dinning table where he sees his classmates still sat, some having finished their food and some still helping themselves to more.

Katsuki takes his seat next to Shinso, his food thankfully still being there, as he continues to eat.

"Where'd you go?" Shinso asks as soon as he notices him.

"Went to go give the brat some food."

"Who, Kota?" Katsuki nods, stuffing curry into his mouth. "Didn't realise you cared so much."

"I don't." He sends a glare to the mother fucker smiling at him. "I swear if you don't wipe that fucking grin off your face I will do it myself."

"What do you mean? I'm not smiling."

"Yes you are you fucking moron. I don't care okay I did it because you seemed so worried."

"Aw so you did it for me." Yes Katsuki did, and he wholeheartedly regrets it now.

"What no. I did it so you wouldn't get distracted by stupid things. I don't want to have to carry your ass around when you get yourself knocked out during training."

"So you did do it for me?"

"Are you deaf, I did it for me!"

"So you wouldn't be left with a guilty conscious?"

"Fuck you, that is not what I meant."

Brain fucker laughs finishing up the last of his food. It isn't until he's gone to put his plate away and come back that he finally thinks to ask something. "Hey Bakugo, what did you say to him exactly?"

"To stop being an idiot and that if he wants to blame someone blame the hero commission."

It may have just been Katsuki's imagination but judging from the fuckers expression maybe that was the wrong thing to say. "You told him to blame the hero commission?"

"Yeah. Am I wrong?"

"Well no but still. You can't just tell a kid to go against the hero commission, that's encouraging villian and vigilante behaviour."

Katsuki takes another bite of his curry before letting out a slight laugh. "Yeah I guess it is."

"Katsuki you're a hero."

"So?"

"Heroes can't encourage vigilante behaviour, they work for the hero commission."

"I think you're forgetting that my boyfriend who is also your best friend is a vigilante. Encouraging the behaviour is the least of our worries."

Shinso huffs dropping himself into his chair. "Fair enough."

———

"Perfect. You're all here." Shigiraki drawls. "You all better be prepared, I did tell you that we will be taking action today. Today is the day you will all finally show your worth." The grin that appears on Shigiraki's face is terrifying to say the least and frankly Dabi is hating every second of this meeting.

It's around 8pm and the sun has already set. He listens intently to all that Shigiraki is saying, making sure to record the whole discussion so he can send it to Aizawa who will hopefully put a fork in Shigiraki's plans. At first Shigiraki just discuses where every person will be positioned, he's gotten a map out and everything. Dabi still doesn't know exactly what the villian is planning or why he is planning it, all he knows is that he's meant to set trees alight for whatever reason. It's true arson is his thing, that doesn't mean he wants to burn a whole forest down though. Even villians should know its bad to contribute to climate change.

Toga will be stationed a little closer into the forest than him, the same with Mustard. Throughout Shigiraki's speech Toga is looking at him unsure of what to feel or do. Dabi sighs, he isn't exactly sure what to do either, he just really doesn't want anyone to get hurt, but when there's a raging fire in the middle of a forest filled with trees, someone is bound to get hurt.

Shiggy continues to talk and tell them the plan while still leaving a considerable amount of details out. He just mainly told them where they will all be positioned and their roles in the operation. Dabi didn't expect to be sent off as soon as Shigiraki had finished explaining things to them. That meant there was no time for him to call Aizawa or figure out what he was meant to do. Thankfully though he does have enough time to quickly send Eraserhead the voice recordings and just hope for the best.

While the villians are busy with their last minute preparations, Dabi pulls Toga aside.

"Dabi what am I supposed to do?" She asks, clearly conflicted, before he can even say a thing.

Dabi looks around cautiously to make sure no one is paying any mind to them."He still hasn't told us who or what we're looking for, hopefully he tells us soon. Try your best to not encounter people but if you do, keep up the act but don't hurt them."

"You want me to act like I'm going to hurt them but I'm not meant to actually hurt them?" Toga asks as if that the most absurd thing she's ever heard.

"Yeah."

"That sounds difficult."

Dabi sighs. "Well try your best, and if it really is that difficult for you you can hurt them a little just don't kill them."

"Don't kill them?"

"Yes Toga, don't kill them."

She huffs. "Fine then." Crossing her arms she's spares a glance Mustard's way. "What about Mustard?"

Dabi sighs again, feeling more conflicted than ever. The things he's put himself through for that tiny green gremlin is actually crazy. No doubt he's going to make Karma pay tenfold for this.

"If you get an opportunity to talk to Mustard, tell him what I told you." Toga nods. She seems like she wants to say something else but doesn't get the opportunity to as Shigiraki calls out to get all their attentions once again.

"I'm about to send you all off." He says then proceeds to hold up a picture. Dabi's heart drops when he sees who it is. That right there was a picture of Bakugo Katsuki standing on the first place podium at the sports festival looking less than happy to be there.

"Does that mean..."

"Yep." Shigiraki grins. "The first year UA brats are currently on a little trip so we're going to take this opportunity to attack them."

Dabi tries to push down the nerves threatening to bubble out of him. "You want us to Kidnap Bakugo Katsuki?"

Shigiraki nods. "Kill this brat while you're at it." Shigiraki holds up a picture of another 1a kid. Dabi recognises him from the sports festival but doesn't know who it is. "Be careful," Shigiraki warns, "he has a brain washing quirk although I still can't figure out the requirements for him to activate it."

Rounds of acknowledgement leave the mouths of the villians as Shigiraki instructs Kurogiri to open a warpgate. Its a total blur for Dabi as they're all filled into it and all of a sudden find themselves in a forest. A forest once full of innocent kids all having fun. A forest now filled with dark secrets, invaders that are not meant to be there. Dabi shares one more glance with Toga as the league all walk off to take their positions. He sighs, bracing himself for what comes next.

One moment the moon glistens, the only source of light to guide these naive souls through the night. The next, there's a spark, then a flame, then a fully grown raging fire spreading smoke and misery as it travels. The sky lights up with beautiful shades of blue, but with beauty comes disorder. And just like that the world dissolves into chaos.

———

He's gone.

He's gone. He's gone. He's gone. He's gone, vanished, disappeared. He's not here, Bakugo is not here, he's gone, missing and this is all Hitoshi's fault.

He was so close. So, so close. Why couldn't he be better, more useful? Why was he so useless? Just like before he was unable to help, unable to do anything to save the teen. Just like before he realises he's a burden, he's weak.

Bakugo is gone and it's all his fault. Flashes of Hitoshi's outstretched hand just barely missing Bakugo's continue to circle in his mind. He can't get it out, can't get rid of it, can't get over the fact that Bakugo is gone. He's gone, he was taken, and not just by anyone. By villians, villians who wouldn't take a second thought to kill those around them, villians who didn't take a second thought when attacking a camp filled with 40 defenseless teenagers for goodness sake. Who does that, who targets children!

Hitoshi collapses to the floor, his legs giving out. What now? What was he meant to do now? How was he meant to tell Aizawa this, what was he meant to say? That he lost Bakugo, he lost the person who was right infront of him basically an inch from his grasp. That he's weak and useless, that he couldn't do a thing. Why did he think he could save him? Why did he think he would be of any use to the people around him? Just like at the mall and just like the start of the boot camp, hell even when fighting Muscular. He was useless, that's what Hitoshi was. He's useless and a waste of space. Someone who can't even reach a person so close to them, so, so close, they must be useless.

Things had been so peaceful throughout the entirety of the boot camp. Yes it had been very stressful and anxiety inducing, basically the whole time but at least they were all safe. Well that changed very quickly on the evening of the third night. Dinner was fine, just like the day before the students had to make their own food. And just like the day before Bakugo had brought some food over to Kota.

A test of courage had been arranged by the adults, they had said it was a break from the gruelling training. Those who had failed the midterm exams where forced to go to their remedial classes while everyone else got to participate. Things had started off great, 1B were set up in the forest while 1A went in one by one in pairs.

That's when all hell broke loose.

About half of 1a had entered the forest when all of a sudden the sky seems to light up with shades of blue. It was beautiful to say the least, beautiful yet unnatural. The sky wasn't meant to light up like that, especially not in that shade of blue, but then the smoke becomes visible and things start to fall into place. The forest was on fire, the same forest where most of the first years were currently roaming around unsupervised.

Hitoshi stands there frozen to the spot just as the rest of his classmates still in the vicinity. He's already wracking his brain trying to figure out how and why the fire spreading is blue when he hears a shout. He whips around to be met with the sight of Pixiebob on the floor. It happened so quickly, the way things turned into chaos. He stands frozen as Tiger and Mandalay try to keep the students away from the villians currently towering over an unconscious Pixiebob.

Hitoshi can't help but cower at the sight of the two villians so obviously in control as of this moment, with a hostage at hand. He can feel his heart racing, similar to the way it did back at the mall when confronted with Shigiraki. Hitoshi doesn't even register the fact that his phone is ringing until he realises that there's only one other person in the camp who knows he still has his phone. This is in no way the best time to take out his phone but he does so anyway and just as he thought, it was Bakugo who had texted him.

'What's happening', Is what it says and Hitoshi can't help the way his heart clenches as he realises, Bakugo is in the forest. The forest which is on fire and is no doubt swarming with even more villians. Hitoshi tries to steady his shaking hands just enough to text him back.

'Villians.' Is all he can manage to type out. The last thing he had expected was Bakugo to reply with 'Kota'. Hitoshi's heart sinks even more, Kota is currently defenseless and alone who knows where.

He feels his phone ring and is pulled out of his thoughts at the sight of Bakugo calling him.

"I'll direct you to where he is, just hurry up and get him."

Full of determination, or maybe desperation, Hitoshi tells Mandalay he's going to get Kota before departing, Bakugo being his guide.

"Everyone listen up this is Mandalay! This is an emergency! Two villians have invaded the area, it is highly likely that there are several more! All students make your way back to the lodgings, if you encounter any villians do not engage in combat, continue your retreat!"

How. How did they find us. No one was meant to find this place. Shota rushes outside as fast as he can, ensuring the students stay in their seats first. He runs as fast as his legs can possibly carry him until he's met with the distant smell of smoke. The blue flames which rise from the forest are unmissable just like the way Shota's heart sinks. His students, his students are there inside the forest, his kids are in danger. And to say that he was considering doing something very stupid is in no way a lie, thankfully for him a new obstacle is now in his way.

Atleast that's what he thought at first. It comes as a suprise when he's forced to dodge a barage of blue flames aimed straight towards him. What comes as an even bigger suprise is being faced with a wobbly smile from none other than Dabi, the person who had been sent to the LOV to prevent this exact situation from happening.

"Sorry." He says with a shrug. "It's best to keep up the act."

Shota may or may not have ended up punching him a little too hard, to "keep up the act", of course.

"What are you doing here?" Shota snarls. "What is going on?"

Taking a look around to check that no one is nearby Dabi answers. "Didn't you check the messages I sent."

"Messages?" It doesn't even take a second for Shota to whip out his phone, tapping his foot impatiently as he waits for it to turn on. As soon as he does he curses himself as Dabi did in fact send him messages.

"Those are voice recordings of Shigiraki's whole plan. Although I suppose its a little too late to listen to them right now but it might still be useful later."

Shota pinches the bridge of his nose as he huffs. He needs to calm down and think rationality. Unfortunately for him its almost fucking impossible to calm down when your kids are in a forest which is on fire. He once again has the urge to punch Dabi in the face.

"So are you going to explain what's going on or will you just stand there?" Shota snaps.

"Ah right. In total there are 9 of us here, including myself, although I have persuade another one of the members not to hurt anyone. That doesn't help all that much in this situation though."

Shota breathes in a sharp breath as he scans the perimeter of the forest. "Where are the most dangerous villians stationed?"

"The most dangerous are definitely Muscular and Moonfish. Moonfish is in the center of the forest, Muscular by the clifftop. However all the villians are rather dangerous in their own right."

Well shit, Shota thinks. Quite a few of the students have no doubt already encountered villians. "What's your purpose?" He asks. "You must have a reason for attacking." He looks over to Dabi expectantly, and fuck why does he look so uncomfortable, so guilty.

"We were told to Kidnap a student." And now that makes so much sense. The look on his face, the way he's avoiding his gaze.

"Who." Shota is pretty sure he snarls that but he doesn't have time to focus on the tone of his voice. "Who is it?" He says once again.

"Bakugo."

Well fuck. Fuckfuckfuckfuckufuck.

"Dabi!" He says, throwing his arms onto his shoulders to make sure he maintains eye contact. "You haven't told Deku anything yet right?"

"No."

"Good. Keep it that way." Shota growls, and now he feels kind of bad about the way Dabi seems to flinch but like has been said there's much more important things to think about.

"W-why can't I tell him?" Well bless his soul, he's feeling intimidated now.

"We have enough to deal with as is, Deku is unpredictable and we don't need him coming here and making this worse. No matter what happens, Deku can not know a thing."

"Ok." Dabi agrees as he breaks free from Shota's grasp.

"Good." Shota says, whipping back round to look over the forest once again, the beautiful blue flames greedily licking up the trees, and potentially his students as well. "Tell me your plans, no matter what I'm getting all of my students out of this safely."

———

Mustard takes a deep breath in trying to filter out his thoughts. Toga had come up to him just before they had been forced to get into position. She had told him about Dabi's plan, about wanting to leave the league and taking him with them.

He takes his gun, finger resting on the trigger. One shot, one shot is all it would take to kill these brats, it's that simple. But one shot, that's all it would take to make or break his life, for Dabi to leave him behind. But this is what he wanted wasn't it? He chose to come to the league, he was prepared to become a villian, stand up for his own justice. But what if he doesn't actually want that? Dabi is annoying he must admit but to say he absolutely detested talking to him would be a lie, same with Toga. If anything they're the only people who would actually give a shit about him in the league, if they leave then what then. He stays with the league? Would they even still want him, is he not just being used again?

His gaze follows the muscle brained buffon charging towards him, he dodges every punch sensing his movements. He dances between the two students attacks, thoughts dancing with him. He sends out a few shots, missed on purpose. They're a mere warning, he's trying to tell them to stand back, not to get close, but how unsurprising it is that the two students don't seem to get that memo. For students attending such an elite high school they sure are stupid. Mustard may or may not have told them as such, and that definitely didn't help his situation since the musclebrain seems to go at him harder.

Now who on earth runs straight up to a guy with a gun in his hand? UA students apparently, at this point its like they are asking for death. Unfortunately for them the guy with the gun is still deciding whether he wants to be a killer or not. And you know what, the stupid mask on his face is stuffy. The gas in the air is annoying. The kids attacking him are just as bad and the thoughts in his head can go fuck themselves!

He dashes the gun on the floor, his only method of both attack and defence. He accepts his fate as he sees the students running towards him and he falls to the ground as he's punched right in the jaw. And wow that hurt but he isn't so weak that he's unable to get back up, he's also not so stupid that he would get back up. He'd much rather lie on the ground and hope the students just pass him by and get on with their lives rather than continuously beat him back down every time he tries to get up.

So that is what he does. He deactivates his quirk, acts dead and hopes for the best. He can always decide whether to go with Dabi or not when the time comes. For now he'd rather just lie on the ground looking up at the sky.

Who knew the night sky could be so surprisingly beautiful.

Who knew that the faint sounds of screams and fights in all directions could be so surprisingly unsettling.

Who could have known that he was making the wrong decision being here right now. That being a villian really isn't worth it, that he would have been better off just living an earnest life.

Now that he thinks about it, he guesses they knew. His parents knew. His parents knew and tried to warn him but he didn't listen.

Safety. He's got to get Kota back to safety. He has to get to Bakugo. He has to make sure the villians don't get to him first. He has to warn them all, he has to get to Mandalay.

The events keep replaying in his mind. The way he stood frozen for a solid minute as he watched the kid forced to interact with the villian. As he watched the wicked glint in the villians eyes, unwavering as he riled Kota up. He watched as the villian made a move, lunging for the innocent child and not giving a shit. Hitoshi should have ran. He should have gone to him. But he didn't, he couldn't. He was stuck, frozen. He was scared.

If Kota hadn't jumped out of the way, if he had been just a little bit slower, if things hadn't gone the way they had then Kota would be dead. Hitoshi would have witnessed a death he could have easily prevented but instead he was stuck, frozen, he was scared.

He did speak. Eventually. He found the courage to move and get Kota to safety but he had the capacity to do that much earlier. Even as he spoke and got the villian under his command he still felt useless. Even as he grabbed Kota and made a dash for it while the villian was unresponsive he still hated himself down to his very core. Even as he struggled in his mental fight against the villian ultimately he lost, unsurprisingly he was weak and stupid and useless.

Unsurprisingly he lost the physical fight just as easily. Bruised and broken he fought having no choice. Bruised and broken he pushed through the pain and fought to save the one he should have helped much sooner. He couldn't help but think throughout that fight how better off Kota would be if another one of his classmates were there instead. If someone else was here, if Kota didn't have such bad luck to only have him to rely on would he be safe by now?

Would he not have to watch his saviour suffer under the torture of the villian? Would he not be forced to shed tears, to feel the need to try and help, to lose all hope in his eyes?

Hitoshi successfully saved him but at what cost. He had eventually managed to trick the villian once again and get him under his quirk but now he no doubt has a target on his back. He had done the unthinkable, he had made the villian jump off the cliff just to give him even the slightest chance of escaping. He had saved a life in exchange for potential harming another, even if it is a villian.

He had won the overall battle but had lost everything else. A life was saved but the struggle was avoidable. If only he was better, if only he had moved faster, if only he wasn't so useless, if only he had been born with a better, flashier quirk. Maybe then he would have the courage to take action, maybe then he would feel like a real hero. Maybe then he wouldn't have just stood and watched, stuck, frozen, scared.

"Shota!" Hitoshi cries out in nothing but pure joy as he runs, his teacher coming into view. Kota still perched on his back, he adjusts his grip.

"Hitoshi what the hell happened?" Is Aizawa's first response and oh how Hitoshi is so glad to see him. The urge to just break down right here and now is great but he has to stay strong for Kota. That and there seems to be someone else with his dad. Someone that he's never seen before. Someone who must be a villian.

"You." The man speaks, a look of shock on his face. Surprisingly Aizawa seems to turn to him, guard down and posture relaxed.

"What?"

"He's not the one we came here for but Shigiraki had instructed us to kill him if we encounter him." Is what the man says

Shota whips round to fully face him, clear anger on his face. "What!"

"So you are a villian?" Hitoshi immediately gets into a fighting stance, despite being in no condition to fight. His head throbs, his arms ache and it feels as if every muscle in his leg has been ripped apart. He must have been running on nothing but adrenaline if he's still standing.

"Hitoshi, stand down he's on our side." Hitoshi listen, he's skeptical but he trusts Shota's judgement. "What happened to you anyway." His adoptive father says, grabbing ahold of his shoulders gently enough that it won't aggravate his wounds.

"I encountered a villian while trying to save Kota." The child is still on his back, obviously scared and traumatised. He looks up to the boy, and forces a smile onto his face.

"Kota this is my teacher. He'll take care of you. He's going to make sure your safe and that no one will hurt you." The boy nods and lets Hitoshi slowly drop him off his back into Shota's arms.

"Where was he?" Shota asks.

"By the clifftop." Shota seems to lose his breath at that. His already worried expression seems even more worried now, and wow Hitoshi is sure this is the most expression he's seen from him in a while.

"That's not important right now though." Hitoshi tells him. "I don't know why but the villians are after Bakugo."

At the mention of Bakugo, Shota seems to remember what is happening right now because his usual stoic expression appears back on his face.

"That's right, their target is Bakugo but don't worry I'll deal with it. For now Hitoshi let's go back to the cabin so we can get you sorted out."

"I'm fine." Hitoshi tells him as he steps back, anything but fine yet also completely intent on running back into the forest.

"What no!" Shota replies taking a step forward in response to Hitoshi's movements.

"I'm fine." Hitoshi tells him once again, this time taking more steps back before pivoting on his heel and deciding to run. "I need to get to Bakugo!"

"Hitoshi, no you can't! You're injured, you are in no way able to fight!"

Hitoshi turns to look at him, gritting his teeth and holding back tears from the pain he feels. "Shota I'll be fine." He says. "Please take care of Kota." He turns to run once again but is stopped by Shota once more calling out his name.

"Hitoshi!" He shouts, surprisingly a little bit of fear resonating in his voice. "If you want to help so desperately, you go tell Mandalay that I'm giving the students permission to defend themselves."

"You're allowing us to fight?"

Shota nods. "Also tell her that their target is Bakugo, tell the students to protect him and get him back here at all costs." Hitoshi nods as he prepares to take off once again. "You have to come back though Hitoshi. Right after you tell Mandalay you come back okay."

Hitoshi agrees just to put his mind at ease. It is safe to say Hitoshi didn't listen to him. He kept pushing on and on until he finally got to Bakugo. He kept pushing on and on with all his might, he tried his best but his best wasn't enough. He has lost him. Let him slip through his fingers. He was so close, yet not close enough. Bakugo is gone and it's all his fault and now he can't help but wonder, is he really suited to being a hero if he can't even save the one person he wants to the most.

Chapter End Notes

I'm back!!!

Regrets

Shota counts over the students again. He counts over them again and again hoping that they'll add up, hoping that that last child will just appear out of nowhere, hoping that he's at fault, that he's counting wrong. No mater how much Shota counts and counts the number stays the same. 39 bruised and battered children, 39 exhausted and traumatised children. No matter how many times he counts there's only 39 instead of 40.

Shota tries to stop himself from shaking. The last thing he should be doing in this situation is showing his kids his weakness. He needs to be strong for them, now more than ever. That is hard, that is so very hard, how wouldn't it be when he had to watch the remaining students come back from the deepest parts of the forest, depressed and completely unresponsive. They had all looked at each other with that same sad expression when he had asked if they've seen Bakugo, it was heart breaking to watch them all hold back tears, it broke his heart even more when Hitoshi seemed to fail at that and mentally collapsed. Shota had had to push down his parental instincts to hold his son right then and there, to hug him as tight as he can and not let go.

"What happened?" Shota barely manages to croak out. He has an idea already but he tries his best to think positive, although there's nothing positive about a group of kids bursting into tears at the mention of someone's name.

It had taken a while and a lot of comforting from the people around Hitoshi for someone to finally speak. Hitoshi, eyes red and voice coarse had been the one to tell him.

"Bakugo is gone." Is all he had said initially and Shouta's heart sank. He knew what that meant, he knew that the villians were after Bakugo but still he couldn't help himself but ask.

"What do you mean?"

"They took him." Hitoshi cries. "I was right there, he was within my reach but they..." He can't even finish his sentence as he bursts into tears. It really is heart breaking, and seeing his son burst into tears once again, it was impossible for Aizawa to hold back.

He wraps him in a hug, drawing circles in his back with his finger, trying his best to soothe the tears. He sends the other students to the cabin as Hitoshi continues to cry, holding him tight. It definitely isn't the first time Shota has seen Hitoshi cry. He's seen him cry many times before, the first time Deku had brought him over to his house he had cried after being told he could be a hero, but this isn't the same. This is much more distressing than it was back then because now Shota actually cares for Hitoshi and would give anything to keep him safe. He would do anything to keep all his children safe, and that includes class 1a.

Shota continues to comfort his son, he continues to draw circles in his back, squeeze him close and hold him tight. He continues to soothe his tears as he tries to hold back his own. It's safe to say that on that night not a single one of them got a second of sleep. They all got up in the morning feeling even worse than they had the day before.

Hizashi had been getting ready for bed when he got the call. It was from his husband and despite being skeptical about receiving a call at that time Hizashi still picked up. Nothing could have prepared him for what came next.

"Hizashi as soon as I end this call, please call Izuku and make him stay with you." Is the first thing his husband says. Hizashi would have questioned it, he would have asked why like any other person would, but through the tone of his husbands voice he knew, he knew that something terribly wrong has happened and that this is no time to be playing around.

"Will you explain to me what happened later?"

"I can't." Is what Shota says and Hizashi easily accepts his words.

"Okay." He agrees. "I'll ask him to come over now."

"One more thing." Hizashi listens attentively. "Make sure to keep him away from all news and social media. Just anything that can give him access to the news. I don't know how you'll do it but he can't know what happened no matter what. There should still be time before the press gets wind of this situation anyway but it's incredibly important that Izuku doesn't know. I don't know what he would do but I'm assuming it won't be very beneficial for us."

Hizashi sucks in a breath. "I'm assuming you want me to isolate myself from the news as well."

"Please do. All this would be pointless if the kid just goes and checks your memories."

Hizashi sighs, desperately wanting to know more but he knows he can't. "Can you atleast tell me if the kids are safe?"

There's a long pause from his husband, long enough that Hizashi had thought they had lost connection but eventually he does speak. "Hitoshi is alive." Is all Shota says and Hizashi can't help but panic at the speculation that statement causes.

"Is he hurt? Are you hurt? How about the other kids?" His husband pauses once again and Hizashi can feel the mental strain his husband is going through. It breaks his heart.

"We'll all be safe and fine soon enough. Every single one of us. I'll make sure of it."

"What about Bakugo?" That must have been where the problem lies. Now that he thinks about it if it wasn't about Bakugo then why else would Shota tell him to keep Izuku away from all news.

The silence is enough of an answer to tell Hizashi to drop the subject. "I'll stop asking." He says, and he can tell his husband seems thankful for it.

"Don't worry Zashi, things will turn out fine."

"Yeah. Things will turn out fine." He repeats. He's pretty sure they both don't believe those words but they desperately grip onto them anyway. "Shota one more thing." Hizashi says before his husband can hang up.

"What is it?"

"Please stay safe. Take care of yourself and don't do anything stupid."

"When have I ever done anything stupid?" His husband snorts from over the phone but Hizashi can't bear to answer that question.

"I'll talk to you later okay. Call me when things have settled down." Sho agrees before hanging up and leaving Hizashi to struggle alone in this silence. He puts down his phone before collapsing onto the sofa, his gaze on the ceiling.

"Always." Mic says aloud to the empty room. "You always do something stupid when it comes to the people you love."

Hizashi grins his usual Present Mic grin as he hands Izuku a cup of orange juice. The vigilante sits quietly as he sips on the beverage with nothing better to do. As Izuku had come into the house Hizashi had made sure to confiscate his phone. Even before that Hizashi had made sure to unplug the TV and hide the remote somewhere the listener could never find it. He hid all news papers and hid his phones as well, he hid anything and everything that could possibly expose whatever happened during the summer camp to them.

Hizashi even went and took it a step further. After all, his efforts would be pointless if the vigilante were to find out through gossip, same with him. He had made sure to stock up the house with enough food and snacks to last two weeks and games to keep them occupied. He even took some time off work just so they could get rid of any need to interact with the outside world.

He doesn't know how long he has to keep Izuku busy. Sho hadn't told him but he believes he'll be called as soon as everything has been sorted. Hopefully it's all sorted out soon, the anxiety is nearly enough to kill him.

"Mic are you ok?" The listener asks, snapping Hizashi out of his thoughts. "Was there something you needed, why'd you call me over?"

Hizashi forces a grin on his face, it's static and lifeless, his fake smile just perfect for the cameras. It may be lifeless but it was perfect and hard for others to discern, only a genius could tell that it was fake if you've never truly seen Hizashi smile. The way Izuku seems to instantly zoom in on this fact sends a shiver down Hizashi's spine and adrenaline pumping round his body. He's really unsure he'll be able to do this for that long.

"Do I need a reason to call you?" Hizashi decides to say as he takes a seat on the couch next to him.

The listener takes a sip of his juice, watching Hizashi with his calculating gaze. "I suppose not." He says. "But the fact that you have is unexpected."

"Really? It's unexpected that I'd call you here for no reason?"

Izuku takes a minute to think. "Ok, maybe not completely unexpected. You're kind of unpredictable like that I guess." Hizashi has absolutely no words for that, he doesn't know if he should take that as a compliment or sarcasm. "You must be lonely without Aizawa and Toshi around." The boy giggles into his drink. "If you were lonely you should have just said that."

Hizashi feels pretty insulted. Yes he's lonely without Shota and Hitoshi but not to the point that he couldn't survive a week by himself or would bother others just because of it. Either way he supposes its a good thing the listener assumes he's just lonely, despite how wrong he is.

"Well, so what if I'm lonely?" Hizashi teases. "You can't tell me you're not just as lonely as me."

"And what makes you think that?" The green haired boy grins, mischief laced between his lips.

Crossing his arms in an overly dramatic manner, Hizashi gives him a hard stare. "Well I don't know. Maybe because you've left us for over a month and we're pretty much family at this point. Unless you have gone and found yourself a new family?"

"Aww. You see me as your family."

Hizashi huffs, a fond smile on his face. " Don't you see us as your family little listener?"

"Of course I do." Izuku beams and oh wow that smile is way too bright. "I love you too Mic. You and Toshi and Zawa and Kacchan. I love you all. So I guess that's a good enough excuse for me to stay here to help you feel less lonely."

Ruffling his hair Mic sighs. "Yeah we all love you too listener... but I'm not lonely stop saying that." Izuku gives him a knowing look as if saying 'you can't fool me'.

"So what exactly were you planning for us to do exactly?" Izuku says, changing the subject.

"Lock ourselves in the house and not come out for several days." Mic grins as he ignores the way the listeners tilts his head in confusion.

"What?" He says.

"The others are surviving without technology so let's do the same, ya dig."

"Is that why you took my phone?" Mic nods and the listener seems to let out some kind of strained laugh clearly regretting having answered Hizashi's call. It would be funny in a way if Hizashi didn't feel so anxious.

"Isn't this going to be fun or what?"

"Yeah." The listener replies half-heartedly. "Super fun."

Usually Mic would laugh but he can feel the listeners pain. This was going to be hell.

———

Hitoshi doesn't remember much. He remembers walking out of the forest with the others, bursting into tears as he told Aizawa what happened. He remembers Aizawa's comforting grasp as he stroked his hair and soothed his tears. He remembers the sound of sirens but after that, that's pretty much it. After that point his memory is hazey, he's assuming that the pain had finally started to kick in.

He aims to sit up in the bed but his body seems to hate that idea as pain starts coursing through his body. He feels someone stir at his feet and its only until then does he realise that someone else is in here with him. He stares at Aizawa not sure if he's actually asleep or awake but the lazy smile Aizawa sends his way is all the answer he needs.

The hero sits up, having been slumped onto the bed which Hitoshi has no doubt is bad for his back. "Good morning." Aizawa says in his usual grouchy voice.

"G-good morning." Hitoshi replies back, his throat dry and coarse. "How long was I out?"

"2 days, but you've just kind of been in and out of consciousness."

2 days, Hitoshi thinks. Things ended with such chaos and yet he fell asleep for two whole days. He sighs as he brings his knees up to his chest, ignoring the pain it brings as he does so. "How is everyone." He asks, he can see the way Aizawa's expression grows grim.

"They're all fine. Out of all of them you were the most injured."

"What about the ones that were knocked out by the gas?"

"It was mainly 1B who were affected by the gas as they were all in the forest. Thankfully the gas wasn't dangerous, they all woke up after a day."

Hitoshi tries to smile a little, tries to let the relief wash over him but he can't. "W-what about...", he starts but he can't even finish the sentence. He doesn't need to however.

"Bakugo's whereabouts are still unknown." Hitoshi sucks in a breath, sending a spike of pain up his lungs as he does. If only he had caught him that time. If only he had been a little bit faster, if only he wasn't as useless as he is then he could have saved him, then Bakugo wouldn't be in the clutches of the villians.

"It will be okay." Aizawa says but his words do little to assure him. "Everyone is trying their best to locate and save him."

Hitoshi looks down, locking his gaze on anything but Aizawa. "What if your best isn't enough?" He says more to himself than Aizawa but his teacher answers anyway.

"Hitoshi." He says leaning in close. "Everything will be okay. I'll make sure it will. No matter what I will get Katsuki back. I promise."

"How can you promise something like that when there's no proof he's even alive."

"Of course he's alive."

"And how do you know?" He buries himself deeper into his knees, hands balled into a fist. "He could be dead for all we know. They could have injured him, brutally hurt him. He could be in so much pain and agony right now and it would all be my fault." Hitoshi lets himself be pulled into a hug with little resistance, he doesn't have the energy right now to refuse. He lets himself enjoy the warmth and comfort of another person but that doesn't mean it makes him feel any less guilty.

"Hitoshi it's not your fault. If anything it's my fault, this whole thing was avoidable so I'm sorry."

"Why are you apologising. Avoidable or not it doesn't change the fact that Katsuki is gone because I couldn't catch him in time." Tears well up in his eyes as he adjusts himself in Aizawa's grip. "Aizawa, it was all my fault. I should have been faster, I should have tried harder, hell I should have jumped in with him just to pull him back out."

"Don't say that!" Aizawa says tensing as he does. "Hitoshi you did your best, you did what you could so stop blaming yourself. It was the right thing to do not jumping in after him, that would only mean that the villians have more students in their grasp. Hitoshi I know you feel guilty and I know you want to blame yourself but stop looking at what you should have done and instead look to the future and what you can still do."

"Nothing." Hitoshi spits, rage filling up inside of him. Rage directed solely at himself. "That's what I can do. I can't do a thing because Katsuki is gone!" Aizawa sighs as he hold Hitoshi tighter, stroking his hair. He doesn't complain as Hitoshi cries into his shirt.

After a few minutes of silence, once Hitoshi's tears start to dry he speaks once again. "Hey Aizawa."

"What is it kid?"

"Do you really think I'm suited to being a hero." The way Aizawa whips his head to look up at him so fast was kind of funny. Hitoshi would have laughed if he wasn't so bitter.

"Of course you're suited to being a hero. Why wouldn't you be?"

Hitoshi sighs, turning away from his father's pained expression. "I don't know. I don't really think I'm good at this. Lately I've been nothing but a burden, so I-"

"-Hitoshi you're not a burden."

Hitoshi looks at him not convinced. "Aizawa, I'm useless. I can barely stand infront of a villian without freezing in fear. I can't do anything on my own, I always have to rely on everyone else. What kind of a hero am I if I'm too afraid to even open my mouth and speak. Too afraid to even use my quirk."

"Is this about the mall incident?"

"Aizawa it's more than that. Even before that I've never been anything that great. I can barely fight, I always lose during class sparring. The others are amazing and a hundred times better than me while I'm... well I'm just a nuisance."

"And what makes you think that?" Hitoshi looks at Aizawa, frustration crossing his features.

"Why wouldn't I think that. At the mall I was too afraid to even speak to Shigiraki and get him under my quirk. He could have killed me and Bakugo as soon as he saw us and I would have stood there in fear unable to do a single thing. This trip, as soon as you sent us out of the coach into the forest, all I could do was depend on the others. I was a burden, they kept getting hurt trying to help me. I can't even fight for myself, why wouldn't I be a nuisance. Then there's Kota. Once again I was too scared to do anything, I frooze in fear for a good minute, that was enough time for Muscular to kill Kota if he really wanted to. He could have killed me as well. What kind of hero am I if I'm too scared to save a person right infront of me."

"Hey Hitoshi, remember the first time we met, when Izuku had brought you to my house." Hitoshi simply nods, not knowing where he was going with this conversation. "You had asked us if it's possible for you to be a hero. Do you remember what I said." Silently Hitoshi nods, of course he remembers. That was one of the happiest times in his life. "I told you that you'll have to work harder than others. Hitoshi you're only a first year. You haven't even been at the school for half a year, no one expects you to be perfect when handling villians. You shouldn't even know what it feels like to be in the presence of a villian yet, and for that I apologise. I should have been more careful about keeping you all safe."

Hitoshi continues to keep quiet as Aizawa speaks. "It's normal to feel scared when you encounter a villian. Freezing is a normal reaction, Hitoshi you're only human. Becoming a Hero doesn't mean all your fears instantly fade away. Even if you did freeze in fear you still got Shigiraki under your quirk didn't you? You still saved not just yourself and Bakugo but also a whole lot of innocent people. You might have frozen in fear at the sight of muscular, but you still saved Kota didn't you? Even if you had to rely on your classmates during the first test in the forest, you still made it to the end. You didn't give up and that's all that matters. No one complained because they don't see you as a burden, because you're not a burden. You are not a burden or a nuisance and you are definitely not useless."

Blood trickles down his lip as he bites hard on it. He wants to disagree, he wants to so desperately disagree because he knows that's wrong. He knows he's not enough, that he'll never be enough. . . But Aizawa thinks he's enough. He doesn't know why he thinks that but in all honesty it's nice. It's nice to be finally believed in for once, its nice to have an authority figure tell him that he's worth it, that he's not a burden or useless or a nuisance. Words he's been told his whole time, words that he refused to believe in, words that he's finally succumbed too, it's so nice to be told they're not true.

Tears trickle down his face. Tears of frustration, tears of sadness, tears of pity, and surprisingly even some tears of happiness. He smiles, for the first time since Bakugo has been taken he smiles. It's a smile filled with flaws and guilt but even so its genuine. He smiles and looks Aizawa, no Shota, in the eye. Except that's not right either.

"Thank you." He says, completely meaning his words despite not believing in Aizawa's. "Thank you... dad."

His smiles, flawed yet genuine as he looks his father in his eye. That's right, he's not just his teacher, he's not just Shota, he's his dad. Aizawa Shota is his dad and he is so glad for it.

Feeling dizzy, Katsuki opens his eyes. At first he's confused, he blinks as he looks infront of him. This isn't his bedroom or the stupid cabin in the forest. He blinks again until he sees a familiar figure sitting on a counter and realisation seems to hit him like a brick. Almost instantly he attempts to jump up and prepare to fight but is unable to do so as he finally realises he's been chained to a chair.

He looks down at his hands with the intention of blowing the chains away just to see that they've been shoved in some metal container. Just his luck, he's been kidnapped by villians, he has no idea where he is and now he can't use his quirk. If he were to even attempt it he would just damage his hands, then he would really be fucked. He huffs as he attempts to shake the chains off, it doesn't work. Of course it doesn't work, he hadn't expected it too but he can't sit still, not in this situation. So naturally Katsuki does what he's best at, he makes a ruckus.

He screams and shouts, and fights back against invisible non existent forces. He howls all sorts of profanities without a care about who's listening. Some would say he's throwing a tantrum, which in all honesty he is, but if anyone were to say that to his face he guarantees that he'll make sure they'll no longer have a face.

"Quit having a tantrum." He hears as he feels a hand wrap around his mouth to silence him. It startles him, and he hates himself for physically showing that it startles him. At first he feels confused and then he feels rage and he would have kept his word and blown the freaks face off it wasn't for the fact that he's chained to a fucking chair!

Katsuki growls despite his mouth still covered, he would lick or just bite the hand straight off but he has no idea were thats been and to preserve his own sanity he does not want to know that answer. He finally takes a moment to look up at the owner of the hand, ready to kill them with his glares. Unfortunately for him they do not drop dead but they do look a bit panicked which is a win for Katsuki.

"You're really loud. If you don't shut the hell up you'll wake Shiggy." The person says once again enticing another growl from Katsuki. Why the hell is his face stapled together, Katsuki thinks. He looks like one of his failed projects in art class. He remembers having given up on making something good and just stapled everything together. He called it 'modern art' because it looked fucking horrible but if he categorised it like that no one would question it.

"If I remove my hand will you shut the hell up?" Katsuki glares at the blue eyed freak and oh how he wishes looks could kill so he wouldn't feel so useless right now. "Is that a yes or a no?" Neither idiot because I can't fucking speak is what Katsuki would say but you know... he can't fucking speak.

Katsuki growls once again and he doesn't know in what universe that translate as a yes but luckily for him the freak removes his hand anyway. And okay he has to admit his earlier tantrum was stupid now that he thinks about it, but the author found it funny and found no motivation to change it, so in all honesty it wasn't his fault. (Now reading this back after a month the author just feels stupid) And it's not his fault that he continues to send death stares at the freak who stands infront of him, who wouldn't do that in this situation. He ain't no pussy, he's not going to cower in fear. And it's not his fault he's being really dramatic right now because once again the author wanted to create a serious tone yet instead this monstrosity was created. (And once again the author is questioning their life decisions)

On a more serious note, Katsuki never agreed to staying silent but he decides to anyway. And that is in no way because he was told too! He's being quiet because he now realises that it's probably the best thing to do. He looks around taking in his surroundings, the first thing he should have done but oh well. Better late than never.

He tries his best to carefully observe his surroundings, taking note of anything which could be of use to him. The only real thing that stands out however is a game console, other than that this place is just any typical bar. Feeling kind of defeated he looks back over to the blue eyed freak who seems to be microwaving a meal for himself.

Once done he walks up to him with a plate of food in his hands and Katsuki can't help but be wary. He had expected the freak to just flaunt the food infront of him just to set him off, he hadn't expected the villian to get down on his knees and hold up the plate to him, a smile on his face.

"Eat." He says, holding a spoon up to Katsuki's mouth. Katsuki feel very confused and conflicted right now.

"Like hell I am." He growls. "You poisoned it didn't you?" The villian shakes his head in disagreement only making Katsuki more suspicious. "Why else would you give me food, piss off I don't want it."

The villian sighs setting the plate on the floor as he looks eye level with Katsuki. "Just eat would you, I don't get payed enough to deal with your shit."

"You get payed?"

He chuckles. "No I don't. So stop being bitchy and causing me so much trouble. Hurry up and eat before Shigiraki wakes up."

Shigiraki. He keeps on going on and on about Shigiraki. "Shut about that dry lipped mother fucker already, I in no way trust you or the food you are trying to give me."

The villian sighs, rubbing the bridge of his nose. Katsuki can't help but think he would look good with a nose peircings, matches the whole staple thing going on with him. "The food is not poisoned." He whisper shouts. "If you don't eat now there's no guarantee that Shigiraki will let you eat later. I don't know what Shigiraki wants from you but if I don't keep you safe and alive I have a feeling your fucking boyfriend is going to give me something worse than death."

"Boyfriend?" Katsuki scowls. The villians know about Deku.
Shit. Shit. Shit. Shit. They know about Deku and him. Is that why he's here? They must be trying to get to Deku.

Katsuki lets out a shaky breath, trying his best to hold back his confusion and frustration much to no avail. "How dare you." He seethes, anger welling up inside of him. "How dare you try and use him against me." The villian looks rather taken aback but stays in his place.

"Are you trying to get to him through me?" Katsuki snarls, anger practically begging to be let out. "Is that why you kidnapped me? You're trying to find Karma?"

"What no." The villian says, uncertainty written across his face as he finally decides to take a step back. "Atleast I don't think that's Shiggy's goal."

"Fuck you." He growls. "I don't know where he is. Even if I did I wouldn't tell you. Fuck you bastard! FUCK YO-"

"-Hey I told you to be quiet." The villian says rather panicked. Now once again Katsuki seems to find his mouth covered. "I'm on your side." He spits. "I'm not trying to use anyone for anything, I was sent by Deku."

Deku? With a bite Katsuki's mouth hangs hand free and he's free to once again scream as much as he wants. Except he doesn't. Instead he looks the villian up and down racking his brain for any time Deku could have possibly mentioned someone like him.

"Deku? You know Deku?" The fucker nods, fear still all over his face. "H-how..."

"How?"

"No one should..." No one should know that he calls himself Deku, not unless they've met him personally. But he doesn't know who this is, he doesn't know if he can trust him. He doesn't know what he should do. Isn't that a first, Bakugo Katsuki being stuck, not knowing what he should do next. He sighs, lowering his head. "How do you know Deku?"

"He sent me to join the league to prevent something like this from happening. He sent me to protect you."

"Protect me?" That sounds like something Deku would do but still. "How am I meant to trust you?"

"Don't trust me then if that's easier. All you need to know is I was sent by that boyfriend of yours, he practically begged me to do it."

"If you're doing this for Deku then you've told him that I'm here haven't you?"

"Uhh..." The villian pauses. "Well no."

Katsuki snarls feeling all types of different emotions fighting to take over. "Do you think I'm an idiot. You were sent here to prevent something like this happening yet I've been kidnapped and you haven't told Deku."

Avoiding his gaze the fucker rubs the back of his neck uncomfortably. "It's not like I didn't want to. Eraserhead told me not to. Oh right, I can show you our messages, then you should believe me."

Not long after taking out his phone, the villian has searched through his contacts before finally settling down on one. "Here." He says holding up his phone for Katsuki to see. Sure enough the name at the top of the screen is none other than Eraserhead. The villian scrolls through their texts and no doubt the person at the other end of it is actually Eraserhead, his texting is shitty as always.

"Is this really your phone?"

"Wow you're really mistrusting aren't you." Katsuki scoffs as he crosses his legs. With a sigh the villian puts down his phone. "Whether this is my phone or not this is what the hero's will track to get to you. So you understand now right? I'm not here to hurt you, just to help."

Katsuki huffs, setting his suspicions aside. "Fine then, let's say I believe you. What's your name and how do you even know Deku?"

"I'm Dabi and I can tell you how we met after you eat." He eats a spoonful of the now probably cold food. "See not poisoned so will you eat now?"

"If you go get me a different spoon maybe."

Dabi barks out a laugh as he gets up to go switch the spoon. "I was going to do that whether you told me to or not."

Katsuki sighs relaxing in his chair, or as much as one can relax while being chained up. He looks up to the ceiling of this weird bar, villian base, whatever it is. He sighs once again hoping that the teachers will get him out soon. He would rather die than to admit this to anyone but he's afraid. Afraid of his own situation afraid of the situation of his classmates, he's afraid for his parents and how they must be feeling and he's afraid that Deku is still out there somewhere hating his guts. Katsuki sighs again trying to hold back tears.

He wants to go home.

Chapter 46

Izuku flawlessly creeps his way to the living room, making sure to not wake Mic up in the process. He makes his way to the TV trying to switch it on manually from there but when finally finding the button realises that Mic had unplugged the TV and taken the cord with him. Izuku groans as he goes to collapse on the sofa. There is definitely something going on that Mic doesn't want him to know, it must be important if he went through all the trouble to make sure Izuku has no access to the outside world whatsoever. But no matter how important it might be, Izuku couldn't help but let his curiosity get the best of him.

He sighs, with newfound conviction he gets up and starts his journey looking for the TV cable, his phone or even just anything that could give him access to the news or Internet. It takes about an hour of searching for Izuku to even consider that Hizashi had probably hid everything in his room. Izuku sags onto the floor feeling hopeless. It was hard enough to sneak out of the room without Hizashi noticing, he's a pretty light sleeper and even though he can't always hear that well, he is still a pretty sensitive guy. Its almost scary.

It's at times like these that Izuku is thankful for his very convenient and powerful quirk. It is also times like these which Izuku regrets not having used his quirk sooner because now Hizashi is asleep and he can't look into his memory unless he is conscious. Oh well, he wants social media back in his life even more than he wants to know the true reason he was made to stay here, so he doesn't consider this that big of a loss.

Springing onto his feet he starts his very intricate and very well thought out plan to recover his phone and the TV cable. By intricate he means he's going to go in there with an invisibility quirk and by well thought out he means he's going to hope for the best and take things as they come. Somehow his plan works though, he finds all his confiscated belongings tucked safely into a compartment placed high up on the wall.

Only taking his phone and the TV cable, because he is an idiot and didn't think to take the rest of the stuff, he sneaks his way back once again to the living room. He makes a mental note to somehow get himself a teleportation quirk because he is only just now realising how much stress he would have saved himself from if he had one.

Turning on his phone he finds that it's dead and with a huff he tosses it aside. He's not willing to go back into the room to look for a charger so instead he plugs back in the TV. It isn't until he has finished plugging back the TV that he realises it would have been faster to just go and get a charger, but oh well it's too late now.

With the remote in hand, Izuku can finally switch on the TV and figure out what the fuck is going on. He makes sure the volume is as low as possible just incase it wakes Hizashi, and the first channel he decides to turn to is the news. For a while there is nothing of interest being said and Izuku starts to consider whether he was just being paranoid and that Hizashi really had nothing to hide.
Not even a few seconds later, those thoughts are being shoved right out of his head and replaced with a storm of emotions taking over all rationality.

Anger, panic, betrayal, he doesn't know which one he's feeling right now, maybe all of those maybe none of those. All he knows is that he has to leave, he has to save him he has to...

He has to calm down, he has to breathe. He can't breathe. He clenches his chest, dropping to the ground, mouth open wide sucking in gallons of air yet his lungs stay constricted, he can't breathe. Kacchan... Kacchan's been kidnapped, he's stuck with the villians and Aizawa had Mic hide this from him.

Both tears and sweat seem to pour down his face, his whole body aches, veins threatening to pop out from the sheer anger he felt. Or is it panic? Betrayal? Or maybe it's the lack of air. Air he needs air, he needs...

He needs Kacchan. He has to save Kacchan! Shigiraki that damn bastard! He'll kill him! He'll skin him alive! How dare he! HOW DARE HE!

He crys on the spot for a while, taking deep breathes yet his lungs still refuse to work but he can't stay here. He has to move and if he has to do it while suffocating inside he will. He gets up phone in hand, screen just about cracked from the force of his grip. He wills his feet forward, he commands his body to cooperate because if it doesn't, if he does nothing, he might just lose his lifeline, he might just lose any bit of sanity he has left, he might just lose the one thing he could truly call his own.

He might just lose his will to live. Or maybe.. the will to refrain from seeing the world burn.

Unsuprisingly it gets very boring very quickly when you're in a hospital. The fact that Shota had discovered the secondary phone Hitoshi had been using during the summer camp wasn't very helpful either. He thought Shota would atleast have shown a little mercy considering he was injured, but nooo his phone was confiscated.

Quite a few of his classmates have been visiting though, thankfully. He's just happy that everyone seems to be recovering nicely. Speaking of his classmates he hears a knock on the door and sees most of 1A flood into his hospital room.

He smiles, opening his mouth to greet them but before he can even register what is happening Denki has flung his arms around him in a tight hug. He hit a sore spot and aggravated his wounds a little but in all honesty it's really nice. He hugs back with his one free arm, the one not absolutely covered in bandages, as he ignores the cooes of his classmates.

"I'm really glad you're ok." Denki whispers, the pain and worry and anxiety so obviously present in his voice. "I was worried when I heard that you were the one who got the most injured."

Hitoshi smiles as the blond pulls away, wishing to savour the embrace for just a little longer. "I'm fine." Hitoshi replies, a strained smile on his lips. "Thank you for worrying."

"Dude of course we would worry." Kirishima walks up to him patting him on the back. "We're all just glad you're ok."

Everyone nods along in agreement and Hitoshi can't help but feel a little but guilty, he feels like its his fault in a way that everyone is in so much distress. He knows its not true but its difficult to change how you feel about yourself so easily. Aizawa would probably be a little upset at that.

Hitoshi plasters back on a smile shoving those thought out of his head for now. "Are you all doing alright?" He receives a series of responses all fairly positive however a sad undertone still hangs in the air. Even if they were all uninjured did it really matter if Bakugo's whereabouts and wellbeing was still unknown?

Hitoshi looks down, fiddling with the bandages along his arm. He thought he would be able to do this but he can't. He just can't face his classmates without feeling like everything's his fault. Bakugo was right infront of him but still...

"Do you still feel guilty?" Hitoshi looks up to see Kirishima hovering over his bed. He stays silent, he doesn't want to admit it. "We don't blame you, you know. Things just ended up this way, its frustrating but we can't change the past."
Hitoshi looks away not knowing what to say.

"You shouldn't blame yourself,"says Iida, "the teachers will get him back no matter what."

"Who knows how long that's gonna take." Hitoshi sighs, a slight scowl on his face. "It's already been days and we still know nothing."

"Then let's go save him ourselves." Todoroki announces so nonchalantly that Hitoshi doesn't know whether he's being serious or trying to lighten the mood.

Looking offended, as if those words had slapped him right in the face, Iida marches up to him. "That has to be a joke right?"

"Why would that be a joke."

"What?" Sero perks up. "Todoroki we can't do that, we don't even know where he is."

"Thats not true." Hitoshi looks back at Kirishima, no longer understanding what's going on anymore.

"You know where he is?"

"No but we have a way to find him."

"Are you actually serious about this. Shouldn't we just let the teachers handle it? We aren't even actual heroes won't we get in trouble." Ochako says, angering Todoroki.

"So you'd much rather stay out of trouble than go save your friend!"

"No!" She squeaks. "That's not what I meant. I-"

Hitoshi sighs once again, channeling out his classmates. Head hung low he tries to calm his racing heart but that proves futile... but if he has another chance, if this time he can save him..

"We'll definitely save him!" Kirishima squeezes his shoulders, absolute determination on his face. "Yaoyorozu put a tracking device on one of the villians, she can lead us to where Bakugo is for sure!"

"Are you all out of your mind!"

"Iida calm down." Mina says trying to stop him from going ballistic.

"I won't calm down! This is insane! I thought atleast you would know better Todoroki, do you really want a repeat of Stain!"

Todoroki glares at him, clearly angry. This was the most emotion Hitoshi has ever seen from him. "Unlike a certain someone I'm not out looking for murder."

"You-"

"Do you not want to save Bakugo, is that it!"

"Of course I want to!" Iida shouts. "But we are nothing more than students, we'll only be a hindrance leave the saving to the professionals!"

Todoroki turns to Hitoshi, a look of desperation on his face. "You want to save him don't you Shinso. You can save him this time, he's still within your reach, its not too late."

"...Shinso."

Hitoshi doesn't even realise he's been crying till Ochako and Denki come running by his side.

"Hitoshi are you ok? Are you in pain?" Hitoshi shakes his head as he clutches at his chest trying to forcefully stop the tears.

"I'm fine." He says. "I-i'm okay.. it's just... Can we really save him, is it really not too late."

"Will you all stop and think for a second." Tsu interrupts. "If you just go and save him like that and break the rules, how does that make you any different from villians."

Todoroki's face instantly darkens and it doesn't take a genius to see that he's pissed.

"What about Karma, what makes him a villian." He seethes, his glare more deadly than a thousand knives.

Tsu seems to fumble over her words, the question clearly throwing her off. "...H- he kills people."

"If I'm no better than a villian for saving a single friend then maybe the world is the problem and not Karma."

"Todoroki you-"

"I'd rather be a villian and save the people around me than to stay chained up by theses stupid rules and only save people when its convenient!"

"What if this meant you could no longer be a hero!" Iida yells. "What if you get expelled!"

"Then so be it! Good fucking riddance! I don't want to be a hero if it means I can't even save the people I want to." Todoroki's voice reverberates around the room making everyone fall silent. "Twice!" He screams. "Its been twice now that I've been told saving someone is against the rules! Since you all seem to care more about these rules than a person's life then stay here! I'm going to save Bakugo and I don't give a fuck about what any of you have to say!"

"Shinso." He huffs. "Are you coming or not!"

Hitoshi pauses, suprised to see so much emotion from Todoroki. He's hesitating. Once again he's hesitating and he fucking hates it! He has to stop this, he can't afford to hesitate anymore.
He bites his lip and calms his nerves. This time he'll definitely reach him, he'll definitely save Bakugo no matter what. He has to.

Hitoshi nods, gaze firm and full of determination.

"I'm going."

Hizashi had been woken up by the sound of the front door slamming. The first thing he sees when he gets up is the door to the compartment where he left all the remotes and devices wide open and he instantly knows whats happened. His face twists with dread as he runs into the living room, TV on and stationed to the news channel. Everything starts to click.

He can't help but get worried, holding his hands up to his mouth he tries and fails to stay calm now fully understanding just how bad the situation is. He can't stop himself from trembling, he can't stop the thoughts and emotions from circling, he can't help but look out to the front door, wide open, exposing the cold winds of the night to his bare skin. He can't help but stare and tremble because he knows at this point there is nothing he can do. A raging fire has been ignited, and it will continue to burn until it has swallowed up all the idiots who dared to go against it.

Hizashi can already tell, it'll be impossible to stop Izuku now. Things are going to turn to chaos and things might really be unable to go back to the way they were before.

It's his fault. He had one job and he failed. Now not just him but everyone has no choice but to pay the price.

He prays no one gets hurt.

Chapter Notes

> Hi everyone. I'm so sorry for the long wait I have no excuse. I'm back now though, and will finish the story...hopefully. I have no plans to cancel this even if it ends up taking me years to write I'll try my best to finish it.
> Sorry if my writing from now on isn't as good as it used to be, its been a while since I've written anything so its probably going to take time for me to get used to it again.
> Thank you all so much for your support and the fact that you're still reading after all this time. I honestly didn't think that anyone would read the last chapter after I had been gone for so long so thank you all, I really mean it.
> Thank you all. 💙💜

"Sorry sho..." Shota is met with a long pause from the other side of the phone, and it doesn't take a genius to figure out why that is.

"He found out didn't he?"

"Mmh." Hizashi affirms causing a long and strenuous sigh to escape Shota's lips. "I'm sorry. I was asleep, a-and I hadn't noticed him sneak out. I'm sorry-"

"It's alright Zashi." Shota reassures him.9 From the sound of his voice it certainly sounds like Hizashi is feeling just as stressed as he is. "Everything will be okay. We've got everything planned out, we'll get Bakugo back. If Deku doesn't end up saving him first that is."

"Are you sure?"

"Yes Zashi, I'm sure. Everything will turn out ok. We'll go back to the way things used to be."

"...Izuku is probably really upset."

Rubbing his temple, Shota collapses into a seat. "Deku... Izuku is just worried about Bakugo, just like we all are. He won't do anything bad, nothing that could put Bakugo in trouble anyway."

"What if he does something stupid. What if it affects the plan?"

"Then we'll cover for him and make a new plan. I told you, everything will be ok. I'll absolutely make sure of it."

Zashi falls silent again, seeming to think those words over before deciding to accept it. "How about Hitoshi?" He asks, changing the subject. "How's he doing?"

Shota smiles. "He's doing alright, he's in much better condition now. He'll probably be able to be discharged soon. You should come visit, I'm sure he'd love to see you."

"Of course." For the first time since the start of their conversation, Zashi's voice seems to brighten. "There's no way I wouldn't go visit our wonderful son. He's been through so much, tell him I'm proud of him for staying strong."

"Will do." Shota chuckles into the phone. "But get this," a smirk forms on Shota's face, "he called me dad."

An overly dramatic gasp can be heard from the other end of the phone, and Shota can't help but laugh. "That's impossible." Zashi remarks, his tone playful. "I thought I was the favourite parent. How could I be betrayed like this."

Shota laughs, not just any laugh, but a proper laugh. He laughs for the first time since the incident that occurred and he can hear Zashi laughing from his end too. He brushes his hair out of his eyes, looking up to the ceiling, all joy and laughter slowly fading, soon leaving only sadness and a solemn smile on his lips.

"I really miss you Zashi." He says, trying and failing to keep his emotions in check.

"I miss you too Sho."

"...Do you really think..?"

"Of course." Hizashi's tone changes to that of a reassuring one. "You said it yourself didn't you. Everything will be ok. Everything will go back to the way it used to be. I believe in you."

Shota sits up, taking his gaze off the ceiling to instead inspect the room in which he's in. He watches as patients and staff alike go about their lives and he can't help but question himself and all his actions till now. "Thank you, Zashi."

"No problem, Sho."

Even if he has to question himself, even if he doesn't believe his own words, no matter what he won't stop trying. Not until those words become a reality, not until he's given himself a reason to believe in those words.

Katsuki will be saved. Izuku will be rescued. Hitoshi will heal. And then they'll all return to the way things used to be. They'll all return to being the flawed yet happy family they once were.

Shota swears it.

"Where's that damn oversized bird!"
Alarms ring and panic ensues as Izuku's barges through the Hero Commission's door, hell bent on finding Hawks.

Izuku marches through the building, being bombarded by all sorts of attacks, from the futile efforts of the employees to get him out. He continues striding forward, unrelenting, unwilling to let these insects distract him from his goal. He's seething right now, his anger is too big to be contained, so ultimately he lets it out, leaving destruction with each step.

He doesn't hurt anybody though, no matter how much they attack him he simply moves forward. His lungs scream and his muscles ache but he sucks it up. He doesn't stop moving, he doesn't stop pushing forward, not until he averts every attack and makes it to the top floor, not until he's face to face with Hawks.

Like petals falling from a tree, Red feathers float through the air and instantly all attacks are stopped. Or maybe referring to the feathers as sparks discarded by a raging fire would be a more fitting description? After all those feathers are merely an insignificant spark, compared to the natural disaster that they now point at.

A sigh leaves the hero's lips, almost resembling the sizzling of a flame being doused in water. He looks around, taking in the disorder Izuku has left."That's quite the mess you've made there kid." He remarks, crossing his arms. "Do you know how much trouble you've just put yourself in. You're meant to be laying low, how could you-"

"-Where is he." Izuku snaps instantly cutting the hero off.

"What?"

"Kacchan!" He grits his teeth, holding back his instincts to use his fists instead of words. "You know where the LOV has taken him don't you. There's no way you weren't told."

Hawks scoffs, his feathers slowly returning to the wings upon his back. "As if thats anyway to ask." His wings settle from their initial outstretched position to instead hug around the hero's body. Hawks doesn't see him as a threat, he's underestimating him. "Even if I did know why should I tell you."

Izuku's muscles twitch, adrenaline levels so extremely high he feels as if his heart could burst at this very moment. "You don't need to tell me." Despite being much shorter than the hero Izuku still manages to look down on him, his gaze filled with scorn and dislike. "Just by being here infront of you, I already know everything I need to."

"Then why the hell-"

Izuku cuts of the pathetic barking, he's got no time to waste on this stupid bird. "I don't know what your relationship with Dabi is," he scowls, creeping closer to the hero. His every step fills the hero with anxiety, the power balance gradually shifting completely in Izuku's favour. "but just know, if he doesn't have a good excuse for why he's let all of this happen, you'll be finding his limp body on your doorstep very soon."

"Y-you..." Hawks just stands their bewildered, all words having left him. Even if he did find the right words to say, it was too late. Izuku leaves having gotten all the information he needed. He disappeares just as quickly as he arrived, that is only natural for a disaster, appearing out of nowhere and leaving destruction in its wake, leaving the world in disarray before moving onto its next destination. That raging fire pushes forward, not afraid to engulf all that stands in its way. That fire will continue to spread, and it won't stop, not until it arrives at Kamino Ward, not until the LOV's base is nothing but a burial ground for those who have offended him. Not until he sees all his enemies burn.

The lights of the bar seem to glare at him, giving Katsuki a headache. However he'd much rather have the lights glaring at him than have the gazes of all these villians that sit around him. He sighs, closing his eyes, trying his best to block out both the lights and the stares. Unfortunately life is not that easy, Shigiraki, sitting on one of the bar stools opens his mouth to speak.

"Join us."

Katsuki slowly opens his eyes, taking his time to evaluate if he just heard that bullshit correctly. "Join you?" He repeats, still not fully believing his ears.

"Yeah." The dry lipped motherfucker removes the creepy hand from his face revealing an unsettling smile. "Join the League of Villians. Abandon hero society."

Katsuki has never heard such absurd words in his life. When he had found out he was the villians target back during the summer camp this was not the reason he had expected.

"Why the hell would I do that?" He exclaims, disgust clear in his voice. He looks over to Staple guy, as if to confirm he's not crazy and is hearing correctly but the bastard just turns away.

"You've thought about it haven't you." Hand man continues to spout his bullshit. "You've thought about the flaws of hero society, the lies we are all being fed. You know it don't you? There's no way you don't. I can tell you know that society is dancing in the palm of the commissions hand. You know the corruption that this country faces."

Katsuki scrunches up his face in distaste. He leans back in his chair, making himself comfortable because he doesn't know how he'll survive this stupid conversation otherwise. "So what if I do." He says, his tone bland and disinterested. "How the hell does that correlate with me becoming a villian."

"So you'd rather stay on the side of corruption, is that it?"

"Fucking idiot, I'm not on their 'side' or whatever you call it. I'm not some little bitch bowing at the commissions feet. Just because I decided to become a hero doesn't mean I'll follow what they say."

Shigiraki scoffs. "What a bold statement. But do you think you have any choice?"

"Do you know the difference between Heroes and villians?"

"Heroes harbour corruption while hiding under a guise of goodwill. Villians on the other hand have the freedom to express themselves without the constant acting. We're all human aren't we? We all think the same things, want the same things, unlike heroes we just don't hide it. We're not two-faced like that."

Katsuki barks out a laugh. "That's a nice way to think about it, but no. Whether under a guise or not Heroes save people. And Villians destroy lives for no reason other than they want to. I'd rather hide under a guise my whole life if that meant I could save people."

Shigiraki leans back, folding his arms. "Sure, you can think about it that way as well, but what's stopping you from saving people as a villian? Do you really think that's what being a hero and villian is all about? No. Heroes are the ones who society holds up as their pillars. Villians are the ones that society have abandoned. Intention and actions don't matter, they have never mattered in our world. Villians are simply the people that the world doesn't want. Wouldn't you just call that discrimination?"

"You have a surprisingly better way with words than I initially thought you would."

"Thank you." The villian grins.

"That doesn't mean I'm going to join you. If I had to, I'd rather oppose the Hero Commission while being a hero, not a villian."

"You're words make no sense. They contradict each other. As soon as you get your licence, as soon as you graduate from UA, you are a dog of the Commission. The moment you do something out of line, the moment you do something they don't like, they'll get rid of you. It's impossible for you to be both a hero and against the Commission. You've got experience with that after all." His sickening grin somehow manages to grow even more twisted than before. "That's what they're doing to Karma isn't it."

The chains rattle before Katsuki remembers that he can't move. He clenches his teeth, his initial uninterested demeanour, turning angry. "You keep him out of your fucking mouth!" He growls, anger only growing as the Villian seems to enjoy the scene infront of him.

"Am I wrong though? The commission wants to get rid of him because he's a threat to them. He's nerfed one of their main sources of money hasn't he. Why get so angry over the truth."

"Shut the hell up! I don't want to hear any more of your stupid words! I have no intention of becoming a villian so let me go!"

"You're quite persistent aren't you kid." A new voice says. Katsuki turns to find the origin of the voice and sees Muscular, a villian he's seen many times on TV, get up from where he sat. He walks towards him, his every step impatient, yet intimidatingly heavy. "Wouldn't it be more effective to just beat some sense into him Shigiraki."

He towers over the boy, his grin striking fear into Katsuki. The fact that he's littered head to toe in cuts and scars only makes him more intimidating, not to mention the way his fake eye glows red with madness.

"That purple haired kid really did a number on me. I'm itching to hit something so I'd happily voluntee-"

Green. That's the first thing Katsuki sees. Then red, the colour of blood. So much blood.

It flows from the villians eye, dripping down his arm as he clutches his face in pain. He sees green, a colour he has come to symbolise with hope. He watches a dagger rise up into the air, those delicate hands he's so familiar with wrapping around the handle. Then once again he sees red. Even more red than before. Nothing but red. A fountain of red gushes from the villians neck, one moment he's struggling in vain, the next he's sprawled across the floor, his face peaceful, his body perfectly still, his soul finally at rest.

Katsuki sees green, but not just him, everyone in the room does. They all attack in the midst of the room of red, aiming for that one thing that shouldn't be here, aiming for green.

Green. Katsuki's colour of hope, except.... its different. This person. This person who he thought he knew so well, who he thought he knew every side to, this person is covered in red from head to toe, drenched in the blood of his enemies. His eyes once green and beautiful, glint with malice and venom and he can no longer see hope. Katsuki sees red, he sees nothing but red in the midst of this chaos, he sees nothing but red, a colour he has come to symbolise with pain and destruction. He longs for that colour of hope. He knows that that hope is right infront of him... but still. When did his hope decide to resort to death. When did that warm flame that guides his path become a raging fire, an uncontrollable disaster that can no longer be compared to what it once was.

When did Izuku become so... scary.

Cladding and debris rain down from the ceiling, a storm known as Karma appearing at the centre of it all. With all his might the dagger meets the villians eye, the real one, the one that wasn't fake. The blade slips right through with just as much ease as the twisted smile that slips onto the vigilante's face. Deprived of all rationality Izuku removes the dagger from the socket. His anger not even close to being soothed, once again he raises the dagger into the air, the blade glinting from the reflection of the dim lighting of the room. With more power behind his attack he clutches it with even more force, aiming for the kill. He peirces the villians neck, enjoying the feeling of the cold metal entering his flesh almost like butter.

He bathes in the image of the fountain of blood, feeling the heat of the substance as it rains upon his body. He enjoys the feeling of the villian's struggling, the feeling of his body growing cold, the stench of blood in the air, the sound of screams. He licks his lips, savouring the taste of iron as his opponents body finally goes still, relieved of all it's sins, his face peaceful, his soul finally at rest. If only he had the ability to turn the peace of the dead into destruction as well.

There's no point on dwelling on that though, not when there's a hand rushing towards his face.

He dodges effortlessly, swinging his dagger at Shigiraki, ignoring the pests that flock towards him. He sees red, nothing but anger and loathing. He swings and swings, frustration building at every attack that failed to get anywhere near that dry lipped motherfucker.

Shigiraki continues to dodge, only getting further and further from Izuku's reach as the villians all interfere, attacking him at once. His force field activates more than once and it hurts his pride to admit that if he didn't have it he would probably be dead by now. He continues aiming for Shigiraki but only seems to get further, he knows he's getting hit by the others, getting scratched, bruised, stabbed but he can't feel it. He can't feel anything, only anger.

He doesn't realise when he gets hit in the back of his head, not until his body refuses to do as he says, move the way he wants it to. He doges attacks just to get hit by new ones, he avoids a person, just to run into someone else. No matter what he does the attacks keep coming, his body is at its limit, it screams at him, begs him to stop but he won't. He can't.

In the corner of his eye he sees Dabi holding onto two children, standing away from the fight. Izuku sneers, wanting to give him a peice of his mind, wanting to question him but he can't, his attackers won't even give him a second to breathe. His attacks only seem to get worse, the pounding in his head won't even let him hit his target. His enemies all escape his grasp with mere scratches as his injuries only seem to accumulate even more.

He still doesn't stop. He can't. He won't! He'll kill them all even if he has to sacrifice his body to do that. He stabs and stabs but none of his attacks connect, his speed has slowed and he can't even move his left arm anymore. But he continues. He fights, he'll continue to fight he won't stop, not until-

"Izuku!"

"..."

He stops.

His left arm laying limp beside him, he turns towards the voice, finally looking at the one he came here to save. Izuku stumbles, his heart contracting as he struggles to breathe. K-kacchan... Kacchan looked scared... but not of the situation.

He was scared... of him?

Izuku looks into the dagger but he can't even see his reflection, the blood stains are too heavy for him to even make out a single thing, but then again he didn't need to see his reflection to know what he looked like right now, he already knows. Monster. He looks like a monster.

"Watch out!"

A sharp pain shoots up Izuku's head as it collides with the wall. feeling like its about to split open from the sheer force, Izuku feels the dagger fall out of his hands as he flails, barricaded by the wall and Shigiraki's grip. Izuku activates his quirk, his nails growing, moving towards Shigiraki's neck in a desperate attempt to set himself free. Dust falls to the ground as a blood curdling scream leaves the boys mouth. He kicks the villian away with all his might, clutching his aching hands to his chest.

"What a huge mistake you've made." Shigiraki grins.

Izuku looks on in horror at his mess of fingers, all missing their tip. He hears cackling and looks up to meet the villians eye, that evil glint which he's come to hate. The villian laughs and laughs and doesn't stop, only until Izuku looks past him does he understand. He panics, wanting to lunge out to save Katsuki from the villian holding a blade above his head but his legs chose the worst time of all to finally give out. The blade cuts through the air and he screams, willing his legs to move but his body refuses to take anymore of this abuse. Before he can even call out Katsuki's name he's collapsed onto the floor. He feels one last spike of pain rush up his head. He doesn't even have the time to see if the blade connects before he loses all feeling in his body.

He falls to the ground losing consciousness. Everything turns black.

——

Eyes shooting open, once again Izuku is met with pitch darkness. His head throbs with overwhelming pain, every part of him feels as if its burning. In an effort to grab his head, he realises he can't move. Quirk cancelling chains clasp around his arms and neck, any movement he makes sending waves of pain through his body. With all his adrenaline depleted, even the tiniest breeze is enough to leave his body in agony.

"So you're awake."

An unrecognisable voice echoes throughout the room as Izuku suddenly stands alert. He tries to adjust his eyes to the darkness but the intense pain he feels stops him from doing so.

"Its better for you to keep still." The voice says, only making Izuku panic even more than he already was.

He hears footsteps gradually growing closer, each step slow and condescending. Irrational fear fills every fibre of Izuku's being. He's never been caught in a situation like this before. He's never been in a situation where he feels so inferior, like even just breathing a little too loudly could result in death.

Izuku struggles and squirms despite the pain. Kacchan. He's got to get to Kacchan. He's got to save him.

"I thought I told you to stay still." Without warning, all Izuku's movements stop. All the lights instantly turn on, blinding Izuku but he can't even close his eyes as some kind of invisible force holds him perfectly still.

Tears run down his face from the sudden change in brightness, he feels as if he's a puppet unable to even move without his masters command. He only panics more as he sits, momentarily blinded. His eyes do eventually recover however, although once they do his panic only gets worse. All sorts of alarm bells ring in the boy's head but he can't do a single thing, he can't move a single muscle.

The first thing he notices about the man is the way he stands. The way his posture demands respect, the way it seems to say, 'no one in this world is more powerful than I am'. The second thing Izuku notices is his lack of face. Tubes curl around his body, so obviously vital for his survival but even knowing that fact Izuku still can't help but feel scared. Just who was this man.

The man's lips turn upwards into a cruel smile as if feeding off Izuku's distress. He gets close, barely a hairs width away from the boy enchained in a chair. "So we finally meet." He says his hand brushing against Izuku's face as he holds his chin up. "That look in your eyes." He makes eye contact with him for a while, for way too long. "They shine with that brightness just like how mine used to. That look of power and authority. That look of unwavering determination. " His smile curls more and more, enough to make any person who saw it wish to run away. "You truly are my son." He mutters.

His nails dig deep. Blood drips down the young vigilantes face.

Chapter Notes

> Sorry for only uploading this now, I had wanted to upload this much earlier but fell into a slump while trying to write this chapter. It didn't really turn out how I wanted it to turn out, I feel like my writing is no longer as good as it used to be but I'll keep trying my best to upload chapters. The next chapter will probably take a quite while before it comes out, I really don't want to abandon this story so please just bare with me for now. Thank you all for reading and your support until now. 💜💙

His eyes burn and his head spins. He can barely register the pain as his supposed father digs his nails deep into his skin. The rest of his body is in agony, whatever force that is holding him perfectly still won't even allow him to blink. Tears fall from his eyes and blood falls from his cheek. His face is a mess of liquids and Izuku can't help but notice how this sight only seems to please the lunatic before him even more.

"How pathetic." The words tumble out of the man's mouth easily, his tone signalling disappointment yet his smile saying otherwise.

All of a sudden Izuku is released from whatever restraints holding him and only then does he realise how much pain his eyes were in as he blinks back the endless tears. He dares to glance up at the man now standing much further away yet not far enough. Blood blooms on the vigilante's lip as he bites back the urge to throw up.

"I thought there would be more to you." The man says, the disappointment completely clear now. "I'm ashamed to see that my son is so weak."

"Who the hell is your son!" Izuku barks, earning himself a new wave of pain as his head starts to throb. The villian infront of him gives him a look he assumes is meant to be a glare, it takes everything in Izuku to not flinch in fear.

"I didn't expect my son to be so rude either. Did Inko forget to teach you manners?"

Izuku sucks in a breath.
It's disgusting. This situation is fucking disgusting. That stupid name is fucking disgusting, a name he hadn't expected to hear, not from the mouth of this vile creature anyway.

His fingers twitch with an urge to punch the fucker in the face. "Who the hell is Inko?" He snarls, all fear momentarily forgotten as he stares the man down, his chains rattling in support. Silence stretches throughout the room, and then a laugh. The man laughs, wheezes even. The sound of his laughter fills the large empty space, the echoes constantly bouncing off the wall as if to anger Izuku.

The villian makes an act of brushing a tear away from his non existent eye as his laughter slows and he looks at the kid. "Don't tell me you've already forgotten about your own mother?" Pure amusement resonates in his voice.

"I have no mother." The villian cocks his head, that creepy smile still lingering on his lips. "And I have no father, so who the hell are you!"

"Your mother knows me as Hisashi but the world knows me as All for One." He grins.

Hisashi? All for One? "Is that name supposed to mean something to me, fucker?" Izuku grits his teeth, trying his best to channel his inner Kacchan. That's always the best thing to do in situations like these. He has to ignore this new information, whether this man is actually his father or not means nothing to him. He has no parents.

"Kids these days are so uneducated."

Izuku scoffs. "I haven't been to school since I was 6."

All for One or whatever his name is, crosses his arms and tilts his head as if in a thoughtful manner. "Makes sense, a murderer can't exactly expect to live a normal life."

"What do you want from me." Izuku snaps. "Why the hell did you drag me here!"

"Can't a parent reunite with their child?"

"Cut the bullshit. A parent wouldn't kidnap and tie their child up to a chair."

"Oh sweet Izuku, I didn't kidnap you. You walked in here on your own. Let's not forget you murdered one of my men, tying you up is simply a precaution."

Izuku scoffs. "Do any of the words coming out of your mouth sound genuine to you, or are your lack of ears perhaps the problem? You kidnapped someone close to me," he snarls, "that's good enough reason for me to kill you all."

"You sound more like my son now. I would be proud but that defiant look in your eye is starting to piss me off." Izuku scowls and the villian responds with a pitying look. "I suppose I should show you atleast some mercy." He looks down on the boy, his non existent gaze somehow still patronising. "I don't want you to get the wrong idea, it was Tomura who wished to kidnap the kid upstairs, not me. I simply used this opportunity to get to you. See a certain someone told me the two of you used to be particularly close, childhood friends was it? Oh come on don't look at me like that." He chuckles. "If you didn't want to anyone you love to get hurt, why love people in the first place."

"What kind of twisted logic is that?"

"Logic that gets rid of your weaknesses. Love is only a hindrance, all you need is to be feared and hated if you want to be truly powerful. If things had turned out differently when you were younger perhaps I would have raised you while teaching you this lessons."

"And what exactly could have turned out differently. You mean if she hadn't left me for you."

"Oh not at all." The villian laughs. "I apologise there seems to be a misunderstanding. I told her to do it."

Izuku freezes, thoughts running rampant, yet he can't help but ask, "Y-you told her to abandon me?"

"No I told her to kill you." Izuku's throat clogs up as he stares at the floor, eyes wide open in bewilderment.

"You told her to kill me? You told her to kill a 6 year old? Why? What did I even do!"

"Oh dear son," A shiver runs down Izuku's spine at those words, "it was nothing that you did."

"T-then why. W-why would you-"

"You were quirkless."

Quirkless. He exhales. Blood pools in his mouth as his tounge lays trapped between his teeth.

Quirkless. Of course it's because he was quirkless. Every bad thing back then had always been because he was quirkless. His head leans back resting upon the back of the chair as he lets out a laugh, more like a gurgle as his blood trickless down the corners of his mouth. He holds not a hint of humour yet the laughter still leaves his lips. He falls silent looking away from the villian. He can't take this anymore. He might really burst into tears if this keeps going.

"You've gone silent now? Where's all that resolve gone? Oh no, I'm sorry, was your quirklessness a sensitive topic?" The bastard mocks. "I didn't intend to hit a sore spot, I apologise."

"Tch."

He laughs, clapping his hands as if Izuku was some sort of court jester dancing around and acting a fool, his only purpose to entertain him. "I know the perfect way to make it up to you. Some reunions are in store after all."

It isn't until the villian is speaking into some weird microphone thing calling out - "my darling Inko, could you come down here please." - that Izuku finally understands what's going on. "Bring the doctor with you as well."

Realistically there's like 5 minutes of silence while they wait for her to come down, however it feels like a day. It feels like a day of nothing but worrying and anxiety, a full 24 hours of dread. He was going to see his mother again, the woman that abandoned him. The woman who he had trusted nore than anyone. The woman who betrayed that trust. He doesn't want to see her... he wasn't ready. He didn't... he couldn't...

Blood pumps round his body at speeds he doesn't think should be possible. She doesn't see him, he sees her first. Its weird. He's imagined this meeting so many times. He imagined himself running up to her, hugging her, saying he forgives her. Imagined her hugging him back, apologising over and over again for ever having abandoned him. He's imagined her coming to find him, coming to look for him to take him back home. He's imagined so much, so many useless scenarios, so many things that will never happen.

He was so foolish. He thought he would be filled with glee when he saw her, but no. This feeling in his chest, this feeling that seems to tighten and grow stronger, this feeling that seems to send all his sense into overdrive, this feeling, it's rage. He feels nothing but rage as he watches her waddle into the room, a stupid grin plastered onto her face as she beelines straight for All for One. "You called me darling?" She giggles in awe, genuine happiness on her face as if being called darling was a rare occurrence. Izuku scoffs.

It's not until then that she realises that someone else is even in the room. The crazy wench had completely ignored the teenager chained up in the room with such ease, it makes Izuku sick. She turns. Green eyes meet green. She grows pale and her once happy demeanor melts into one of panic and suprise. It's funny. So stupid it's funny. This whole situation is just so stupid he can't help but laugh.

The whole room fills with the sound of his laughter. A laugh filled with nothing but resentment and loathing echoes throughout the room, imploring every person to stay silent. Izuku's eyes water from the constant laughter and his chains rattle in disapprovement. The adults stare on at him, no words being muttered, no sounds other than the laugh of the boy who has finally snapped.

Silence gradually returns to the room but the smile that remains on the vigilante's face is worth more than a thousand words. His lips curl into that manic grin and that rush he usually feels when taking a life comes travelling down his veins. He had really thought he would cry in this moment, or jump in joy, go and hug her. He's suprised even himself, there's no traces of joy, no traces of relief or regret or sadness, nothing. Just the thoughts of him wanting to rip both of their tounges out. Skin them alive. Gouge out their eyes! Pull out their intestines and hang it around their throat's like a rope!

He thinks of all the ways he could kill them, all the ways to make it as painful as possible, to make them suffer just as much as he has. The usual remorse that tends to poke at the back of his mind is nowhere to be found, and its finally clear, he's finally realised, he's really lost it.

Inko looks over to All for One, words having yet to find her. She looks back to Izuku as the Villian finally speaks, breaking the silence.

"This person here, dear Izuku, is your mother." Although not as wide as before, a smile still remains the only feature on the villians face. "However I'm sure you already realised that."

Of course he's realised. How couldn't he recognise her. How couldn't he recognise the woman he's been pinning for his whole life. "I-is that r-really-" His mother starts but he cuts her off. Eyes manic and smile deranged he leans back in his chair.

"Who the hell is that." He chuckles. Reveling in the pain in her expression. "Mother? Where?" He makes a show of looking around before his gaze settles on Inko, his eyes burning into her soul. "All I see is a dog," he giggles, "This mutt infront of me could never be considered a mother."

He hears a stifled laugh come from the exit and only then realises there was another person in the room. A man with a ridiculous mustache, he seemed familiar but Izuku ignores him. He's irrelevant. He focuses back on Inko, the ridiculous way her mouth seems to open and close like a fish almost sending him into another laughing fit. She looks over to his captor once again only filling Izuku with more and more rage. All for One refuses to meet her gaze, a smile bordering on a laugh on his face as well.

"Why do you look so shocked?" Izuku pushes on, wanting to push all her buttons. "I'm sorry, I know that was rude of me." She glances at him, a silver of hope in her eyes. "That's so disrespectful to dog's, I'm sorry I shouldn't have said that." All hope from her eyes disappears and this time Izuku really does start laughing again. "S-sorry," wheeze, "I'm s-so, hahaaha," he huffs, "I'm so sorry," tears roll down his face, "i-it's just that even dogs wouldn't willing give up their children just because their owner told them too." The tears down his face are nothing compared to the flood coming out of his mother's eyes, he has to stop himself from laughing even harder. He beams from ear to ear, the sound of his mother's tears hitting the ground surprisingly comforting. "So then I guess you're much worse than a dog. A pig maybe? I don't see why you would stay with him if you aren't just greedy as fuck."

This time All for One does laugh, and the look of betrayal on Inko's face make them both laugh harder. "You called me darling?" Izuku mocks from early. "Is that a rare occurrence? This is the person you left me for?" Izuku chuckles but this time there really is no humour in it, he has to try all he can just to prevent more tears from dripping down his face. "Pathetic." He snarls. "You're Pathetic. All of you!"

She takes a step back as if still not fully believing what's going on. "W-what," looks like she finally regained her ability to speak, "what h-happened to you?"

What happened to him? He scoffs, he doesn't remember her ever being this stupid. "You happened." His eyes bore into her, all innocence having left them. "You abandoned me!" Although that wasn't his intention the words leave his mouth as a pained scream. "You left me to get sold off while you went and ran off with him of all people!" He tilts his head in the direction of All for One, that malicious glint not leaving his face. "This is America?" He sighs, exasperated, real tears starting to fall down his face now. "This is the place you lied to everyone for?"

"I-I was trying to protect you."

"Protect me?" He screams. "How the fuck did anything you do protect me?" His voice breaks from his non stop abuse causing Inko to flinch. "What you didn't kill me like he had originally told you to? Is that what you call protecting, selling me off to traffickers? Do you even consider what would have happened to me? I was quirkless. Did you ever consider what would have happened to a quirkless person? Worst case scenario I would have been sold as a sex slave! Is that what you call protecting? Well answer me, IS IT?!"

Her knees give out and she collapses onto the ground, her eyes glossed over and clearly not in a state for answering his questions. Izuku sneers, looking back over to the villian who has been watching the whole interaction with amusement. Realising that Izuku was done with his verbal attacks he comes closer.

"Don't be so mad at her." He drawls, clearly not meaning it. In the end she disobeyed me and I guess now that's working in my favour. " he looks back at her. "Although don't expect to escape unpunished." She just stares at the ground, completely unresponsive. All for one shakes his head, tutting as if dealing with a difficult child.

He sighs, crossing his arms. "Well then Izuku, since reunions are out the way," he walks up to him a thin line stretching across his lips at the boys glare holding nothing but insanity, "we can get back to the real reason your here. Join me Izuku."

He grits his blood stained teeth. "I refuse."

"You don't seem to understand, my dear son. This isn't a request, it's an order. If you wish to keep the child upstairs alive I suggest you do as I say without problem."

Chains rattle at the vigilante's futile attempts to reach the motherfucker and strangle him. "Touch a single fucking hair on Kacchan and I will end you!"

"How will you do that exactly while chained up like a dog? How ironic that you're the one calling others dogs."

"Fuck off! I'm not getting involved with you, I refuse. I'll save Kacchan and then I'll rip that fucking grin off your face!"

The villian sighs. "How troublesome. Have it your way," Izuku relaxes a little, "I'll just simply take your quirk." He tenses and all of a sudden he feels like a fool. This man, was his father, it's only natural that he can also take quirks. Izuku sucks in a breath trying to steady his shaking heart but the way the villians grin continues to twist further and further up his face doesn't help much.

"I don't need an unruly child like you anyway, taking your quirk is the much simpler option. I simply decided to give you a chance but it looks like you've made your choice." He takes a few steps back, holding his hand out to the man that still stands by the door. "Once I have taken your quirk I'll give you to the kind doctor over here. I'm sure you will make a powerful Nomu, you are my son after all." Izuku stiffens. "I'm sure your friend would make an amazing Nomu as well, however I'll leave that up to Tomura to decide."

Why. Why did things end up like this. Izuku remains still, the overwhelming amount of adrenaline in his system making him light headed. All of a sudden he's reminded of where he his, who's infront of him, the situation he's in and he can't help but feel completely hopeless. He doesn't remember how it happens, just the sudden rush of nausea and exhaustion that washes over him, and just like that his world turns black once again as his eyes glue shut.

In the end Ochako had said she wanted to come along as well. Denki had enthusiastically volunteered right after despite obviously being anxious, Hitoshi had convinced him to reconsider. He doesn't really care how much trouble he'll be in after this, no doubt Shota will be beyond pissed, but he'd like to keep Denki out of trouble atleast. He didn't want him to do something that he wasn't completely comfortable with, plus he had lied to Mic and Shota that he'd be staying at Denki's after being discharged from the hospital.

Mic had visited him during the day, in all honesty it was nice seeing him, it had been quite a while since he last saw him after all. Shota had visited him early in the morning but left quite quickly, according to Mic, he's busy sorting out the Bakugo mess. Today marks the third day since Bakugo had been kidnapped, and the day that he was going to rescue him. Of course the class had tried to discourage the plan to save Bakugo once more but in the end were forced to give up. Todoroki was definitely the most determined to shut them all up and he succeeded in the end, Hitoshi didn't know he had it in him.

He understands the class's feelings though. He knows this is reckless, he knows he won't be much help, he knows this was all because of his incompetence in the first place. He knows and understands their worries, he knows they feel just as bad for Bakugo, want him back just as badly but he also knows he has to do this. He knows Bakugo must be scared right now, he knows Izu must be upset, he knows that he'll never forgive himself if he lets Katsuki remain in the hands of the villians for even another night. That's why he'll save him.

He has to.

———

"Come on Bakugo, why don't you reconsider."

Katsuki grits his teeth. It's the same bullshit every single fucking time with this guy. "How many times do I have to tell you no." He growls. Shigiraki's smug expression doesn't leave his face.

Shigiraki gets up, reaching over for the TV. He switches it on and then spends a while flicking through the channels, looking for a specific one. As he does so he starts to speak once again. "What do you think will happen to you if you refuse my offer."

"Are you trying to threaten me right now?"

"No of course not," he chuckles, "It's more like a truth than a threat. If you refuse to join us Sensei has his own plans for you."

Katsuki squints his eyes, goosebumps springing out of his skin in the uncomfortable atmosphere. "And what exactly does your Sensei plan to do with me." He dares to ask.

With a final click of the remote, Shigiraki sets the remote down and walks back to his seat, grinning. A familiar voice comes from the device and all of a sudden the tiny pixels on the screen making up the figure of none other than Aizawa has his full attention. He's in a suit? Aizawa is in a suit, on TV, two things he most definitely hates. And to make matters worse, he's apologising...

"You know those monsters that I released at Hosu." Katsuki startles a little, forgetting he was in the middle of a conversation with Shigiraki. Still he ignores him as he continues to watch Aizawa face insult after insult by the reporters around him. It's his fault, this is all because of him. His incompetence has got Aizawa apologising to the country for no reason.

Shigiraki sighs. "Those things are called Nomu's. I'm sure you've seen them, remember the one with the big red wings who tried to fly off with Karma."

Katsuki freezes. This fucker seems to know exactly what to say to get his attention. "What about it asshole."

The villian leans back in his seat, the cockiness of his expression only growing. "Well that's what Sensei is planning to do with you. That's if you refuse to join." He laughs. "Yes, that's the expression I was looking for." He continues to laugh at Katsuki's expense. "Obviously I'm not trying to pressure you but you don't really have much of a choice."

All of a sudden his chains feel like they're burning him and his skin starts to itch. The place he's in, the people surrounding him, the position he's in, once again it starts to feel unfamiliar. He feels suffocated, robbed of his freedom, and he doesn't know why but memories of that sludge villian start to resurface. He thought he was over that, he had forgotten it had even happened but Shigiraki seems to always find a way to push Katsuki's buttons.

He inhales yet no air seems to make it to his lungs, he inhales again and again, panic only growing. He refuses to have a panic attack infront of damn villians. He refuses! The chains start to feel more like sludge, they seem to crawl up his arms, up his neck, making its way to his mouth. He closes his mouth shut. He can't panic. He won't. He refuses.

"You alright there Bakugo?" He really isn't. "You need some kind of help?"

"Hell no." He does.

"It's ok don't panic too much. Sensei said he's planning on doing the same thing to Karma. Atleast you'll be together right?"

The sludge feels like its spreading. He feels like he sinking, suffocating, dying.

"If you decide to join us I could try talking to Sensei to spare Karma." He crosses his arms. "I don't really like him but I'm willing to do that for you."

He can't breathe. He's Drowning.

"Is he listening to me? Hey Dabi undo his chains. We don't seem very sincere if we're chaining him up do we."

"You only thought to do that three days later." Dabi grumbles under his breath as he does what he's told. He gives Katsuki a concerned look but his gaze is far too distant to realise. Dabi huffs, releasing him from his restraints. "Karma wouldn't exactly like seeing you look all distant like this."

"Stop trying to set him off." Shigiraki scolds despite doing just that this entire time. Katsuki knows Dabi isn't trying to set him off though. He looks up at him, the imaginary sludge dispersing as his arms are set free. He sees the look of concern and pity and he hates it, it makes him feel weak.

He sighs, feeling the pain of his lungs finally taking in air. He waits for Dabi to move back taking another deep breath as he does. He looks at his hands, rolls them around a few times then promptly throws an explosion into the dry lipped motherfucker's face.

He's been wanting to do that for a while now. It felt just as good as he thought it would to shut the fucker up. His creepy hand thing is sent flying to the floor and he looks more pissed than Katsuki had ever seen him. Maybe doing that in a room where he's surrounded by vllians wasn't the best idea.

He doesn't concede though, he simply gets himself into a fighting stance and grins. "I've finally wiped that stupid grin of your face."

Shigiraki trembles in anger opening his mouth to spit out a command but before he can a knock is heard from the door.

"Pizza Delivery!" These idiots seriously ordered pizza right to their base?

A figure smashes through the wall and the room is met with debris for this second time these past few days. Katsuki's eyes widen, instinctively looking for that flash of green. He's met with All Might's familiar face instead. There's a second of brief disappointment but he quickly pushes that aside.

He's saved. The heroes have come to save him. His face falls and his stance relaxes as he fights to hold back tears.

He was so scared.
